SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 14, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A bid for you to step in and take over an incomplete project could prove to be an excellent learning experience that you can take with you when a new opportunity opens up.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for socializing, both with family and with friends. Your aspects also favor developing new relationships, any or all of which might become especially meaningful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your success in handling a recent difficult situation prompts a request to handle another workplace problem. But this is one you should accept only if you get all of the relevant facts.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) New information about a past decision raises some unsettling questions from an old friend. Be prepared to explain your actions fully and, if necessary, to make adjustments.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is not a good time to share personal secrets, even with someone you've known for a long while. What you don't reveal now won't come back to haunt you later.

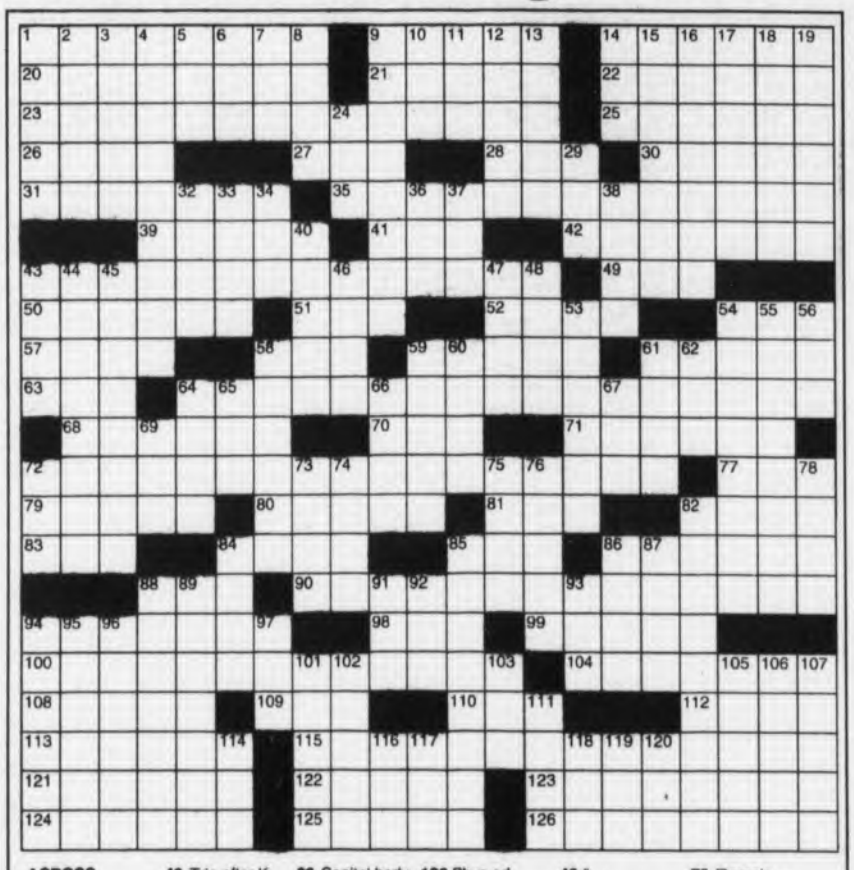
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Pushing yourself to meet a project deadline is admirable. But be careful not to leave out important details in your rush to complete your work and send it off.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Watch that you don't take on more than you can handle when offering to help someone with a personal problem. There might be hidden factors you weren't told about.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That major move you've been considering could come sooner than you expected. Make sure you'll be ready with the facts you need when decision time arrives.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Languishing relationships can benefit from a break in routine. Get out of the rut and do something new and maybe more than a little unpredictable this weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although you don't think of yourself as a role model, your ability to make a tough decision at this time sets an example for others, who admire your courage.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You need to move any remaining obstacles out of your way before you can take on a new challenge. Seek advice from close, trusted friends and associates.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A career change appears increasingly likely to happen during the next several weeks. It's a good idea to start now to prepare, so you can be ready to make the move when the time comes.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a strong sense of obligation to justice, which inspires others to follow your example and do the right thing.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Who should own Minot Light?

Cohasset and Scituate selectmen discuss purchase

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Minot Light is up for grabs.

Its current owner, the General Services Administration (GSA), is looking for a bidder to take over the maintenance of the 115-foot historic structure, which has guarded the rocks near Cohasset Harbor since 1860.

The GSA is a centralized authority for the acquisition and management of federal government resources, including historic properties like lighthouses. The U.S. Coast Guard sought a buyer for Minot Light in 2009. It is once again available to any non-profit, government or local agency for free of charge.

"Government entities have first dibs," Cohasset's Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said during a recent Board of Selectmen discussion on the lighthouse.

The costs of maintenance and upkeep would fall on whichever entity opts to take it over. If there aren't any takers, the lighthouse, which is accessible only by boat and a 30-foot bronze latter, could be sold at public auction.

Minot Light has been a Cohasset icon for over a century and a half. Listed on the National Register of Historic Places, it was rebuilt in granite in 1858-59 out on Minot's ledge after the original lighthouse toppled in a gale.

It was lit in 1860 and about 30 years later, the U.S. Lighthouse Service assigned it the distinctive

Cable board

Seeks members with special skills

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Cable Advisory Committee discussed membership requirements, and what the board is looking for in new members, during a Monday night meeting in the town's TV studio (143TV).

The cable board is unique in Cohasset because it has a dual function: as a cable advisory committee, and as the corporation overseeing Cohasset Community Television (CCTV), planning a yearly budget and paying bills, including contracts with Comcast and Verizon and the salary of the cable studio's director, Don Roine.

"We're a different breed of cattle," Cable chair Pat Martin said. "We're two different committees."

The cable board would like five members but has operated with only three for the past several years, recently adding a fourth.

The board "can't operate with less than three," said Martin.

New member Merle Brown, who was the town's "fastest ever" appointment during the Tuesday, Oct. 1 Board of Selectmen meeting following an email request he sent to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski that night, was appointed as the cable board's secretary on Monday.

The cable board also includes Martin, treasurer Paul Carlson, and Rick Schiffman.

Rob Hillman, an attorney and a scout master along with Brown, served on the board until stepping down last year; Shiffman was appointed following Hillman's departure. The board now utilizes Hillman for legal counsel, since he works for Town Counsel firm Deutsch-Williams.

The board discussed what to do when Carlson's term expires in February. Carlson

Remembering the Logans

Mother and daughter loved life and politics

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Anyone following local politics and political figures likely knows by now that Polly Logan of Cohasset – known as the Grande Dame of the Massachusetts Republican Party – passed away Monday, Sept. 30 at the age of 88.

Extensive news reports have featured reaction from political figures on both sides of the aisle — including Gov. Deval Patrick, a Democrat, and former Gov. William Weld, a Republican — who shared anecdotes about Polly Logan. She loved the limelight and was often the center of attention at political and social gatherings.

But what many people may not realize is that Polly's only daughter – who was also her confidant, ardent supporter and protector, Martha Logan, lost her battle with cancer on Sunday Oct. 6 just two weeks after her mother's death. She was 55.

The lives of both women will be celebrated at 11 a.m. tomorrow (Saturday, Oct. 12) at St. Anthony's Church.

Anne Frances Bleecker, a lawyer and close friend of Martha's since their days at Smith College, put it best.

"Martha was quiet in comparison to Polly," Bleecker said. "But most people are quiet in compar-

RE tax reminder

Real Estate taxes are due Friday, Nov. 1. The bill for these taxes was mailed in June (along with the bill due Aug. 1). This is new. In the past residents would have received bills around now to prompt them to pay their taxes. It is expected several residents who have never been late will miss this due date. So this reminder is to minimize that number as much as possible. It has been and continues to be the policy of the Treasurer/Collector's Office to never forgive interest, unless the officer or its vendor made an mistake.

CABLE

was up for reappointment in August, but was bumped from the board in a shocking vote by the selectmen.

The motion to reappoint Carlson failed, as the vote was 2-2. One of the five selectmen, Steve Gaumer, was absent from that meeting, while selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Karen Quigley voted against Carlson but did not give reasons as to why. Selectmen chair Fred Koed said at the time that selectmen did not have to disclose why they vote for or against a committee reappointment.

Carlson went before the selectmen that night, after they voted against him, to seek a temporary, six-month reappointment. He told the selectmen that while he was one of the cable board's founding members, he doesn't need to serve forever; however, in the meantime, the cable corporation has bills to pay.

Carlson said Monday that once his term is up he may not seek reappointment.

Martin said that finding a new treasurer by February is a challenge.

"Paul's set of accounting skills can't be replaced," she said. "He's our treasurer; he's our accountant. He balances the books, does the payroll, oversees the money going in and out."

Carlson also worked alongside firm Powers & Sullivan during last year's audit of fiscal year 2012 and also helped CCTV get an insurance reimbursement, said Martin.

Brown noted that Carlson is "going to be tough to replace," adding, "We'll have to talk him into staying."

Martin said that she jokingly told the selectmen, "I'm sure people are knocking down the doors to get into the hotbed that is the Cohasset community television board."

The chair said that she went before the selectmen two weeks ago to discuss CCTV board membership, and also to vouch for Carlson's skills.

"I told them we couldn't function without Paul," said Martin.

The selectmen asked Martin to put her thoughts in writing concerning cable board membership. The chair polled the rest of her board on what they're looking for in potential new members.

"It would be helpful to flesh out what else we're looking for," Martin said.

With the absence of Hillman, someone with a legal background, particularly concerning communications, would be helpful, said Carlson. "Someone with a specialty, who works with cable companies, things like that," he said. "It would be very useful to have someone with a legal background in communications law... We could get into issues with liable and so forth. Hopefully we stay away from that, but you can't help what somebody says when they're freewheeling on TV."

Martin noted that her background is in human resources and program development, which was useful when the corporation was first "getting things up and running."

Shiffman works with cable companies and has a grasp of new technologies that could affect the TV station down the road, while Brown brings experience from being on several town boards over the years. He also works with the town's Emergency Management Team, which Martin said makes him a good fit for the cable board, since 143TV has partnered with emergency management to broadcast urgent information to residents.

Roine said that he hopes the board can attract an individual with a broadcasting or technical background, which would be "extremely helpful" with emerging technologies such as wireless.

The cable board is trying to get on the agenda for the next BOS meeting (Tuesday, Oct. 15) to have the selectmen vote on their budget, and also to discuss the membership issue.

The selectmen oversee and approve the cable board's budget each year. The budget is separate from the town's and since it is a nonprofit, no town monies are expended.

The 143TV cable studio exists not for profit but community service. And while the studio is a community resource, it's also its own corporation. The studio costs are paid for by a surcharge on viewers' cable bills.

The cable board will also convene its annual meeting next Tuesday, meeting at 6:45 p.m. (ahead of the 7 p.m. selectmen meeting) in the vestibule of Town Hall, down the hall from the selectmen's office.

Peabody man charged with OUI

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 30-year-old Peabody man is facing a drunken driving charge after he stopped his car in the middle of North Main Street right next to a police cruiser near the Community Center at around 7:23 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 6).

The officer in the cruiser that was on the side of the road reported that a 1999 Hyundai Elantra had parked behind him and then crept up beside the police car, stopping in the middle of the road. The officer signaled for the driver to move ahead but he just sat there, police said.

The officer waited about two minutes and then approached the Hyundai. The officer could smell alcohol on the breath of the operator, identified as Dinesh K. Prashar, 30, of 201 Newbury St., Peabody. Police said Prashar's eyes were glassy and bloodshot and his speech was incoherent. He did not seem to know where he was.

After a series of field sobriety tests, Prashar was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol; negligent operation of a motor vehicle and operating a motor vehicle with an expired registration. His car was towed.

MVC

An accident involving two pickup trucks occurred around 9:05 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 30) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Tedeschi Plaza. Police said both vehicles were headed south (toward Scituate) when the vehicle in the passing lane, a 2012 GMC pickup, operated by a 56-year-old Scituate man, collided with a 2003 Ford pickup after cutting in front of the Ford that was in the travel lane. The Ford was operated by a 37-year-old Cohasset man. Neither truck was towed and there were no reported injuries. The driver of the GMC pickup was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes, police said.

MVC

At 3:14 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 30), police responded to a single-car accident on Atlantic Avenue near Hobart Lane. The operator, a 29-year-old Marshfield woman, was headed north on Atlantic (toward Sandy Beach) when she lost control of her 2002 Honda sedan, veered off the side of the road and into a utility pole. There was heavy damage to the front of the car and to the undercarriage. The Marshfield woman was transported to the hospital with minor injuries.

Police said the motorist had called AAA for assistance but AAA notified police because it was a car accident.

She was issued a citation for failure to drive in marked lanes and for driving to endanger. Her car was towed.

MVC

Police responded to a single car crash at 8:04 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 6) on Beechwood Street. Police said a 37-year-old Cohasset woman in a 2012 Toyota Prius was traveling east toward Route 3A when she left the road hitting a mailbox, tree and a second tree. There was heavy front-end damage to the car, police said. The driver was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. Her car was towed from the scene and she was cited for speeding, police said.

Expired registration

Police had a 2008 Nissan Titan pickup truck towed last Tuesday (Oct. 1) following a traffic stop at the 200 block of Beechwood Street because the registration had expired. An officer on traffic patrol spotted the vehicle that was operated by a 47-year-old Cohasset man. The registration came back as non-renewable so the owner has to clear up either parking tickets or unpaid excise taxes to be able to register the vehicle.

Well being check

Police did a well being check on a motorcyclist who had stopped at Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road last Wednesday (Oct. 2) around 11:11 a.m. A caller reported that the man looked as though he had passed out or was sick. As it turned out the motorcyclist had bent his head down and was using his cell phone, police said.

Wallet found

A 41-year-old Cohasset woman went to the station last Thursday (Oct. 3) to report that someone had taken her wallet out of her car while she was at the library. As police were preparing the report, the woman, who had gone home, called to say she had found the wallet at her house. She thought she had left it on the front seat of her car but that turned out not to be the case.

Rings taken

A 56-year-old Pond Street woman reported to police last week that two rings valued at a total of about $8,000 had been stolen. She reported that the only stranger that had recently been in her house was a contractor from western Massachusetts who was replacing windows. Because of the value of the jewelry, the matter was turned over to Cohasset detectives who are investigating.

Car damage

A 61-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Saturday (Oct. 5) around 11 a.m. that someone had hit her parked car while she was shopping at a business off Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). The officer viewed the surveillance video at the business that showed the damage to the passenger side already existed when the woman pulled in.

Police said she likely did not notice the damage until she exited the shop and had a clear view of the passenger side of her car. It is not clear where the damage occurred, police said.

A check on the woman's license plate showed the registration had expired but that matter was cleared up right away online, police said.

Parking lot

Police responded to a two-car accident in the Starbuck's parking lot on Sunday morning (Oct. 6) around 8:11 a.m. Police said a 2005 VW Passat, operated by a 58-year-old Cohasset man, was backing out of a space at Starbuck's when it backed into the driver's side of a 2013 BMW SUV, operated by a 40-year-old Cohasset woman. Both vehicles had minor damage and were drivable, police said.

Threats

A 52-year-old Cohasset man, who is an attorney, reported to police on Saturday (Oct. 5) that a former client, who is 22 and from Teaticket, Mass. (near Falmouth) had called and threatened his life. The former client is being summoned to Quincy District Court for threats to kill, police said.

Suspicious man

A 39-year-old Hull woman notified Cohasset police on Sunday (Oct. 6) that when she goes for walks the same man cruises by her. She reported the suspicious activity to Hull police who are looking into it. She wanted to make Cohasset police aware because she walks in both towns.

Courtesy booking

Scituate police issued a BOLO (Be on the Lookout) for a 62-year-old homeless man who had been accused of violating a restraining order with his estranged wife in Scituate last week.

Police said the man had been living in his car in the parking lot at Tedeschi Plaza; Cohasset booked him at the station and Scituate police picked him up.

SENIOR CENTER

Land transfer, easement OK'ed

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to approve a land transfer and easement for the Cohasset Swimming and Recreation Trust (CSRT) during their Tuesday, Oct. 1 meeting. The CSRT will then give that land (located off N. Main and Sohier streets, known as parcels 1, 12 and 13) to the Cohasset Social Service League for the building of a town Senior Center.

The land transfer has been four decades in the making, originally authorized by the 1974 Annual Town Meeting (ATM).

Senior Center Planning Committee member Glenn Pratt said the actual transfer had yet to take place. "The transfer was never recorded and the CRST has operated for 40 years with a non-conforming lot."

The 2012 annual Town Meeting authorized the land transfer as well as an easement over part of the Cohasset Little League's driveway/parking lot. The CRST has an arrangement with the Little League to connect to their well water, which helps reduce costs of the pool water operations.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby summarized, "This was voted on by Town Meeting; we're just completing the action."

The selectmen voted 5-0 to approve both the land transfer and easement.

Fall flu clinic is scheduled

The second Cohasset flu clinic, sponsored by the Cohasset Board of Health, will take place in the Town Hall auditorium from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Oct. 19. There is no cost to use this service. The clinic si open to any Cohasset resident older than age 9. Participants are asked to bring all health insurance cards and to wear a short-sleeved shirt.

Mary Goodwin, Cohasset's public health nurse, will administer the vaccine in the home of any elderly resident who is unable to attend a clinic. She can be reached at 781-383-2210, ext. 130.

ATLANTIC SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

New director shares her vision

Plans to grow ASO audience

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Mariner

The Atlantic Symphony Orchestra will open this year's concert season this next Saturday, Oct. 12, at 7:30 p.m. at Thayer Academy's Center for the Arts. Like all beginnings, it holds the promise of the new and the different, and there are new and different things happening in the ASO.

Chief among them is the hiring this past June of Diane Kennedy as executive director. The orchestra has been without a regular director since the orchestra's volunteer managing director retired after 15 years a few years ago. She has now decided to come back as the part-time director of development, but that still leaves the orchestra's day-to-day management activities as well as its other big goal — to grow its audience. An orchestra, like the proverbial tree falling in the wilderness, makes little music unless people come and hear it.

"The board finally came to the decision that the orchestra needed a full-time director to bring it to the next level of audience growth," Kennedy said.

Kennedy, a Cohasset resident and selectman, brings with her a wealth of experience with both the South Shore and the non-profit arts world. Her most recent two jobs were with the Hingham Community Center as its executive director and the Cohasset South Shore Art Center, where she was the assistant director for almost seven years.

She is thrilled with her new position because she really likes what the symphony has to offer. "It's unusual in this day and age to have a symphony orchestra offering what they do in this suburban environment. The musicians are young, which is different from a community orchestra. They add an energy and dynamism to the performances." She mentioned that many of the orchestra members are also first-call substitutes for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. "Some guy commented on Facebook that he can't believe this is in our backyard. I agree."

Kennedy's plan to grow the ASO's audience involves highlighting and building on the strengths the ASO has already. "I'm being careful not to take over, but to pay homage to our current audience and yet move us forward," she said. "It will bear fruit maybe next season. That's what I get excited about."

She spoke of the warmth of all the people involved in putting on a concert, from the musicians to the volunteers who handle ticketing, ushering, decorations, and other front-of-house duties. These volunteers, who as a group call themselves "Fanfare," are the heart of the home touch. "They make food for the musicians," Kennedy said. "On a performance day, the musicians could be coming from school or another gig or another rehearsal. But the Fanfare coordinator has had six casseroles, seven or more salads, and anything else dropped off so the musicians will have a hot meal on the day of the concert."

The musicians give that warmth back to the audience. "The musicians try very hard to put a personal touch on the performances," she said. They hold receptions with refreshments after concerts and mix with audience members.

Jin Kim, the ASO's musical director, put it this way, "My goal has always been to break down that invisible glass barrier between audience and orchestra. They play like they're in someone's living room."

"It's unusual in this day and age to have a symphony orchestra offering what they do in this suburban environment."
Diane Kennedy, ASO executive director

Kennedy wants to build on the programs and goals Kim has begun. "He has been the rudder, the steady hand, for 17 years," Kennedy said. "I can't imagine what it would be like if he weren't there."

Kim has begun fostering that sense of greater interaction and interest to audiences in a variety of ways. He started folding the customary pre-concert talk into the concert itself. When the orchestra played Beethoven's Seventh Symphony last year, Kim asked the orchestra to play snippets of the rest of Beethoven's symphonies, so the audience could see where the seventh one fit in with the others.

"Where else do you get to see all nine symphonies played by a live orchestra in one concert?" he asked. "This is exactly how I got hooked into music."

Other programs that Kim started last year and that Kennedy is looking forward to expanding include Discovery concerts and involving students in various productions. "Discovery concerts are highly interactive, and we tailor them to the community," Kim said. Although Kim has brought the ASO to Hingham many times, this year's Discovery concert will take place in Norwell in February. Kim mentioned he plans to involve not only high school musicians from band, orchestra, and choral arts, but also fine arts students.

In other similar concerts, Kennedy said, high school musicians have let audience members try their instruments to show that it's not that easy to play a trombone, for example, as you might think — even if you already play another wind instrument.

Student choral singers from Braintree High School will be actively involved in the ASO's holiday production of "The Messiah". Last year student choruses from Braintree, Hingham, Milton, and Scituate participated, but the concert was held in Boston. This year the concert, like the opening concert, will be at Thayer Academy. "We're bringing the orchestra to your doorstep," Kim said.

"Getting more people to come doesn't mean you move around," Kim said, "but to give people options, things that are different."

Both he and Kennedy spoke glowingly of the guest solo pianist who will perform with the ASO this Saturday, Misha Namirovsky. "We get lucky to find soloists who are just on the cusp of being really big," Kim said. Namirovsky was a semi-finalist at the 2013 World Piano Competition. Namirovsky will play Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 4, in a program that also includes works by Webern and Dvorak.

"If an organization strays from its mission, it gets into trouble," Kennedy said. "So this has been an easy transition for me because the orchestra is so steady. They're doing amazing things."

Medical marijuana centers in Cohasset?

Planning Board to draft zoning bylaw

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A medical marijuana dispensary could be on its way to Cohasset sometime next year — albeit highly restricted.

The Planning Board met Wednesday, Oct. 9 to discuss the town's moratorium on medical marijuana dispensaries, which was placed by the April 2013 Town Meeting but expires next spring.

By then, the town will be required by the state to address dispensaries — whether by coming up with a zoning bylaw, or by doing nothing and letting the state take the lead.

If towns do nothing, Town Counsel Richard Hucksam warned, then they will have no control over where a dispensary will be located (although state law does have some restrictions, such as a dispensary must be at least 500 feet away from a school or other place where children congregate).

It is better for the Planning Board to come up with a restrictive bylaw and have a say in where, if anywhere, a dispensary could exist in town, Hucksam advised the planners.

"If you don't determine specifically where it can be, the argument is it can be anywhere," said Hucksam. "If you don't have a bylaw, it could be anywhere in town."

Municipalities across the state have been tackling this issue since medical marijuana was legalized through Ballot Question 3 in the November 2012 election. According to officials, 63 percent of Cohasset voters were in favor of the legislation, which allows those with certain medical conditions to partake of pot — with a doctor's prescription.

Those who meet the criteria can obtain marijuana from state-regulated distribution centers or, in the case of a proven hardship, grow a 60-day supply at home.

The measure also eliminates criminal penalties for medical use of marijuana, although smoking pot is still against federal law.

However, the one thing Cohasset can't do is outlaw medical marijuana, which is now protected by state law.

If the town does not "make a provision" for it, said Hucksam, "you run up against the Attorney General's office. You can't ban it."

Planning Board chairman Stuart Ivimey said that while the town probably shouldn't "go toe to toe with the Attorney General," one could "argue this is illegal activity under federal law."

Ivimey cautioned against Cohasset fighting the issue all the way to Supreme Court.

"I don't think there's any upside for the town to fight this fight," said Ivimey. "I still have a problem intellectually with this... But I don't see the town being the tip of this spear."

"If you don't determine specifically where it can be, the argument is it can be anywhere. If you don't have a bylaw, it could be anywhere in town."
Town Counsel Richard Hucksam

The other board members agreed that Cohasset should allow the dispensaries, but come up with ways to restrict them that don't conflict with the new state law.

Hucksam clarified that "nothing in the [state] law requires the violation of federal law." Theoretically, the attorney added, "Someone could go through the whole [permitting] process, and the next day the FBI could come and shut them down."

Planning Board member David Drinan said, "The belief is the federal government has indicated they won't do that."

Medical marijuana centers could be likened to adult entertainment zones, said Hucksam, which are constitutionally protected as "free speech." The dispensaries could also be zoned in an overlay district with the same restrictions placed upon liquor stores.

The discussion seemed to link medical marijuana more with entertainment and recreational use rather than medical; board member Clark Brewer pointed out that zoning a dispensary near doctor's offices (although far away from pediatricians) made more sense than zoning it like a liquor store.

"The supposed relationship is with people with medical issues," said Brewer.

The board discussed where a dispensary might make sense in Cohasset, immediately ruling out the village. The business and technology districts along Route 3A made more sense, however at a "site off the beaten path, not in the CVS or Stop and Shop Plaza," said Ivimey.

The planners were in favor of crafting a bylaw containing "common sense restrictions" to present to the spring 2014 Town Meeting. Hucksam was asked to draft a bylaw and bring it back to the board at an upcoming meeting.

Board member Charles Samuelson said the town should take some kind of stance on the issue. "I'm not sure we want to be passive-aggressive on this."

Meanwhile, in Norwell

One of Cohasset's neighbors was brought up during the Planning Board discussion. The town of Norwell has indicated that dispensaries will be welcome there; its town officials are seeing dollar signs for allowing a distribution center in town.

According to the State House News Service, 115 communities, including Cohasset, passed temporary moratoriums restricting medical marijuana dispensaries. Norwell, however, was one of the first towns to approve medical marijuana zoning in May.

Although the dispensaries will operate as non-profit entities, Norwell officials think the town will get revenue from permitting fees to open a center.

According to reports, Norwell Town Administrator Jim Boudreau said at a recent Norwell selectmen's meeting that he has met with at least four companies that are interested in having a dispensary or manufacturing facility in Norwell.

Cohasset planner Michael Dickey said that Norwell seems "eager to do this."

Brewer said that he thinks Cohasset would have less luck luring a big distribution center to town, and therefore wouldn't earn much by way of permitting fees. There is no "market value" in Cohasset, Brewer argued. "We're never going to get big box stores."

The planners seemed to agree that Cohasset could let Norwell take the lead.

"We're not the pioneers on this," said Brewer.

Medical Marijuana: What the legislation allows

- Who qualifies: Only those with debilitating medical conditions may apply for medical marijuana prescriptions. These include cancer, glaucoma, HIV, AIDS, hepatitis C, ALS, Crohn's disease, Parkinson's disease, and multiple sclerosis.
- Dispensaries: During the first year of the new law, the state will certify up to 35 nonprofit medical marijuana treatment centers; at least one in each county; no more than five in any one county.
- Home gardens: Those with hardships may qualify to cultivate marijuana in a private locked and enclosed facility; they will be allowed to grow a 60-day supply at a time, which is identified as how much marijuana the patient is "reasonably expected to need" for medical use.

This is one trip that you won't want to miss!

UMass-Amherst

Cohasset resident, Caitlin Tulio, a junior in the animal science program at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, recently participated with select members of the UMass Equestrian team in the 2013-2014 pre-season Tournament of Champions in Virginia on Sept. 21. It is the first of three invitational tournaments for the top hunt seat teams in the country. Caitlin, the team's treasurer, was the top scorer and overall winner in her division. Congratulations, Caitlin on your accomplishments, your family and friends are so proud of you!

Witches Ball

The South Shore Art Center will hold its third annual "Witches' Ball" celebration on Saturday, Oct. 26 at 7:30 p.m. at the River Club in Scituate and would love to have you there! The event features fabulous food, entertainment, fortune telling, and an auction of art, gifts, services and more! Donations to the auction are still being sought; call the Art Center if you are interested in contributing to the Witches' Auction. Guests are encouraged to dress creatively for the event — perhaps a favorite artist or painting, a witch or warlock, a politician or a construction worker — all are welcome! There will be prizes for the best and most creative costumes. Tickets are $75 for Art Center members and $85 for non-members. Tickets must be purchased in advance. All proceeds support the exhibitions and education programs of South Shore Art Center. To purchase tickets, visit: ssac.org or contact the Art Center at 781-383-2787.

Senior Center

Come and join the Cohasset Elder Affairs for a few upcoming events. The first is a Brown Bag Lunch and Movie. Join them on Monday, Oct 21 for "The Long Walk Home," starring Sissy Spacek and Whoopi Goldberg. When Odessa Cotter honors the 1955 Montgomery bus boycott by walking the nine miles to and from work to her job as a housekeeper, her boss Miriam Thompson offers her a ride, defying her racist husband and the powerful town council. Bring your brown bag lunch. Cohasset Elder Affairs will provide soft drinks and popcorn.

The next is a Safe Driving Seminar on Mon, Oct 28, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sponsored by Sherriff Bellotti's office and AARP, this class will cover defensive driving techniques and how to adjust your driving for age related changes. This is not a driving test! This is a classroom program to help maintain your safety on the road. $5 charge covers the cost of class and materials. Reservations are required, call 781-383-9112.

Woooohhh...the last for this month is a Halloween Lunch on Thursday, Oct 31 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.. Join in for festive activities and a "spooktacular" meal.

All activities take place at Cohasset Elder Affairs at Three North Main Street.

Homework Center

Calling all students! The Homework Center at Paul Pratt Memorial Library has reopened for the school year and will meet every Tuesday from 5:30 to 7 p.m. Students in grades 3 and up are encouraged to come to the library to complete their homework in a supervised setting. Tutoring is available from Cohasset High School National Honor Society students and light refreshments will be provided.

The Homework Center is funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Game Night!

This is a terrific idea! First Parish will host a series of family-oriented activities with dinner under the banner of "Fridays at First Parish" starting Friday, Oct. 18th from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. through May (approximately every 6 weeks, adjusted to accommodate school vacations and holidays) at the Parish House. Activities will be designed to help families get centered after a typically hectic week of work, child care, commuting and after-school sports — and will give parents a "free " night (free of meal preparation, free to do some socializing, and no need for a sitter!)

Members of the First Parish youth group will coordinate Game Night activities — you are encouraged to bring your favorite board game.

Yoga

Here is a great event to take part in if you choose. Balance Studio is hosting Girish for the 3rd time on Oct. 15th from 6:30-8:30 pm. Vinyasa class will be led by Jan Burkhardt as Girish accompanies the practice with his live music. Experience Girish's well known eclectic music through his voice and harmonium as a compliment your yogic experience. His visits have been both inspirational and spiritual. This will sell out so sign up ASAP for $40. To register visit the website at: balancestudiocohasset.com or call the studio 1-339-337-3660 or visit Balance Studio at 15 Depot Court.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

Philip Caputo has made a fine addition to this American genre with his most recent book, "The Longest Road," published last month. COURTESY PHOTO

Season begins with Philip Caputo

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Caputo is an award-winning journalist, co-winner of a Pulitzer Prize, and the author of many works of fiction and nonfiction...

There is something particularly American – and seductive – about road trips. Maybe it's because an open road evokes the rugged individualism and pioneer spirit of our cultural past, as did the classic road narratives "Travels with Charlie" and "Blue Highways."

Pulitzer Prize-winning writer Philip Caputo has made a fine addition to this American genre with his most recent book, "The Longest Road," published last month. Caputo will be the first speaker of this season's Sunday Authortalks – he will talk about his book at 4 p.m., on Oct. 20, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Following his father's death and his own 70th birthday with its attendant ring of mortality, Caputo mapped out the road trip he would take from the southernmost point of the United States, Key West, Fla., to the northernmost, Deadhorse, Alaska.

"I was looking for a reincarnation of myself as I was half a century ago, a college drop out under Kerouac's spell," Caputo writes as part of his reason for the trip. So in 2011, with his wife and two dogs in a classic 14-foot Airstream trailer pulled behind a pick-up truck, he began his journey in search of answers to "what unites and divides a country as diverse as it is vast."

They covered 16,000 miles over a landscape as varied as the characters they interviewed. And they found answers – lots of them, which Caputo weaves throughout this exploration of America's soul.

Caputo is an award-winning journalist, co-winner of a Pulitzer Prize, and the author of many works of fiction and nonfiction, including "A Rumor of War," one of the most highly praised books of the 20th century. His novels include "Acts of Faith," "The Voyage," "Horn of Africa" and his most recent, "Crossers."

A wine and cheese reception will follow Caputo's talk, and Buttonwood Books will have copies of his book available for purchase and signing. Admission is free but seating is limited so come early to ensure a spot.

Sunday Authortalks is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. A Taste for Wine and Spirits donates the wines for post-talk receptions.

For more information on the Sunday Authortalk series, call the library at 383-1348 or visit online cohassetlibrary.org.

LIFE AT CHS

Looking forward to four-day weekend

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

An important part of that college process, the SATs, took place for many seniors and juniors this past Saturday.

One-eighth... 12.5 percent

It's hard to believe it, but this is already how far we have moved through the 2013-2014 school year!

The amount of activity in the first few weeks, between settling in and spirit week, really made the time fly by. With the first progress reports being sent home to students last Friday, the reality of the school year finally sunk in for many, and probably left a student or two scrambling for explanations to dole out to mom and dad. Nonetheless, there is still half of the first quarter remaining; students still have plenty of time to boost their grades and solidify study habits.

As for CHS's elder statesmen, those first quarter grades are all-important with many a senior gearing up to apply for colleges. Early action deadlines are generally Nov. 1, so students have less than a month to get that first batch of applications out. We certainly wish all of them luck, and a prayer for yours truly wouldn't hurt, I suppose!

An important part of that college process, the SATs, took place for many seniors and juniors this past Saturday. Although CHS was not a testing site, students branched out to Scituate and Hingham High schools, as they (not so) eagerly awaited the test. It brings relief to many knowing that the 4-hour long bubble-filling marathon is in their past.

With no school Friday due to a professional day, and a four-day long Columbus Day weekend, students will be allowed a minor respite before plunging into the last seven-eighths of the school year. After the weekend, its school straight through until holiday break.

That's all I have for you for now, but remember to keep the stressed, sometimes college-crazed seniors in your thoughts. Enjoy your holiday, and be sure to keep it classy Cohasset!

Matthew MacCormack is a senior at Cohasset High School; his column runs weekly during the school year.

Cohasset Cabaret 'Curtains Up' is coming!

Cohasset Cabaret "Curtains Up" will be performed Friday, Nov. 8 and Saturday, Nov. 9, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall. Social hour at 7 p.m. will be followed by the show at 8 p.m.

Tickets are on sale now and the cost is $25. Tickets can be purchased at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at the South Shore Community Center or call 781-413-7540 for more information.

People can try their luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "cabaret style." There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks. Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry.

LOGANS

ison to Polly! Martha was a most devoted daughter and helpmate to all of Polly's causes. She always enjoyed politics and the people."

Martha, who lost her beloved brother Malcolm Logan in March 2012, had cared for Polly with the help of Martha's devoted husband Patrick Read in their New Jersey home for the past four years.

In fact just three weeks ago, Martha and Patrick brought Polly back to her Nichols Road home – the site of so many wonderful events over the years – for a special reception in Polly's honor. Dozens of old friends arrived to greet Polly and enjoy lunch. Throughout the afternoon, Martha summoned up the strength to put her own health issues aside to ensure that her mother could enjoy the day.

Over the years, Martha — who had a successful career in finance and banking — seemed to relish the role of being her mother's biggest fan and supporter, albeit mostly behind the scenes.

About 12 years ago, when Polly fended off a challenge to her long-held seat as Republican State Committeewoman for the district – it was Martha who was serving refreshments at Polly's kick-off event.

Both Martha and Polly loved politics and understood politicians no matter what their party affiliation. State Rep. Garrett Bradley, a Democrat, described Polly as always a joy to talk to and a walking history book.

"She had a very charming way about her so much so that when I was done talking with her once on an issue – it took me a minute to realize that she had just told me that I was completely wrong," he recalled.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, a Republican, first met Polly at the Republican National Convention in 1988 in New Orleans when he was the youngest member of the delegation. "I learned a lot from her," he said.

Hedlund noted that Polly supported his Republican opponents in two of his early primaries. However, once the primaries were over – Polly was the first person to call him and offer her assistance.

Bleecker said Martha, who was her first friend at Smith, loved politics as much as her mother.

"When she asked where I was from and I replied 'Charleston, South Carolina' – in disbelief she gasped – 'Seriously?'

"I think I may have been her first Southern friend; she was my first friend in Massachusetts and she was my first Republican friend," Bleecker recalled.

Although Bleecker remained a Democrat and Martha a Republican, they enjoyed a several decades' long friendship and interest in politics.

"It would have been Martha whom I would have called this week to talk about the government shutdown, mostly to complain about those Republicans – I know she would have agreed with me," Bleecker said.

She said messages have flowed in this week from so many of their classmates.

"Martha was adored for all that she did, but most importantly for the person whom she was and the love she shared with all of us," said Bleecker. "She will forever be missed."

Republican Gabriel Gomez, a Cohasset resident who won the South Shore and Cape in his recent bid for the U.S. Senate against statewide winner Democrat Ed Markey, knew Polly well. She supported him during his run for selectman 10 years ago.

"Nobody had more energy and enthusiasm than Polly Logan," Gomez said. "She was an inspiration to all who have ever been involved in politics. She led by example with her relentless advocacy for her candidates and causes. She will be sorely missed, especially in today's hyper-partisan political environment.

"We need more Polly Logans involved in our politics, so we can start making our politics as good as our people," Gomez said.

"We need more Polly Logans involved in our politics, so we can start making our politics as good as our people."
Gabriel Gomez, Highland Avenue

Long-time friend Louis Harvey of King Street said Polly was one for the history books. He said he would remember Polly for her ability to overcome the odds and get things done.

"This is a sad moment not only for Polly's family and legions of friends, but for Cohasset, Massachusetts and the United States of America," Harvey said. "Polly changed all of us for the better and made the world a better place."

GIMME SHELTER

Claudia is an enchanting year-old girl

PAULA J. FATERSIK

You can get lost in the gorgeous green eyes, the exotic face, and this pretty young girl will certainly get your attention in so many ways. Meet Claudia, a year old tiger, with some Bengal in her genes, who has come to the shelter after a wonderful stay with her little litter in one of our foster homes. Her kittens are very lucky and are all in their forever homes. Now, Momma is here in the shelter waiting for her chance to bond in a new home.

Lean, athletic and full of energy, Claudia needs a forever home where she can enjoy being the only pet and have your affection, interactive play and exercise time. Since she has a bit of Bengal in her, she is very agile and loves leaping up on the cat trees and chasing toys. Here at the shelter, she is a little hesitant to play in her room since she is not used to being with other cats. This makes it a bit stressful for her since she is on the look out, but very much wants attention and can be very distracted by her roommates. It is clear that she wants to be with a special person or family where she can be the focus and become their companion. Claudia is friendly and playful and really wants to share that part of her personality.

When she sees you come into the room, Claudia is up and ready to meet and greet, and will follow you to be noticed. Of course, there is competition and she will try very hard to be the only one you see! That's her way of letting you know that she really needs to find her new home soon. It is difficult when a cat is unsettled, arriving in a room full of strange felines where she feels she doesn't fit in. And really, having people spend time with her is what she craves. Rolling over and over in a comfy cat bed to get you to notice her is one of Claudia's ways to draw you in. Rubbing up against your leg, she will circle around, staring up at you and ask for your attention. She is definitely a people cat.

Claudia just needs to know she is loved and cared for. It was easier for her when she was in foster care, and these new surroundings are a little scary for her so we are hoping that the right match is out there for this beauty. She will certainly be attentive to you, trotting beside you and looking up expectantly. If you have space for Claudia to run, jump, chase and play, and a sunny window for her to enjoy and relax in, please come see her soon. Her natural beauty and eagerness to become a part of a loving and welcoming home may draw you in and that will make her world just perfect.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information about Claudia. She needs a welcoming and active forever home so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for their best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events.

We still have kittens in foster who will be coming to the shelter when they are weaned, and beautiful mother cats who will be ready for forever homes. If you are considering adopting a few new family members please call to check on their availability.

Another successful spay day took place last week and thanks to the Animal Rescue League veterinarians, many more unwanted litters will be prevented. We are happy to have the ARL here for the community and other organizations to make use of and help to control the overpopulation of strays and their babies. Altering is the best option for young cats as well as adults so please consider spaying or neutering if you have not already. Innocent cats and kittens should not be faced with the struggle for survival in the coming season of storms and cold weather.

A big thank you to all who are purchasing and ordering the new 2014 Kittendale's calendar. Our recent adopters will notice their new babies in the photos and of course, some are familiar with the fabulous models who give of their time for this effort. It is a busy, project for volunteers Joanne Berman, photographer and Susan B. Davis, production manager. Their work presents a fabulous calendar that will make a great gift in the coming months for all animal lovers! You can order yours at www.kittendales.com, or stop by the shelter to purchase them. This is a fantastic way to support Hull Seaside Animal Rescue and all proceeds go directly to the care of our kittens and cats.

With the holiday season fast approaching, we are thankful for all donations of cleaning supplies, soft bedding, toys, canned food and adult weight control of indoor dry cat food. Every little bit helps our feline residents and your generosity is always appreciated. Come by and visit the shelter to see those you are helping. You might just fall in love with one or more of our patiently waiting animals.

To all of our volunteers, your dedication and endless commitment to HSAR is what keeps things going smoothly. From those who are in the shelter weekly and sometimes daily, to those who provide loving foster homes, work on special projects and provide outreach at community events, it all adds up to love and caring for the felines who find themselves without permanent homes yet. Thank you to all. These kittens and cats need all that you give.

1-4-3 pattern so it could be easily recognized. Over the years, the familiar flashing light has come to mean "I Love You."

The top of the lighthouse was replaced in 1987 and the granite blocks were recycled to construct the Replica, which adorns Government Island, where the lightkeepers once lived.

It technically resides in Scituate waters, but was constructed in Cohasset.

Cohasset historian David Wadsworth joked that the "war will never end" to decide which town can claim the lighthouse as its own.

"It is on the south side of the county line [between Norfolk and Plymouth counties], which puts it in Scituate. But it's closely connected with Cohasset," said Wadsworth, "much more so than Scituate."

Listed on the National Register of Historic Places, it was rebuilt in granite in 1858-59 out on Minot's ledge after the original lighthouse toppled in a gale.

"The stonecutting and assembly was done at Government Island, and most of the workers came from here. Some of the early lighthouse keepers were local men from Cohasset.

"It's always been an important thing," to Cohasset, said Wadsworth. "People in town know a lot about it."

The issue of ownership and maintenance was a discussion topic at two recent Board of Selectmen meetings in both Cohasset and neighboring Scituate.

So far, it seems that neither town's representatives are willing to take ownership — and take on the costs of upkeep.

Municipal insurance company MIIA (Mass. Interlocal Insurance Association) is also unwilling to insure the structure, according to an email thread between Milanoski and Scituate Town Administrator Patricia Vinchesi.

"Because of the age and proximity of the building, MIIA cannot provide Property Coverage on the light house," a MIIA representative wrote in a Sept. 30 email to Vinchesi.

MIIA would only provide $100,000 general liability coverage, the rep said.

Milanoski responded in an Oct. 3 email to Vinchesi that since Cohasset's selectmen did not indicate a desire to take over ownership and maintenance of Minot Light, and knowing that MIIA would not insure the property and only provide $100,000 in liability coverage, "I concur with you and would not recommend that the town acquires the property especially knowing that whomever does acquire the lighthouse will have to maintain it as an historic structure that both towns would benefit from as we currently do now."

Cohasset selectmen previously discussed the sale of Minot Light during their Tuesday, Sept. 17 board meeting. Milanoski brought up the sale and discussed how Cohasset could proceed.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said of the lighthouse, "It's iconic to both ourselves and Scituate. Symbolically, it's the ultimate public good" to maintain a historic structure, said Koed, asking his fellow board members, "Is it something we feel collectively as community we should maintain?"

The selectmen mulled over hypothetical possibilities for what the lighthouse could become, jokingly suggesting a Starbucks but acknowledging that a café would not actually work in the structure.

Selectman Steve Gaumer said that while it's just an idea, there is an "interesting opportunity for an embedded cellular tower to potentially resolve the communication issue along the shore."

However, Gaumer added, Cohasset has "no funding structure for this."

Wadsworth said in a phone call Wednesday that the lighthouse is not intended to house a business.

"It wouldn't be a good bed and breakfast," the historian said.

Or a Starbucks?

"It would not be a very good one," Wadsworth joked.

The selectmen said they were content to let Milanoski reach out to Scituate's town manager and see how Scituate would respond first.

While members of the Scituate board of selectmen said they appreciated the historical significance of the Light, the concerns of taking on ownership were financial.

Selectman Tony Vegnani said during the board's Oct. 1 meeting that the decision to take ownership of the Light "is a cost thing."

"We have other building costs in town," he said. "We're really just taking on another piece of property to take care of. God forbid something big happen and it becomes a million dollar expense."

Scituate Town Administrator Vinchesi said she was "very much opposed" to the town acquiring the Light.

"We cannot maintain the buildings we have now," she said.

While it seems that neither Scituate nor Cohasset plan to take on the maintenance of Minot Light anytime soon, it remains a crucial part of both towns' landscapes.

Wadsworth said that whatever happens, he hopes the lighthouse will come into good hands.

"It's an important part of Cohasset history, and is a nationally known lighthouse," the historian said. "I hope whatever occurs, it's good for it. I doubt Scituate or Cohasset have any money to put into it. We'll have to wait and see what happens."

Additional reporting by Scituate Mariner reporter Ruth Thompson.

About Minot Light

Minot Light, which is accessible only by boat and a 30-foot bronze ladder, sits on a 25-foot wide ledge of rock called Minot's Ledge. According to the brief description of the lighthouse provided by the General Services Administration, the ledge is very difficult to land on in moderate or heavy sea conditions.

Minot Light has special significance to both Cohasset and Scituate — the light was built in Cohasset and its lightkeepers lived in Cohasset, but the structure itself is located in Scituate waters. Minot Light is visible from both towns' coasts.

The location of Minot Light makes it fairly unique in that is has no piece of land to call its own. Many of the lighthouses given away that have been located on coastal land or an island have found new life as bed and breakfasts, tourist attractions or dining facilities. The difficulty in accessing Minot Light leaves little possibility of that type of renaissance.

1-4-3 means "I love you"

Minot Light was lit in 1860 and about 30 years later, the U.S. Lighthouse Service assigned it the distinctive 1-4-3 pattern so it could be easily recognized. Over the years, since the 1-4-3 pattern represents the number of letters in "I Love You," Minot Light has earned the nickname of "most romantic lighthouse."

OUR VIEW

Three things to think about

1. Minot Light may actually be in Scituate waters but it is in every way a part of Cohasset. In fact we cannot imagine Cohasset without seeing the iconic Minot Light off in the distance. Therefore, the future of the old lighthouse is of great concern. Towns, as a rule, don't make good landlords – but could something be worked out with the Coast Guard to ensure the survival of the lighthouse? (In Scituate, a town official mentioned the lighthouse could be replaced with a navigational buoy).

2. Should the town consider reducing the 1.5 percent Community Preservation Act surcharge to 1 percent? The average single family home in Cohasset is valued at $858,000, so the 1.5 percent CPA surcharge for that house is $139 for fiscal 2013. At 1 percent, the CPA surcharge would be $92 for the year, a saving of $47. The formula is Assessment less $100,000 X tax rate X CPA percentage.

What do you think? The Community Preservation Committee would like some community input both on the surcharge as well as proposals for future projects.

3. Do selectmen need to set a clear policy on volunteers serving on more than one appointed board or committee at the same time? We think so. At present, the only town board that has a restriction in that members can only serve there is the Advisory Committee. Recently, selectmen rejected the appointment of Jack Creighton, who serves on the Conservation Commission, to the Governance Committee. Yet just a week later, they approved Merle Brown's appointment to the Cable Advisory Committee even though Brown is on the Governance Committee.

During discussion of Creighton's appointment, selectmen Fred Koed and Karen Quigley expressed great concern that there were too many of the same people serving on different boards.

At the time Quigley said: "I am increasingly concerned about the number of interlocking directorships. We have too few people sitting on too many committees consolidating power into too few hands."

Koed said there was increasing concern in town that there were a "handful of people holding a lot of very important positions and not spreading the wealth around."

We think both Brown and Creighton are great guys – but to avoid the appearance of politics – perhaps a selectmen's policy is in order.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Selectmen urged to call a Special Town Meeting

I write this letter as a resident of Cohasset, although I have been involved in various organizations in town, the Cohasset Education Foundation, the Budget Planning Group, the Governance Committee as well as the Cohasset School Committee. I wish to recommend to the Board of Selectmen to hold a Special Town Meeting. I have discussed this with all the selectmen as well as the Capital Budget Committee chairman.

After conversations with them it appears there is not a majority of the selectmen in favor of a Special Town Meeting. Currently the town has a budget surplus due to a higher level of state local aid, increased local receipts including excise tax revenue, and higher state aid from Chapter 70 monies. If the surplus is not allocated, it cannot be utilized for capital improvements, technology upgrades, or even potential feasibility studies such as architectural and engineering overviews for renovation projects in town. One existing example is renovation or reconstruction of the town hall and the current municipal town building, which will need architectural and or engineering evaluation of options long before any improvement project commences.

The Capital Stabilization Fund is where the town is able to place needed monies for infrastructure improvement, capital endeavors and unforeseen expenses. Having a reasonable portion of the surplus allocated to this account will give flexibility to the town and Board of Selectmen along with the Capital Budget Committee to fund planning of and capital projects prior to the annual Town Meeting. It would be fiscally prudent to fund the Capital Stabilization Fund and allow the town to go forward with preparing for current growth, technology upgrades and feasibility studies of necessary capital planning for the town. The simplest means to accomplish this is the Board of Selectmen calls for a fall Special Town Meeting to prevent a delay in facing the obvious challenges due to the growth of the town.

Response to items in DeCaprio commentary

I would like to respond to a couple of items that were raised by Peter DeCaprio in his recent commentary in the Cohasset Mariner in the Oct. 4th edition.

Regarding the question of a donation from the Red Lion Inn, I received an email from Tanna Kasperowicz saying that Gerd Ordelheide would like to send a "big check" to my campaign on March 26th asking if I would accept it. My response on the 27th, a copy of which I have given to the Editor of the Mariner was as follows:

"While I appreciate Gerd's offer, I feel it could give the impression of a conflict/ethics issue. The Red Lion very likely could appear before the BoS in the next few years. Issues such as a change in managers, liquor license issues, noise complaints, and expansion plans could come before the board, and I feel that my accepting a contribution could be seen by some as either an ethics issue, conflict of interest, or both. I do and would appreciate Gerd's support, but I would not be comfortable accepting a check to my campaign should I be elected to the BoS. Thanks, Russ."

Peter DeCaprio also points to an email from Mike Coughlin to Peter Pratt about Bill Burnett having received an endorsement from Scott Brown. I was in the chain of people who received an email from Peter Pratt. In the email Peter Pratt suggested not to call attention to the endorsement.

Most campaigns I've worked with have never made a point of publicizing their opponent's endorsements. The endorsement had already been posted to Bill's Facebook page at the time of the email I believe. It seems to me that the horse was well out of the barn on that one being made public as far as I was concerned. There was no effort on my part to draw/not draw attention to the endorsement. You'll have to ask others what they did or did not do regarding these situations.

Just a brief note in closing: As you probably know, Polly Logan passed away recently, as sadly so did her daughter Martha. To say that Polly was a human dynamo is an understatement. I had the pleasure of getting to know her, and work with her on a few campaigns. Polly had the right mind frame when it came to politics. That was that it should be fun, this is not to say that she didn't care whether she won or lost, but that winning or losing wasn't the end of the world. What was important was to give it your best, let the chips fall where they will, and not take it personally. We won't see the likes of her style again, though that style is what the body politic in Cohasset so sorely needs right now.

Tourist alert: While browsing for bargains, beware of bandits

MARY KENNEDY

And the rest, as they say, is history. In a flash both bags are gone, snatched by a third thief, who's racing up the street.

This is a firsthand account of how my husband Don and I were bested by brigands in Buenos Aires several years ago. The Argentina capital is only one tourist destination where this clever scam often succeeds with unsuspecting tourists. Major cities in Western Europe are also especially popular areas for variations on the "mustard maneuver."

On that sunny afternoon, strolling along the busy Avenida 9 de Julio, we "meet" a slim young lady in jeans, cloth bag on shoulder. Smiling, she asks in Spanish if we're looking for some place special. (Diversion).

As we walk, chatting about cafes and shoe sales, Don, disinterested, drops behind us, then notices brown streaks on the back of my cotton jacket. Bird poop? Oh, no! (Distraction).

The nice lady in jeans, instantly sympathetic, reaches into her bag for a tissue to wipe off the mess – which, after Don's "sniff" test, is mustard. Mustard? Nice lady apologizes for local locos, crazy kids playing tricks on tourists, and steers us across the street to a water fountain outside a closed movie theater. Thrusting her cloth bag at me to hold, she begins wiping away.

A pleasant-faced young man, ambling by, stops to ask curiously, "What's the matter?" Nice lady explains about crazy kids and then the nice man notices mustard on the back of Don's slacks. Visualize the scene: Four of us are discussing mustard, and I'm holding both bags, and she's wiping

COLLEGE CONNECTION

Finding balance in the college application season

STEPHANIE SEARS

Get at least seven to eight hours of sleep every night. Eat breakfast. Listen to and take care of your body. Carve out time for activities that allow you to relax.

There is no doubt that the senior year of high school is an incredibly busy one, full of challenging courses and extensive activities. Navigating the college process can take as much time, if not more, than a class or sport (with more far-reaching consequences than either, as young people map out the next stage of their lives).

Addressing the Emotional Needs of College Applicants was the theme of my presentation last year at the Council of International Schools' annual conference in Monaco, and is a subject too often overlooked. Many adults forget about what a rollercoaster a senior's year can be, filled with gigantic extremes of excitement, disappointment, anxiety and relief. In addressing this wild emotional ride with young people over the past several years, here is a short list of what I commonly talk to them about on how not only to survive this first semester, but thrive.

Rely on your support system. Turn to your parents for advice and making decisions. Be nice to them. (They might not show it but getting ready to see you go off is not always easy.) Many of your friends are facing the same pressures, so lean on each other and be mutually resourceful.

Learn to say no to some offers. There is not enough time in the day to do everything. Realize what is truly important and then do it well. (Obviously, college applications should be high on your list.)

Set up a calendar on your phone or print one out. List all of your deadlines and set alarms. Give yourself a buffer zone and set application deadlines two weeks earlier.

Get at least seven to eight hours of sleep every night. Eat breakfast. Listen to and take care of your body. Carve out time for activities that allow you to relax. If you are asking yourself if these seemingly small things make a difference, try them for one week and then let me know.

Make the college process part of your schedule, just like going to class or practice. Set blocks of time aside to accomplish things on your list. If the idea of a list overwhelms you, here are a few things to think about over the next few weeks (if you haven't already):

• You have a solid and realistic list of colleges that you feel are a good fit for you. Remember what I said in my last column – "love all of the colleges to which you are applying."

• You have at least started the applications or the Common Application.

• You have personally asked for one or two letters of recommendation from teachers who know your work and can speak about your character.

• You have some thoughts about an essay. Remember that with many selective colleges, there are multiple supplemental essays, so it is worth familiarizing yourself with those as well.

Over the next month I will be writing about composing a strong essay, avoiding common application mistakes and how to put your best self forward. But until then, enjoy the moment and keep up the good work. Remember that while this process can be stressful, it is also an exciting time to discover who you are and plan for your future.

A break from politics and revenge for a little sports

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

For the first time in four years, playoff baseball has returned to Fenway Park and I for one could not be happier.

As the old saying goes, the three most favorite things in Boston are sports, politics and revenge. Given the myriad of stories and extremely well written op-eds in the Mariner, it appears that Cohasset has politics and revenge pretty well in hand so I thought I'd take a few minutes to share an article about sports, namely baseball.

There are so many things to love about autumn and the baseball playoffs are firmly on that list. For the first time in four years, playoff baseball has returned to Fenway Park and I for one could not be happier.

Last Friday I had the privilege of taking my son and my father to Game 1 of the American League Division Series. Three generations at Fenway enjoying the Sox win a fall afternoon playoff game; honestly it doesn't get much better. As I watched them split a bag of peanuts, I reflected on some of the amazing and some not so amazing moments that I have had at Fenway over the years and there have been a lot of them.

Playoff inspired and by way of my awkward ability to recall minute details of past events (along with a little help from baseball-reference.com) I share with you a chronological look at some of my more memorable moments at Fenway.

• June 5, 1976 – My first game and I was in third grade. My father took me and my brother to see the Sox play the California Angels. Like walking up the ramps at the old Boston Garden, one never forgets walking up from the concourse and seeing the field for the first time.

• Aug. 13, 1983 – A double header between the Sox and the Royals and I was in eighth grade. My friends and I took the T into the game by ourselves. Along the way I lost the tickets, talked our way into the park and caught a foul ball that Carl Yastrzemski hit off of Gaylord Perry. We didn't last the full double header and I'm pretty sure I lost the ball a few days later in a pick-up game.

• Oct. 2, 1983 – Yaz's last game. I bought these seats with my own money the day tickets went on sale. It ended up not only being Yastrzemski's last game but my grandfather's as well. This fall the Red Sox unveiled a stature honoring Yaz's last at bat. The memories of my grandfather will always be with that statue.

• July 11, 1986 – Reggie Jackson wins me over. With Tom Seaver on the mound, the Sox were playing the Angels and despite my best efforts, Reggie Jackson had a game to remember. Sitting front row, my friend and I booed Reggie unmercifully (but respectfully) in his first three at bats, which resulted in two homeruns and a single off the top of the wall. In his fourth at bat we cheered him, apologizing for everything we had said; he promptly struck out and smiled at us on the way back to the dugout.

• Oct. 21, 1986 – The first World Series game at Fenway Park in 11 years. The Red Sox up two games to none over the Mets and Oil Can Boyd was on the mound. My grandfather pulled a few strings and my brother and I benefited – the electricity from the crowd was unlike anything I had ever experienced, too bad Oil Can wasn't up to the challenge.

• Summer 1989 – I took courses at Boston University in the morning and worked at the radio station WBCN in the afternoon. BCN was on Boylston Street behind Fenway, so I'd park there and walk up Yawkey Way to get to class. Soon I became friendly with the gentleman watching the loading gate and each morning he'd let me go into the park by myself; sunrise over an empty stadium, breathtaking.

• April 20, 1993/April 15, 2013 – Going to the Marathon Game each year has become a quasi-tradition since the early '90s. The game starts at 11 giving us time watch the Sox and then go cheer on the runners; sometimes it has involved a few too many libations. Sadly the two most impactful memories from these games involved the Branch Davidian fire in Waco, Texas, and last year's marathon bombing.

• Oct. 16, 1999 – It was the last game of the 20th century at Fenway, the American League Championship Series, Red Sox vs. the Yankees. Pedro ends up crushing Clemens and my Dad and I were in rare form. By the seventh inning we had traded our front row bleacher seats for two seats at the Golden Temple in Brookline. Sorry Feng Shui, nothing tops the Temple.

• May 7, 2004 – What may seem like a meaningless game against the Royals was the first game I took my son to; perhaps the best three innings ever.

• Oct. 18, 2004 – The game after the steal, down 3 games to 1 to the Yankees, the Sox won it in the 14th. My Dad and I left in the eighth, we had to I was jinxing them. If you have to ask, you don't understand.

• Oct. 24, 2004 – Went with my wife to Game 2 of the World Series against the Cardinals. A cold raw night, Curt Schilling's second bloody sock game and by the end of the night the Sox had won six straight post-season games (on the way to eight in a row).

• Oct. 25, 2007 – Another Game 2 of the World Series as Dad and I watch what turns out to be Schilling's last major league start. I loved this night.

• April 22, 2007 – Sunday night down by three to the Yankees and the Sox hit four straight homeruns in a row; Manny Ramirez, Mike Lowell, JD (don't call me Nancy) Drew and Jason Varitek. Quite possibly the most exciting few minutes I've ever seen at a sporting event.

• June 21, 2012 – Memorable doesn't always mean good. Against the Marlins, my son is struck in the head by a foul ball. Miraculously, the brim of his cap takes a direct hit and is crushed; Andrew escapes with a bruised forehead. He ends up with autographed baseballs, I end up with nightmares; a horrible moment.

So concludes this little respite from "As Cohasset Turns." Baseball is truly a game that brings generations together and there's no better place to do so than Fenway. Here's hoping the hometown nine strings together 11 wins this October.

As always, thanks for reading and Go Sox.

FOR THE RECORD

Your call is important to us

GREGORY MATHIS

We spend so much of our time in everyday life leaving voicemail messages or sending email, which hardly gets you a timely response to your question or concern.

Remember the good old days, when you could pick up the phone and talk to a real person on the other end and get an answer to your question or have someone listen to your complaint or problem?

These days, it's rare to get someone to answer the phone, especially since we have the ability to screen calls with caller ID. We spend so much of our time in everyday life leaving voicemail messages or sending email, which hardly gets you a timely response to your question or concern.

That's particularly troublesome in our business because the caller on the other end may have a great tip for a news story or could be trying to inform us about a building engulfed in flames or a bad car accident at a busy intersection.

Often, though, we get calls that have nothing to do with the editorial functions of the newspapers and websites. In this age of specialization, we have many different departments, sometimes in different buildings in different parts of the state that handle the various aspects of our business. Gone are the days you could call the publisher or the editor-in-chief to clear up every issue from home delivery of the newspaper to putting in a classified announcement for your upcoming yard sale.

It's not that we don't want to help, but truthfully we don't know many of the answers to your questions about advertising, circulation, or printing press-related issues.

Our area of expertise is news. We welcome calls about events coming up in the community, a possible news story you'd like to see done, a big fire in the center of town. We even welcome calls pointing out factual errors or typos in stories.

On the other hand...

We can't tell you why you're getting more newsprint on your hands now compared to last year or even last week, although it is a very good question.

We're not exactly sure why you didn't get your newspaper in the mail or why it was thrown in the middle of your driveway and has been run over several times.

We can tell you the sticky ad sometimes on the front page has to go in that spot because the machine in the press room stamps it in that spot automatically, even if it is covering an award-winning photograph.

Unfortunately we can't help you get your yard sale announced (although that season is winding down) or we can't write an obituary, as those areas are now handled through our classified advertising department.

And we would certainly defer to our colleagues in the advertising department regarding questions and concerns about too many inserts or ads in the newspaper or too many annoying ads popping up on the websites. After all, we're a business and those ads and inserts allow us to stay in business.

At any rate, your call is important to us regardless of the issue.

We may not have answers to all of your questions and concerns, but bear with us and we'll do our best to connect you to the people in our company who can help.

Treasurer-Collector earns state certification

Cohasset's new Treasurer-Collector, Paula Linhares, who started working in town last month, was recently designated a Certified Massachusetts Municipal Treasurer by the Massachusetts Collectors and Treasurers Association.

Linhares will be awarded at the Association's Holiday Meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 13 at the Pleasant Valley Country Club in Sutton, Mass.

Certification was achieved by having satisfactorily met the Association's testing requirements, including completion of a four-day course at the Association's Annual School at UMass Amherst.

Courses are taught by senior officials from the state's Department of Revenue (DOR), attorneys, and financial managers who specialize in municipal finance, and also by senior certified treasurers and collectors. Course subjects include municipal finance law, cash management, investing and borrowing techniques, trust funds, municipal accounting, and other courses designed to increase expertise.

Certification is subject to renewal every five years and is dependent on successful participation in the continuing education program conducted by the Association.

TOWN PROJECTS

CPC plans public hearing

Board seeks community input

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Community Preservation Committee will hold its annual public hearing on Monday, Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m.

At the hearing, which is required by statute, the CPC hopes to gather community input on how state Community Preservation Act (CPA) grant monies should be spent. The CPC is considering a possible mid-January deadline for fiscal 2015 grant applications.

CPC chairman Russ Bonetti said that he is not yet sure what kinds of projects will be proposed at the hearing, although he does have a general idea.

The Cohasset Swim Club might have a proposal, said Bonetti. CPC and Planning Board member Clark Brewer also mentioned creating a "pocket park," also called a mini-park, at Smith Place.

CPC member Todd Goff is hoping to get the Cedar Street cemetery included on the National Register of Historic Places, said Bonetti.

"It's in disrepair," the CPC chair explained. "It's got a ton of Revolutionary soldiers in it. It's one of the few 'neighborhood' cemeteries in town."

While CPC members often propose projects, the board also invites members of other boards and organizations to attend the public hearing and propose recreation, open space, affordable housing, and other potential projects.

The CPA is a 12-year-old law that set the stage to increase the amount of historical preservation, open space, affordable housing, recreational facilities, and other community enrichment projects. There are currently 155 communities in Massachusetts that have adopted the CPA.

The CPC is required to set aside 10 percent of its revenues, excluding the state's matching funds, for recreation, open space and affordable housing in particular.

The funds come from a 1.5 percent surcharge on Cohasset property taxes with some level of state match.

A possible reduction in the 1.5 percent surcharge was a discussion point at the Sept. 23 CPC meeting. The board discussed whether the surcharge should be rolled back to 1 percent instead.

CPC members said that they are not ready to officially propose reducing the surcharge without a town-wide effort to see what projects could be funded by CPA grants.

Ultimately, CPC members decided that this is a matter that must be determined by Town Meeting. The CPC has also discussed presenting projects solely at the Annual Town Meeting in the spring, rather than at a Special Town Meeting.

So far, it seems the town of Cohasset might not have a Special Town Meeting this fall, although the matter is still being discussed by the Acting Town Manager, Board of Selectmen, and other town boards.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

CPC revenue

- In fiscal 2013, Cohasset collected $405,000 through its local surcharge.
- The town received $105,300 (or about 26 percent) match through the state's CPA Trust Fund distribution in 2013. If Cohasset reduced its surcharge to 1 percent (it is now 1. 5 percent) the amount the town collected would be $270,000 and the amount of state money would be $70,200
- Through 2012, Cohasset received a total of $3,389,053 through the local surcharge and $2,245,678 from the State's CPA Trust Fund distribution for a total of $5,634,731

Public hearing requirements

The community preservation committee shall study the needs, possibilities and resources of the city or town regarding community preservation. The committee shall consult with existing municipal boards, including the conservation commission, the historical commission, the planning board, the board of park commissioners and the housing authority, or persons acting in those capacities or performing like duties, in conducting such studies.
As part of its study, the committee shall hold one or more public informational hearings on the needs, possibilities and resources of the city or town regarding community preservation possibilities and resources, notice of which shall be posted publicly and published for each of two weeks preceding a hearing in a newspaper of general circulation in the city or town.

Volume 38 · Report No. 40 Sept. 30 - Oct. 4, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on one roll call from the week of September 30 - October 4. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

REGULATE COMPOUNDING PHARMACIES (H 3672)

House 157-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would increase the state's oversight and regulation of compounding pharmacies and the state agencies that regulate them.

The bill comes nearly a year after the State Board of Pharmacy voted to permanently revoke the license of the New England Compounding Center in Framingham, the pharmacy at the center of the 2012 spread of fungal meningitis that infected hundreds of people across the nation and killed 61. Provisions include establishing a specialty license for all in-state and out-of-state sterile compounding pharmacies; mandating unannounced, detailed inspections of all sterile compounding pharmacies; and requiring that the Department of Public Health track all compounded drugs made by state-licensed pharmacies.

Supporters said the bill sets many new standards and requires more transparency from the pharmacies, which will save lives. They argued it will hold pharmacies to high standards in quality control and sterility.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

DISABLED VETS (H 2617, H 3645) - The House gave initial approval to bills that would make more disabled veterans exempt from the auto sales tax and auto excise tax. Current law offers these exemptions to disabled veterans who buy a disabled veterans license plate for their car. These proposals would also offer the exemptions to disabled veterans who qualify for but have not purchased the special plate.

The measures also exempt from the excise tax disabled veterans who lease cars. Current law only provides the exemption for a disabled veteran who buys the car. Supporters said the bill aims to correct that situation by allowing disabled veterans to legally claim the benefits to which they are entitled, whether or not they have acquired the plates.

REQUIRE ALL STATE GOVERNMENT DOCS BE WRITTEN AT THIRD GRADE LEVEL (H 2809) - The Committee on State Administration and Regulatory Oversight held a hearing on a measure that would prohibit documents published by the state from being written in language that exceeds the comprehension level "generally accepted in the public schools as a third-grade level." The measure was filed by private citizen Paul Leary.

The proposal is modeled after the 2010 Plain Writing Act approved by the U.S. House and Senate and signed into law by President Obama. That federal law requires federal agencies to write "clear government communication that the public can understand and use."

Another bill before the committee would exempt all state university employees from parking fees at the school(H 2888).

LICENSE AND REGULATE NATUROPATHIC DOCTORS (H 2003) - The Committee on Public Health held a hearing on a proposal to create a state board to license and regulate naturopathic doctors. The measure requires that these doctors have extensive training in a naturopathic program at an approved naturopathic medical college. The American Association of Naturopathic Physicians defines naturopathic doctors as "primary care and specialty doctors who address the underlying cause of disease through effective, individualized natural therapies that integrate the healing powers of body, mind and spirit."

The Massachusetts Society of Naturopathic Doctors supports the bill and noted on its website, "Licensing would allow ND's to provide the depth of health care that they are trained to give, providing ... better service and more treatment options. Most importantly, it would protect the health care consumer by preventing untrained people from calling themselves naturopathic doctors."

The Massachusetts Medical Society opposed the bill and testified against it at the hearing. It said in a written statement, "Naturopathy is not a branch of medicine, but a hodgepodge of nutritional advice, home remedies, and discredited treatments."

Some supporters of the bill charge the Massachusetts Medical Society has lobbied heavily against it because it is afraid of legitimate competition from naturopathic doctors. The bill actually was approved by the House and Senate last year but the governor never signed it.

Jason Lefferts, Director of Communications for the Governor's Executive Office of Housing and Economic Development, told Beacon Hill Roll Call last year when the bill was vetoed by the governor, "The legislation proposing a Board of Naturopathy called for the Board to be created in the Division of Professional Licensure. However, the makeup of the proposed Board and its functions as outlined ... would be a better fit for the Department of Public Health."

Under state law, the governor could not amend the bill to reflect his changes and send it back to the Legislature for action because the 2012 legislative session had already ended.

The Public Safety Committee's hearing included several controversial bills including:

SEAT BELTS (S 1115) - Makes the seat belt law a "primary enforcement" one allowing police officers to stop and issue $25 tickets to drivers and passengers solely for not wearing their seat belts. Current law is a "secondary enforcement" one that prohibits drivers from being stopped solely for not wearing a seat belt and allows an officer to issue a ticket only if the driver is stopped for another motor vehicle violation or some other offense. The bill also prohibits racial profiling and creates a registry within the Registry of Motor Vehicles to collect data on motor vehicle stops that include information on ethnicity or race of the driver.

Supporters testified that secondary enforcement is not working well and noted Massachusetts ranks low in seat belt usage among the 50 states. They argued primary enforcement would increase seat belt usage, save lives, prevent serious injuries and save millions of dollars in medical and other costs. Some former opponents of the bill say they now support this version because of the racial profiling protection.

Although no opponents testified, they generally say the bill is government intrusion into citizens' private lives and cars. They argue drivers should have the freedom to decide whether they want to wear seat belts. Some say this new power is tantamount to establishing roadblocks and fear that despite the precautions in the new version of the bill, primary enforcement of the seatbelt law would lead to random stops and unfair racial profiling.

COPS' LANGUAGE (H 2284) - Prohibits police, correctional officers, court officers and other law enforcement personnel from using racial slurs, profanity or language that "casts a negative reflection toward an individual's race, color, ethnic origin, religion, economic status or any other category of negative stereotyping." The bill provides that any violation of this prohibition constitute grounds for dismissal of the officer.

OTHER POLICE BILLS - Requires all police Taser guns to also be capable of recording the audio of the Taser incident (H 3315) and all new police officer recruits to complete a training program to help them in their responses to incidents involving people with mental illness or retardation (S 1121).

COMMENTARY

Making the case for a Special Town Meeting

MICHAEL MILANOSKI

Like a work bonus, it should be treated as a one-time event, and put to a one-time use. This prudent action is supported by Cohasset's Financial Management Policies.

The following is a memo to the Board of Selectmen:

Specific Financial Management Policies were adopted by Town Meeting on May 12, 2012. The policy defines how the town is to demonstrate sound financial management, including securing an AAA rating and providing the level of town services the town can afford within our known conservatively projected revenues. The budget process was designed to eliminate the need for a special town meeting (STM) for the purpose of balancing the current year budget.

Town meeting unanimously approved the $48,272,907 budget on April 22, 2013 for FY14. However, our legislators were able to secure an additional $437,275 of net state aid than was projected on July 12, 2013, three months after town meeting adopted its budget. Based on final receipts for FY13 we revised our local receipts for FY14 by $162,725 to $3,452,654, which is still conservatively 12 percent below what was actually collected.

This is a unique opportunity that we have not experienced – having significant extra state revenue that arrived after the budget was approved and was not needed to balance that current budget after the fact. Like a work bonus, it should be treated as a one-time event, and put to a one-time use. This prudent action is supported by Cohasset's Financial Management Policies.

With the additional $600,000 in state revenue and local receipts in FY14, I am recommending these funds be recognized and transferred to the Town's Capital Stabilization Fund and a special town meeting be called before our tax rate is set in December. Without this action, Cohasset will not have access to these funds in FY14. The other option, which I would not recommend to secure these funds in FY15, is to lower local receipts arbitrarily in the amount of state aid received, but again that pushes their availability out for over a year, maybe longer.

By programming these funds to our Capital Stabilization Fund, the Town we will be able to assess all of our capital needs with our new 10-year capital plan. Town Meeting with a two-thirds vote will then be able to allocate these funds in the best interest of the entire town. There are many pending capital projects that need to be addressed including but not limited to the renovation of Town Hall. Further, I have already recommended of the approximate $1,300,000 in FY 13 free cash that it be transferred as follows, per Cohasset's Financial Management Policies: $500,000 to Stabilization, $250,000 to OPEB, $350,000 to Capital Stabilization, and $100,000 each to Facilities and Public Roads Maintenance.

The town will continue to live within the 2.5 percent tax levy we can afford per Cohasset's Financial Management Policies. However, as part of the average tax bill, residents now pay 6.7 percent for excluded debt after recent refinancing that saved $1.3M in debt service. As CFO, I do not foresee the need for the town to borrow beyond our tax levy for the foreseeable future. In other words, there appears to be no identified need for a future override or debt exclusion resulting in your taxes actually being reduced by 6.7 percent as this additional tax disappears over the next 10 years when the debt service is paid.

Michael Milanoski is Cohasset Acting Town Manager.

my jacket, and it's been only about 90 seconds since we first "met." Both shaking their heads sympathetically, she continues wiping while he talks to Don in Spanish (a waste of time).

"Take off your jacket," she urges. "Here, put our bags against the wall." I think quickly: "It's just for an instant – they're both so helpful." (Deception).

And the rest, as they say, is history. In a flash both bags are gone, snatched by a third thief, who's racing up the street. The two nice people melt quickly away. Even if they're both caught, they were only trying to "help." And besides, her bag has been "stolen" too.

The next few hours spent floundering in the local police station were an exercise in farce and futility. The official response to thievery perpetrated upon tourists? Shrugs. A sympathetic cab driver advised us to forget making a report. The revolving door is dizzying in the speed with which it spits out pickpockets. After all, in a few days, tourists go home.

And so it continues:

Just a few months ago, my friends Nancy and Tony experienced a variation on the "mustard maneuver" in Barcelona, Spain. On the busy main avenue Las Ramblas, they paused outside a bank, discussing euros and dollars. Nearby, a casually dressed young man, smoking a cigarette, smiled pleasantly. As they turned to go into the bank, he suddenly said politely, "Excuse me, sir, there's something on the back of your shirt." He looked closer and said with surprise, "It's ketchup!" What? How? Nancy said, "I'll get some paper towels." The young man said, "My friend is inside. Let me help; at least we both can go into the men's bathroom." All three laughed. Once inside the lavatory, as the pleasant young man began vigorously wiping, Tony felt a hand in his pocket. In Spanish (Tony was born in Mexico) he shouted, "That's not your money!" Flustered, the man dropped the paper towel and left swiftly.

Glastonbury Abbey announces the launch of the 15th season of Listening to Other Voices, the abbey's interfaith Lecture Series. This year's theme is Profiles in Spiritual Courage.

The first lecture will take place at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Oct.17, when Dr. James O'Connell, co-founder and current president of the Boston Health Care for the Homeless Program, which serves more than 11,000 patients yearly, will speak. His talk is titled: Reflections from the Street: A Doctor's Struggle to Care for Rough Sleepers in Boston.

An unforeseen twist in the road left O'Connell working in shelters and on the streets of Boston. His plan to become an oncologist was altered when he met a band of nurses who introduced him to the epidemic of homelessness and the health effects of poverty. During the last 28 years, as the founding physician of the Boston Heath Care for the Homeless Program, O'Connell has been on a journey of remarkable success and spectacular failures.

The Albert Schweitzer Humanitarian Award winner for 2012, O'Connell, will share "the tragic, often courageous stories of the individuals he has been privileged to care for" during his medical career of 28 years on the streets of Boston.

The Benedictine Monks of Glastonbury Abbey offer this Listening to Other Voices Lecture Series as part of their ongoing commitment to inter-religious dialogue. Information on the lecture series can be found at http://www.glastonburyabbey.org/interfaith/lecture-schedule.php.

The monthly lectures take place in the Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, 20 Hull St., Hingham, at 7:15 p.m. Seating is limited and on a first-come, first-seated basis. All lectures are free and open to the public, but donations are gratefully accepted. All are welcome!

FIELD HOCKEY

Field hockey already qualified for MIAA Tourney

By Mark Ducharme

Cohasset field hockey coach Laura Guliano has watched her team go through a strong first half of the season.

The Skippers, who are on top of the South Shore League won eight of their first ten games.

They started the second half of the season with a non-league game against undefeated West Bridgewater as well as league games with Norwell and Mashpee.

The West Bridgewater game went very well as Caty Gilman had 3 goals and an assist, Ali Leahy had a goal and an assist and Rosie Cipolla chipped in a goal. Christina Tedeschi, Molly Cunning and Val Farren each had assists.

Norwell wasn't as one sided, but Cohasset came out on the right side of a 2-0 victory.

Gilman and Leahy were the scorers in the game

Cohasset will try to build its teams in the second half of the season and prepare themselves for the tournament.

Skippers offense held in check

By Jay N. Miller

Scrambling out of the gates after losing star running back Matt Kilmain before the start of the season, the Abington High School football team just kept plugging away.

Friday night, the Green Wave put a plug in Cohasset's high-scoring offense, holding the Skippers to a single touchdown until the final seconds en route to a 28-12 victory.

Both teams are 3-1.

"A bunch of guys had to step up," said Abington coach Jim Kelliher. "They realized with no Kilmain, we can't play with 10 guys. Someone has to step up."

Cohasset scored on its first drive, but Abington responded with 21 straight points before halftime.

The Skippers opened with a 7-play, 75-yard scoring drive. Quarterback Chris Haggerty capped it with a 19-yard scoring pass to Terence Doonan for a 6-0 lead.

Abington responded behind the counter play. Shawn Donovan ran it five times in the first half for 107 yards and a touchdown.

Donovan's 25-yard scoring run down the right sideline answered Cohasset's TD. He added the PAT for a 7-6 Abington lead.

Donovan's 54-yard run on a counter brought the ball to Cohasset's 3 on the next drive. Abington was pushed back, but Jason Halpin eventually ran 13 yards over right tackle for a 14-7 lead.

Abington's third scoring drive was set up by Luca Cerasani's fumble recovery at the Green Wave 45.

Seven plays later, Abington quarterback Bryan Dwyer tossed a 40-yard TD pass to senior tight end Jake Quinlan. Donovan's kick gave Abington a 21-6 lead.

Junior James Landers picked off a Haggerty pass near midfield early in the third quarter, and Dwyer hit Donovan with a 40-yard

BOYS SOCCER

Hanging tough

Boys battling to playoffs

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset boys soccer team is still hanging tough in the super competitive South Shore League.

While the Skippers had a seven game win streak snapped Tuesday with a 2-2 tie against Abington that left the team just two points from a playoff invite.

"Abington beat us early in the year and we wanted to get one back," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. They're a strong team with a good midfield. It was a point we needed.

"Abington scored first, but then we scored two to take the lead. They caught us with about 15 minutes left. Their kid shot a laser. There was nothing we could do about it. They're a tough team. We might see them again in the tournament."

Carver still sits at the top of the South Shore League, but a loss Tuesday cut their advantage over Cohasset.

Willis said his team's schedule is very strong for a reason.

"There are never any easy teams," Willis said. "We have Archbishop Williams, Spellman, East Bridgewater. They're all Division 4, in our bracket."

Cohasset has continued to get scoring from last month's Athlete of the Month Joe Buckley, who has continued to put the ball in the net. Buckley has 11 goals and 4 assists.

He's had help from Mathias Loft, who has also done some scoring.

"Our scoring has been pretty balanced," Willis said. We have seven or eight kids with goals."

At the midseason point, Willis is pleased.

"We're in the mix and still

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week 5: No team is safe

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

More than halfway through the regular season, and a new pattern has started to emerge: no opponent is a walkover. Some teams realized that last week, while others continued on their way of racking up wins to stay on top of their respective leagues.

The most recent rankings see a new team enter the top six on the girls' side, and for the boys, one team makes a big leap, while one spirals out.

Here are the rankings based on games played from Monday, Sept. 30 through Sunday, Oct. 6.

Boys

1. Silver Lake - The Lakers qualified for the postseason tournament with a 3-0 win over Scituate to end the week. They also shut out Quincy last week. The unbeaten Lakers ran their winning streak to nine games, having allowed just three goals on their run.

2. Hingham - A punishing win over North Quincy to start the week ended with a 1-1 draw to a surging Pembroke side. The tie snapped Hingham's six-game winning streak, but not enough to derail the Harbormen (8-1-1 as of Sunday) from the No. 2 spot.

3. Carver - With Braintree dropping out of the top six, Duxbury having a sub-par week, and a shutout win of their own over Abington, the Crusaders climb one spot in the rankings. This is their highest position in the top six this year and deservedly so. The Crusaders improved to 9-0 with their win last week.

4. Duxbury - It was a Jeckyl and Hyde week for the Dragons, who beat Hanover decisively, bouncing back from a 2-1 loss to last-place Whitman-Hanson. The Dragons entered this week with a 6-3 record.

5. Cohasset - The Skippers, up one spot from last week, are cruising and remain one of three teams challenging for the South Shore League title. They picked up two more shutout victories last week, making it seven wins in a row and seven shutouts in a row. They came into this week at 8-3.

6. Pembroke - The Titans return to the top six after a one-week absence. A massive 1-1 draw at Hingham followed a 2-0 win at home against Scituate. Recent results have solidified Pembroke's top spot in the Patriot League League Fisher Division. They finished the week at 5-2-3 on the season.

On the bubble: Braintree, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate

Week four rankings:
1. Silver Lake, 2. Hingham, 3. Braintree, 4. Duxbury, 5. Carver, 6. Cohasset

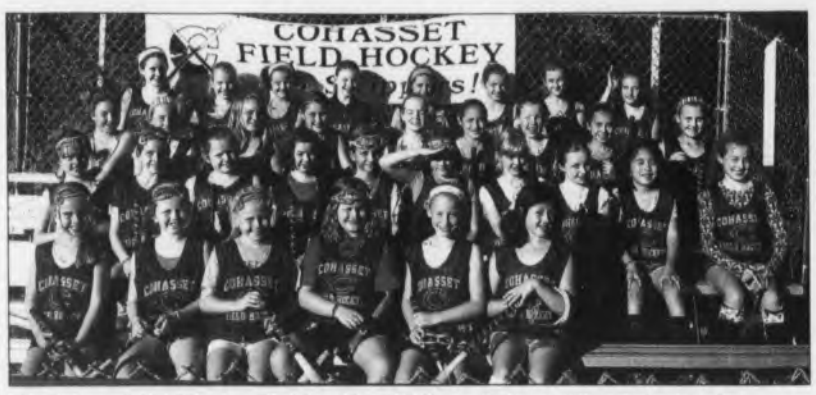
Girls

1. Scituate - Quickly becoming one of the best teams in girls soccer history at Scituate High, the Sailors racked up their 10th win in a row last week with victories over Pembroke, Silver Lake, and Plymouth North, the latter two on the road against tough opponents. The Sailors have a big stretch ahead, but don't appear to be ready to relinquish the top spot in the rankings.

2. Duxbury - The Dragons opened the week with a massive win over Whitman-Hanson, a 1-0 victory, which put them in first place in the Patriot League Keenan Division. They ended the week with a disappointing draw, conceding a second half goal to Hanover.

3. Hingham - This team refuses to lose in recent weeks, dating back to a week three win over Duxbury. In action last week, Hingham blanked Pembroke and conceded just one against North Quincy to improve to 6-3.

4. Rockland - The Bulldogs split a pair of South Shore League games last week, hammering Monomoy, 6-0, and losing to first-place East Bridgewater, 5-0. The loss to EB was only the second of the season for Rockland, who at this point a year ago only had two wins. The 'Dogs came into the week at 8-2, fighting with several teams for the top spot in the South Shore League.



5. Norwell - The Clippers can't seem to get out of the No. 5 hole, and by no fault of their own. The top four remain consistent. In action last week, the Clippers shut out Mashpee and Hull to improve to 7-3-1 and remain in the hunt for the South Shore League title.

6. Silver Lake - After weeks on the bubble, the Lakers burst into the top six after a string of impressive performances, including a loss. Yes, a loss. The Lakers fell, 2-1, to Scituate last week, nearly getting a point from the unbeaten Sailors. The Lakers also beat Quincy last week and came into this week at 5-2-2, unbeaten in their last four (three wins, one draw).

On the bubble: Braintree, Carver, Marshfield, Plymouth North, Plymouth South

Week four rankings:
1. Scituate, 2. Duxbury, 3. Hingham, 4. Rockland, 5. Norwell, 6. Marshfield tournament," said Giuliano. "We were building for the tournament. We want to develop our mental toughness. We will be looking to develop our underclassmen and get them ready for the future."

The Skippers are a deep team that has 49 players in the program.

According to the coach they have a strong sophomore class that has been developed by Beth Gilman's middle-school program.

The present varsity team is a pretty talented as well. They have been balanced at each part of the field.

"Our midfield has been constantly pushing the ball up to the forwards," said Giuliano. "They have sparked the offense. Our midfield and defense have also done a good job in protecting the goalie so far this year."

Senior captain MacKenzie Axelson Lauren Farren, who has great reach according to the coach and Molly Cunning have been able to help get the Skippers offense going.

They were able to come up with the key pass to Caty Gilman on a breakaway for the game-winning goal in Cohasset's 1-0 win over Monomy earlier this year.

Gilman and Allie Leahy have been able to finish off plays up front this year. They each had two goals in the Skippers, 6-0 win over Carver. Gillman scored four times and assisted on two others in an 8-0 win over Norwell.

Rosie Cipolla also scored in the game for the Skippers.

"Caty and Allie have been tearing things up at the offensive end," said Giuliano

Kathryn Dunn and Caroline Evans have anchored the defense for Cohasset.

"They are a powerful pair of players," said Giuliano. "They do a good job of challenging opposing players and they move the ball up the field. Maddie Curley is a tremendous leader, Christina Tedeschi and Cipolla are both playing well and Alicia Rufo is one of our four goalies."

The Skippers had a tough 2-1 loss in Falmouth against a tough Clippers team. All of the goals in the game were scored in the second half as the Skippers scored first, but the Clippers responded with a late game rally.

On the younger levels, on the same day that Cohasset beat West Bridgwater, the Junior Varsity notched an 8-0 win, and the Cohasset Field Hockey Club's Eighth Grade Silver Team edged Duxbury 1-0 touchdown pass two plays later to make it 28-6.

Danny Tangherlini intercepted a Dwyer pass at Cohasset's 34-yard line later in the third, but despite a 31-yard gain by Cole Kissick, the drive died when Donovan intercepted Haggerty.

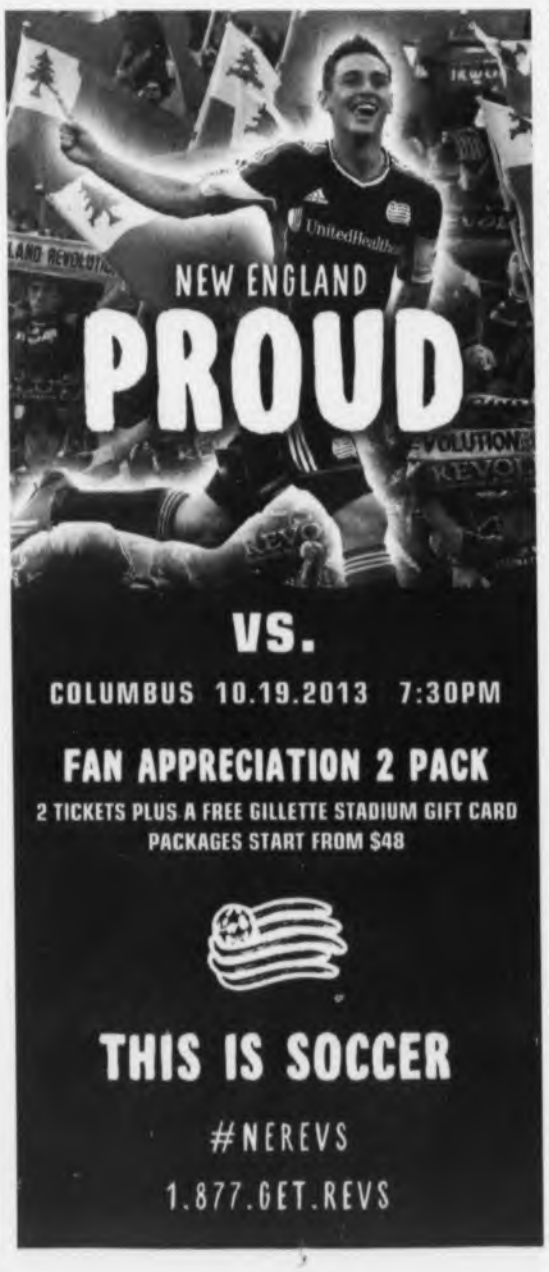
Cohasset mounted its last scoring drive in the final two minutes, the biggest play a 39-yard pass from Haggerty to Jack Donohue. Haggerty ran for a 3-yard TD with 58 seconds left.

"We scouted Abington's first three games and they did not play like this," said Cohasset head coach Peter Afanasiw.

"Tonight, Abington had a purpose."

Cohasset will now travel to Monomoy and hope to get back on track.

When you look at common opponents, Cohasset handled Norwell, and Norwell beat Monomoy handily.



Two regular season games, at Carver and against Mashpee are up next before the playoffs come around.

The top two teams in the South Shore League will qualify for a post-season invitation.

There is also possibility of a wild-card invitation.

Holly Hill hosts annual race

The sixth annual Discover the Woods 5k Trail race and 1 mile fun run / walk was held Sunday, Oct. 6, at Holly Hill Farm. The course is rolling hills through 130 acres of woods that surround the farm's 3 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers and herbs, past open meadows, grassy field edges, a brook and a pond.

Proceeds from the races benefit the Frank H. White Scholarship Fund that was created in memory of the founder of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center that uses the farm to stimulate awareness of the natural world, generate respect for the environment, teach the value of local, sustainable agricultural practices, and promote responsible environmental stewardship.

This past year, the Frank H. White Fund made school field trips and summer camp possible for many children who could otherwise not afford to experience all that the farm has to offer. In addition, the fund made the Summer Farm Pantry Program possible, a weeklong experience for teens to grow and harvest organic food that was delivered by the students to the chef at Father Bill's Place in Quincy.

complex, but they have other amenities that families can take part in aside from their chosen sport that day," Boston Breakers General Manager Lee Billiard said. "We are excited to be partnering with such a fantastic facility. We pride ourselves on being professional and giving Breakers players, fans, and families the best of the best. It will be a fantastic place for our senior pro team and youth teams to train. On top of that, The University Sports Complex will be our main South Shore base for a Boston Breakers Development Training Center."

The Breakers, one of eight teams in the National Women's Soccer League (NWSL), will not only use the complex for their professional and youth academy teams to train, they will also build in futsal tournaments, vacation week programs, and its first development training center on the South Shore, which will provide professional supplemental training sessions for elite players across the South Shore. The Breakers professional team features U.S. Women's National Team players and Olympic gold medalists Sydney Leroux and Heather O'Reilly and begins its second NWSL season in April 2014.

"We are really excited to be associated with the Boston Breakers professional women's soccer team and building a soccer presence on the South Shore," said Frank Teixeira, one of the facility's majority owners. "The University Sports Complex is the premier sports facility on the South Shore, and we're looking forward to having the Breakers there."

The Boston Breakers will be announcing more information on a December Futsal tournament plus details on the winter and spring Development Training Center in the coming weeks. For specific details on The University Sports Complex at Starland visit www.theuhanover.com.

It's always bittersweet.

For the fifth time, the Rockland Golf Course was the site for the annual Rally for the Cure golf tournament Saturday, Oct. 5 with all proceeds going to the Susan G. Komen For the Cure. The event was held in memory of Weymouth resident Barbara Estano, who passed away from breast cancer in 2011.

"She was an avid golfer," said Barbara's sister, Betty Thompson, a Braintree resident. "She would always drop by and play at the Rockland Golf Course. It was one of her favorite places to play. And it got to the point where all the guys were asking for her to be in their groups. She was so much fun to play with. She was full of encouragement."

Betty is a breast cancer survivor herself. And it was Barbara who got her through her initial diagnosis four years ago.

"At that time, Barbara had breast cancer too," Betty said. "She wasn't even concerned with herself. She was concerned with how I was doing. She was there for me through the whole thing, every step of the way."

That's just how Barbara was, according to Rockland Golf Course manager Lauriel Lanzetta.

"She had friends everywhere she went," said Lanzetta, who met Barbara in 2010 during one of the earlier Rally for the Cure events. "You would've never thought she had breast cancer. She didn't let it get in her way. What an amazing woman."

When Barbara passed away on Fathers Day of 2011, Lanzetta held that year's Rally for the Cure in her memory.

And this year, it was held in her memory one more time.

Lanzetta said this year's Rally for the Cure was very successful, boasting about 70 players. There was also a dinner held Saturday night.

"Her family, faith and friends were in the forefront of her life," Betty said. "People just loved to be with her."

Betty said Barbara is also survived by two other sisters, Sharon and Carol, as well as a brother, Jim. None of the other family members have breast cancer.

"I almost died at one point during my treatment," Betty added. "Barbara held my hand the whole way. I don't know how she did it, because she was going through the same thing. And she was my little sister. We really learned how to take care of each other."

Lanzetta, who has been hosting the event since 2008, said this year's tournament might have been the last Rally for the Cure, as the lease for the golf course is up this year. She added after 35 years, her family won't be involved in the day-to-day operations of the course.

"But we were happy we could do this one," Lanzetta said. "And to do it once more in memory of Barbara made it even better."

Betty said she was happy that people got to remember her sister one more time. And she had some advice for those diagnosed with breast cancer.

"Do everything that your doctors and nurses ask you to do," Betty said. "They are your best sources of information. Surround yourself with family and friends. If you need to cry, then cry. If you need to laugh, then laugh really loud. That's the best medicine. And Barbara was always the best at making people laugh."

What to do when your wife has breast cancer

By Alisa Blackwood
SoryLiving.com

A man caring for his wife (or mother, or sister, or girlfriend) through breast cancer finds himself facing the unknown, too. How can a guy best help her while also getting the support he needs? We asked men who've been through the experience for their advice.

- Keep living your life: "I found it really easy to not want to go to a business meeting or to something because my wife had breast cancer. But I didn't think that was fair. It was like letting breast cancer win. Don't succumb to the cancer. Live your life as normally as possible," says Bruce Sokol, whose wife was diagnosed with breast cancer in 1995 at age 35. She died from the disease after battling it for five years. Don't run yourself ragged though, Sokol says. Between her doctors' appointments and your busy life, it's important to schedule downtime. Battling breast cancer can be a years long experience and you don't want to burn out.

- Create time for you: Most men who support women through breast cancer cope best through exercise or talking to friends than by participating in formal support groups, according to a study published in Oncology Nursing Forum. Paul Atkinson, whose then-girlfriend was diagnosed with breast cancer at age 42, found relief by working at a job he loved, through talking to supportive colleagues and by taking his dog for regular walks in the park. "Sometimes you need someone to talk to, maybe another guy who's dealt with it. Or maybe you need an escape so you don't have the stress and mental anguish building inside," he says.

- Listen to her: "No matter how much information you find, you really have to be there for her. You may not understand what she's going through, but be there to listen intently. Be part of the conversation," Atkinson advises.

- Accept offers of support: If someone offers help, accept it, even if you think you can do it all by yourself, says Basil Tatsis, whose wife Jackie died in 2008 after battling breast cancer for six years. "People need to help themselves more than the patient sometimes. Most people cope and do the best they can, and with some help from the outside, you manage."

CANCER ACTION NETWORK

Advocacy helps and heals

By Mary Jane Hanron
mhanron@wickedlocal.com

With the second edition of her book, "Things I Wish I'd Known", available this month, Marshfield author Deb Cornwall has turned her attention to advocating for cancer patients, survivors, and their loved ones. STAFF FILE PHOTO/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

Deborah Cornwall describes advocacy in the simplest of terms – making oneself heard.

According to the Marshfield resident, author and cancer survivor, it is a straightforward concept with infinite power and possibilities.

Since the release a year ago of her book "Things I Wish I'd Known", which addressed needs, thoughts, and experiences of cancer caregivers, she has learned how essential involvement and action can be in the healing process.

"Caregivers have special needs of their own," said Cornwall. "They often have placed their own lives on hold during the illness of a loved one and recovering from that experience is not easy. At times the outcome has resulted in the (patient's) death, which creates another cycle of grieving and healing and moving on."

Just like the cancer experience itself, what works for every caregiver is different, Cornwall has observed.

Involvement in advocacy, she says, is one of the most powerful and effective ways for caregivers to return to what they perceive as a fulfilling and productive existence. Advocacy can be as simple as joining an email list or as involved as establishing a foundation and promoting a cause.

Being informed and being involved is essential to making progress in cancer research and care, Cornwall said.

Cancer Action Network

The American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network (ACS CAN) is an organization Cornwall recommends as a place for citizens to begin their advocacy journey. The nonpartisan, apolitical affiliate of the ACS holds lawmakers accountable for their actions and urges them to consider real steps and legislation to assist people touched by cancer. The organization supports issues, not candidates.

As an advocate for the 9th Congressional district in Massachusetts, Cornwall's activities have included trips to Washington and Beacon Hill to enlighten lawmakers about issues that can help cancer patients, fund cancer research and institute cancer prevention and early detection.

"There is nothing more effective than a real story from a person touched by the disease," she said.

Conducting public outreach to offer information and awareness about events, activities and services is another duty she performs.

"Sometimes I just have a table at a local event and our presence alone is enlightening," she said. "People learn there are places to get information and find others to talk with. In many ways it is the purest form of advocacy."

Current issues

Presently several areas of concern remain on the radar for CAN participants.

According to Cornwall one of the most vital issues being addressed constantly is federal research funding.

"The federal government is the largest funder of basic and applied research," she said, adding that care for present cancer patients and the study of causes, new treatments, protocols and possible cures are of great importance to the continued progress in the battle against the disease.

"If funding is decreased or discontinued it can mean we lose promising new scientists and researchers," Cornwall said. "If they are unable to sustain a program, they go and find something else to do and potentially groundbreaking research may never happen."

Cornwall explained some of the latest cancer research is focused on genetics and studies at the molecular level with a goal of developing more personalized treatments and ultimately cures. "Such work is extremely expensive and often takes place over decades," she said.

Federal funds sent to Massachusetts's institutes yearly are more than $2.5 billion, according to Cornwall. In 2012, Massachusetts received $2,470,036,857 from the National Institute for Health (NIH), which included $348,964,123 from the National Cancer Institute. The funding from the NIH supported more than 34,000 jobs in Massachusetts in 2013.

"These numbers are important to battling the disease and helping those affected by cancer but also have a significant economic impact on the region," she said. "It is vital that our lawmakers understand this and do all that is possible to support continued funding."

CAN workers also follow quality of life issues closely as they monitor legislation that affects areas of patient care, treatment and medication. According to Cornwall, many current laws are related to dispensation of narcotics and even more recently the legalization of medical marijuana.

"Care for discomfort and anxiety requires a great deal of attention," she said.

A particular area of interest for many cancer advocates is the training of medical professionals in palliative care.

"Those treating cancer patients need to be learning new philosophies about anxiety and pain management and we want such programs to be funded and supported, she said. "There is no need for discomfort and suffering at any stage in a cancer experience when it is preventable."

The implementation of the Affordable Care Act remains a priority for advocates across the nation, according to Cornwall. Because of the law's complexities it continues to present challenges to those supporting its implementation and much depends on outreach and increased public awareness about the program, she said.

"Once the law is fully implemented it will offer opportunities and services not always available to patients now and that will make a significant difference to those facing a cancer diagnosis."

Local options

According to Cornwall, the most important level for advocacy action and activity is at the local level.

"Being an advocate can take many forms and all of them can be rewarding and very healing," she said. "People need to return to the simple premise that talking to your neighbors, family and friends is one of the most effective ways to communicate. Getting active, attending events and always learning is so important."

Cornwall encourages current and former caregivers, patients or anyone interested to consider advocacy as way to heal and a way to help. Opportunities are widespread and usually not far from one's home.

"People should think about what is meaningful or what they are passionate about," she said. "Do some research online or be in touch with a hospital or charitable organization. Before you know it you find a place where you belong and can make a difference."

Though much work done by advocates is directed at lawmakers, overall awareness is vital for everyone, Cornwall believes.

"If people don't mobilize and be active in their communities they lose their right to complain about the outcome," she said.

"Things I Wish I'd Known" – Second Edition

The second edition of "Things I Wish I'd Known" is available for purchase in October 2013.

According to Cornwall, follow up interviews and conversations presented emerging patterns that helped her offer further advice to readers. She included this information in the second edition.

"What I have found is this project is really about one to one stories," she said of her continued research.

Originally published in August 2012, "Things I Wish I'd Known" is a handbook for cancer caregivers combining practical solutions and advice with personal narrative and experiences shared by dozens of people involved in care of a cancer patient.

The book has been widely distributed to cancer centers throughout the nation and is used as a reference and guide by oncology professionals.

Quoting ACS data, Cornwall said one in three women and one in two men will face cancer in their lifetime. Three out of four households will have one or more caregivers at some point.

"People who don't understand this simply have not been touched by it yet," she said. "But the message is loud and clear. What has meant so much are the stories and feelings people have shared as they have lived with the cancer experience. If the book has helped even a few people, it has all been worthwhile."

THE STORY OF YOU

Tips for a memorable admissions essay

For some students, the prospect of writing the college admission essay is so frightening that they wait until the night before deadline. Others are so confident in their application that they consider the college admission essay extra credit.

The admissions process reveals that both sides are missing the point.

Without the essay, a selection committee would have to arbitrarily choose between two (or 200) nearly identical candidates. Unlike every other means of evaluation, the college admission essay is not multiple-choice, it is not timed, and it does not require auditions or tryouts.

You can re-write it hundreds of times and ask everyone you know to read it. Therefore, there is no excuse for submitting a college admission essay that is not your best possible effort.

Many students put off writing this all-important statement of self. They worry about bragging, or they try extra hard to sound intelligent.

Consequently, they fill their essay with statements of their achievements, wisdom and the profound lessons they have learned. In trying to create this exaggerated image, many students do not realize that every other applicant is attempting the same thing.

Instead of playing along with the crowd, a successful essay stands apart. It tells a unique story true to the writer; one that makes the admissions officer like and remember the applicant. If you make yourself truly likeable, the admissions officer will find it difficult to reject you.

Topic selection

Many students obsess over their choice of topic. Your choice of topic does not matter as much as your approach. Almost any topic can work if it's tackled in the right way.

In most cases, an admissions officer is especially curious how you think and feel about a topic and what this says about your creativity, sophistication and personality. However, some essay topics never work. Hopeless essays are ones that betray a student's lack of perspective. Nobody likes a 17-year-old who cannot imagine the world beyond high school.

On the flip side, nobody appreciates 17-year-olds who think they know everything. A 700-word essay was not meant to solve urban poverty or discuss the great themes of life and love. Likewise, you should steer clear of sounding preachy, for instance when condemning the evils of alcohol, eating meat or regulating the sale of firearms. An essay should never risk offending the reader's sensibilities or beliefs.

That said, many possible topics remain, although some are used more often than others. It is common to read of a student's immigration to America, big loss in the soccer playoffs or admiration of her father. Choosing one of these essay mainstays means working extra hard to make it special. It means concentrating on the details of a story, the facts that pertain only to you, to make the story unique and revealing. This goes for even the most unusual subjects. Regardless of how original the topic, the essay needs to present authentic, vivid details of your life in order to implant itself in the reader's mind and convey something memorable about yourself.

Tell a story

Your essay will succeed if it tells a good story. Too often, an essay will fizzle into a series of statements that "tell" rather than "show" the likeable traits of the writer. Some students wrongfully assume that the reader will not "get it" if they do not spell out their main arguments. As a result, the essay succumbs to the usual cliches: the value of hard work and perseverance, learning to make a difference, not taking loved ones for granted, dreams coming true or learning from mistakes. These statements are fine if used minimally, but the best essays do not use them at all. The worst essays are composed entirely of such statements.

Use details

You should allow the details of the story to make the statement for you. An example helps elucidate the difference. A mediocre essay might say: "I developed a new compassion for those with disabilities." A better essay says: "Whenever I had the chance to help a disabled person, I did so happily." However, an excellent essay says: "The next time Mrs. Cooper asked me to help her across the street, I smiled and immediately took her arm." The first example provides no detail, the second example is still only hypothetical, but the final example evokes a vivid image of something that actually happened, thus placing the reader in the experience of the applicant. Of course, this technique works only insofar as it highlights the qualities of the writer. These larger points should always lurk in the back of your mind. Once a good story is written, any details that distract your overarching qualities should be removed.

Revise, revise, revise

In order to bring these points to the surface, feedback plays a crucial role. You should give drafts to a variety of readers: relatives, friends, teachers and, if possible, to an experienced editor. Test readers should give their first, unadulterated opinion of the piece, answering questions such as: What is this essay about? What does it say about the applicant? Is the essay memorable? Since there is no predicting who among the admissions staff will read the essay, any early feedback helps. The great value of a second opinion - or 12th, as the case may be - means the essay has many chances at improvement. Make your essay reflect your personality and circumstances in as flattering and detailed a way as possible.

CHOOSING A MAJOR

MAJOR DECISION

How to select the best course of study for you

By NextStepU.com

Ever enter your favorite restaurant dying for a hot dog and fries only to have a sizzling burger scream your name from the grill? That's how it is with picking college majors. You start out hungry for an engineering degree, then spot the green clay through an open art class door.

Poof! You're an art major.

College major-hopping is as common as pizza on college campuses. Deborah Fargo Schmitt, associate director of admissions at Daemen College in Amherst, N.Y., says nearly 90 percent of all freshmen change their college majors.

Why all the switching?

Peter S. Gold, University of Buffalo, N.Y.'s associate dean for general education and student services, says, "With more than 100 college majors available, students find opportunities they were unaware of." Students often trudge through a semester or two of classes before discovering an academic menu option best suited to their individual design.

Virtually all hops among college majors begin with a poor initial program choice. Some pursue college majors recommended by someone they know who is financially successful in that field. Many perform well in particular high school courses then pursue similar majors in college.

Still others blindly accept a standard freshman course load. These poor choices have one common cause: Not knowing what we are personally designed to do.

How to choose

How do you figure out what you're designed to do? Freshman orientation classes sprinkle in tips to help students target the right field for them. The time saved by reduced college major-hopping makes them a worthwhile investment.

Your prospective college's career planning and placement department is another resource. Most offer career workshops, planning seminars or other counseling services to help steer you toward a rewarding education path.

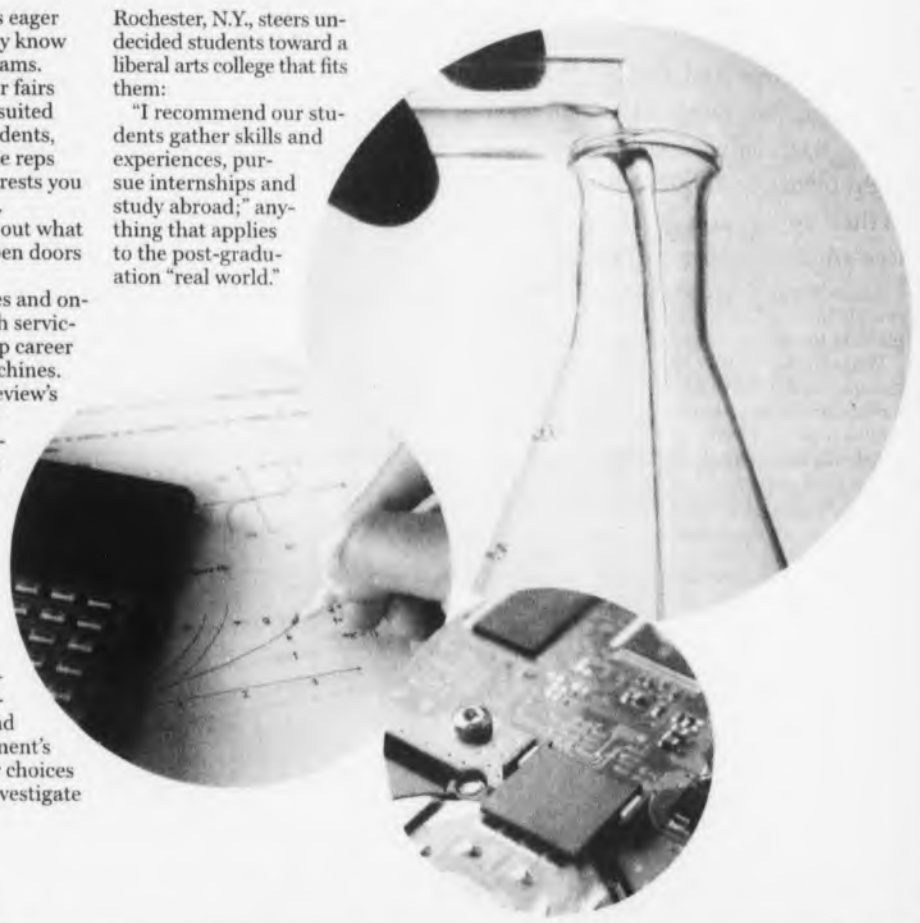
Most counselors welcome high school students trying to target a major. There also are undeclared major programs that let you earn credits while investigating varied disciplines. Daemen College's program even assigns an adviser to guide students through the freshman year and pinpoint how to choose a major.

Campus major and career fairs are two tools that can help shed light on how to choose a major that fits your interests and aptitudes. Major fairs bring you face-to-face with department reps and students eager to share what they know about their programs.

Although career fairs may seem better suited to graduating students, meeting corporate reps may unearth interests you never considered.

You'll also find out what college majors open doors to those careers.

College websites and online college search services are like desktop career path vending machines. The Princeton Review's online service includes a five-minute career quiz at www.princetonreview.com/careers-after-college.aspx. This point-and-click checklist digests your answers then churns out an instant assessment of your personal interests and style. The assessment's long list of career choices is then used to investigate college majors.



Decide at college

One overlooked resource is right around the corner: your local community college. These academic buffets offer bargain-priced tastes of virtually every program available at top universities - and you can live at home for free. Community colleges let you select courses across several disciplines, buying only the classes you want. Considering a teaching or art career, but still have dreams about carpentry?

Fill your first-semester cart with freshman English, a basic drawing course and toss in Woodworking 101.

Liberal arts schools offer a more traditional self-exploration option. Although not as flexible as a community college, the breadth of courses available at a liberal arts school lets you fill prerequisites while pursuing diverse interests. College adviser Pamela Roth of Allendale Columbia School, Rochester, N.Y., steers undecided students toward a liberal arts college that fits them:

"I recommend our students gather skills and experiences, pursue internships and study abroad;" anything that applies to the post-graduation "real world."

CATHOLIC SCHOOL SCHOLARSHIP FUND

Cohasset residents rally for low-income students

On Thursday, Sept. 19, a scholarship for low-income Catholic elementary school students received an outpouring of support from Cohasset residents and local business owners. Over 100 people attended a benefit reception at the home of Deanna and Greg Boyle of Stevens Lane to celebrate and raise money for the Artie and Judy Boyle Scholarship Fund (no relation to the hosts) for students attending Pope John Paul II Catholic Academy.

With four campuses located in urban Boston neighborhoods of Mattapan and Dorchester, PJPIICA is a project of the Campaign for Catholic Schools. Founded in 2008, the Campaign is rebuilding Catholic education across Greater Boston. Consisting of school renovations, enhanced academic instruction, technology upgrades, new lay leadership, and an extended day program, the Campaign's new reform model is also extremely efficient – it costs approximately $6,000 to educate one student annually compared to the average cost of $13,000-$14,000 in many public schools. Despite this efficiency, the already reduced tuition price of $4,500 often is too expensive for many families, so the Artie and Judy Boyle Scholarship Fund was established to help these families.

Guests at the reception heard from Johnaya Johnson, a fifth-grade student at PJPIICA and the second recipient of the Artie and Judy Boyle Scholarship. Sharing her gratitude for the opportunity to attend PJPIICA, Johnaya said, "It means so much to me to know that I am making my mom and my little brother proud. If I work hard, I know I can make my dream come true of attending Harvard."

The event was co-chaired by Deanna and Greg Boyle and Scituate residents Lisa and Rich Mullen and had the support of several local and national celebrities, including current forward for the New York Rangers, Brian Boyle; former L.A. Lakers player Rick Fox; and Hall of Famer and former Bruins star Bobby Orr. The success of the event also was bolstered by the leadership of an active host committee including: Shelly and Chris Allen of Cohasset; Muffy and Paul Antico of Cohasset; Annie and Griffin Bridge of Cohasset; Arthur S. DeMoulas of Boston; Amy and Adam Farber of Cohasset; Rita and Kevin Gill of Hingham; Maureen and John Hailer of Boston; Gerry and Kevin O'Donoghue of Scituate; Annette and Stephen O'Donoghue of Scituate; Chelsea and Darren Orr of Cohasset; and Laurie and Tim Stanton of Cohasset. Rick Curtis of Curtis Liquors, Bruce Sinclaire of A Taste for Wine and Spirits, and A Catered Affair kindly donated food and beverages for the event. With their support and leadership, the Artie and Judy Boyle Scholarship Fund has raised over $75,000 toward a goal of $250,000.

OBITUARIES

Martha A. Logan

Martha A. Logan

BLOOMFIELD, N.J. – Martha Ann Logan, wife of Dr. Patrick Reid of Bloomfield, N.J., passed away Oct. 6, 2013. She was 55.

Logan was the only daughter of the late Paula E. (Polly) Logan and General Edward F. Logan of Cohasset, and the only sister of the late Malcolm T. Logan of Portland, Maine.

Born St. Patrick's Day, an Irish girl with green eyes, Martha had a love of all celebrations of life, the Red Sox, laughter, and her many friends. Known as the consummate hostess, she loved the music of The Grateful Dead and Bob Marley.

A graduate of Milton Academy and Smith College, she received her MBA from the UNC at Chapel Hill, pursuing a successful career in finance and banking in New York.

In addition to her husband, Martha is survived by his daughter, Jessica Reid-Adam, her husband Matthew, and their two daughters. She also leaves her cousin, Roberta Phippen Collier and her husband Jeb Collier of New Bern, N.C. Other surviving family includes, Pat and Mike Rissler of Lanexa, Kan., Fred and Kelley Peterson of Fort Worth, Texas, Barbara and Philip Cutler of Seattle, Wash., Walter and Martha Phippen of Hull, Mass., Susan and Sandy Buxbaum of Towson, Md., and David and Wendy Phippen of Bothell, Wash.

The joint funeral service for Martha and her mother, Polly, will be held Saturday, Oct. 12, 2013, at 11 a.m. at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, 10 Summer Street, Cohasset, Mass. A reception will be held immediately following the service.

Paula Logan

Paula Logan

COHASSET – Paula "Polly" Logan, former Republican National Committeewoman, State Committeewoman, head of the Massachusetts Republican Club and many other political, civic and social organizations, died Sept. 30, 2013, at the age of 88.

A classic New England Republican, socially liberal and fiscally conservative, Polly was renowned for her ability to bring opposing factions together, to engage new voters and supporters and to mentor young people. Her skills, and her ready laugh, made her a real leader and political force.

News stories about Logan describe her as "irrepressible" and "spunky". A staunch feminist, she bucked her party by supporting the highly controversial Equal Rights Amendment as far back as the 1980 Republican National Convention.

In 2000, in recognition of her years of mentoring women of all parties, friends and colleagues honored her by establishing the Polly Logan Fund at the University of Massachusetts's Center for Women in Politics and Public Policy, where the fund sponsors mentoring programs. She was a "go-to" source for reporters for many years, candidly expressing her political views and character assessments.

At the same time she was a great diplomat and extraordinarily effective behind-the-scenes political operative and diplomat.

Polly grew up in Red Oak, Iowa, and attended the University of Nebraska and George Washington University. In 1949 she married Edward F. Logan, the nephew of General Edward L. Logan for whom Logan Airport is named.

She served as a key advisor to Gov. Francis Sargent and as a member of the Bill Weld-Paul Cellucci transition team. She was an overseer of Harvard University and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston and was a founder of the Doric Dames State House Guides. She was also a founder of the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus; a Board member of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund and the Horace Mann Foundation.

She was also a member of the Cohasset Conservation Commission and the Cohasset Council for the Aged, and director of United Community Services for the South Shore.

Often hailed as "the grande dame of the Massachusetts Republican Party", Mrs. Logan was predeceased by her husband, General Edward F. Logan, and by her son, Malcolm. She was the mother of Martha A. Logan (deceased) and her husband, Professor Patrick Reid of Bloomfield, N.J.; and is survived by her niece, Roberta Phippen Collier and her husband Jeb Collier of New Bern, N.C. Other surviving family includes, Barbara and Philip Cutler of Seattle, Wash., Walter and Martha Phippen of Hull, Mass., Susan and Sandy Buxbaum of Towson, Md., David and Wendy Phippen of Bothell, Wash., Pat and Mike Rissler of Lenexa, Kan., and Fred and Kelly Peterson of Fort Worth, Texas.

The joint funeral service for Polly and her daughter, Martha, will be held Saturday, Oct. 12, 2013, at 11 a.m. at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, 10 Summer Street, Cohasset. A reception will be held immediately following the service.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Polly Logan Fund, University Advancement, UMass-Boston, 100 Morrissey Blvd., Boston, MA 02125.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 21, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A colleague might offer to open a door for you professionally. But before you walk through it, be sure this "favor" isn't attached to an obligation you might find difficult to discharge.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creativity, your persistence and your reliability could lead to a major career shift. Be sure to use that other Taurean trait, your practicality, when discussing what the job offers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A changing situation might require some adjustments you might not have been prepared to make. However, flexibility in this matter could be the best course to follow at this time.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're in a period of fluctuating moods, which is not unusual for the Moon Child. Your emotions stabilize by the 25th. Meanwhile, try to hold off making major decisions until then.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) That keen sense of perception helps you hunt down those minute details that others overlook. And, of course, your Leonine ego will accept the expected praise with good grace.

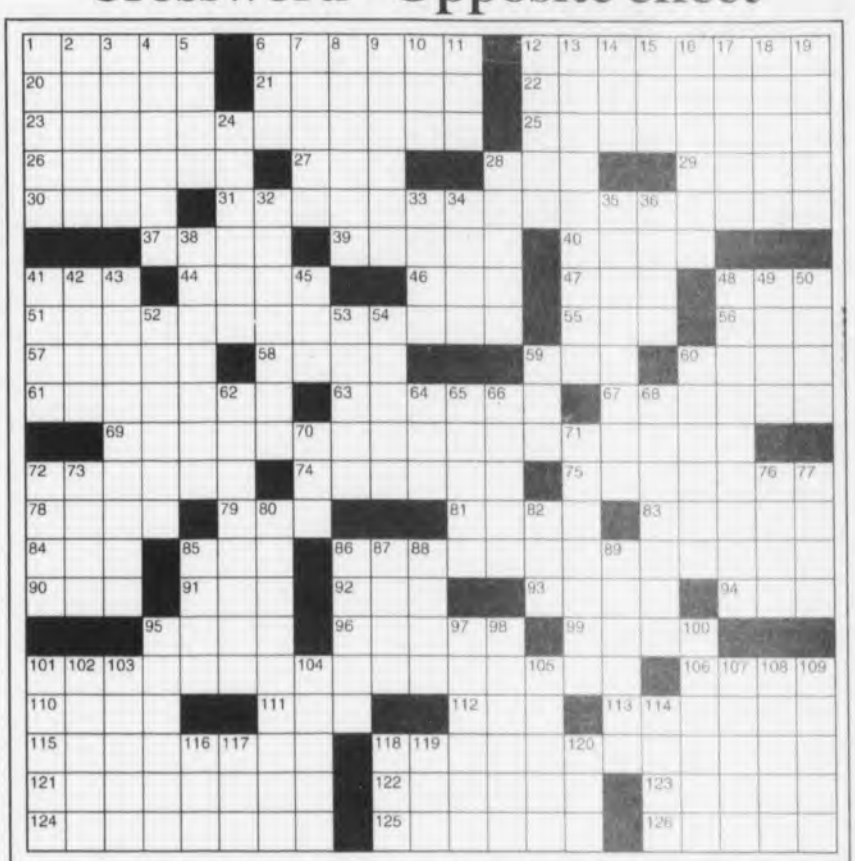
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful not to be confrontational when raising a work-related issue. Better to make a request than a demand. And, of course, be prepared to back up your case with facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your ego might be hurt when a colleague turns down your offer to help. But accept it as a rejection of your offer, not of you. A friend from the past could re-emerge by week's end.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A flow of positive energy turns a work project you didn't want to do into something you actually love doing. Now, take that attitude into your social, intimate life — and enjoy what follows.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Working hard to meet your professional goals is fine. But don't neglect your private life, especially where it concerns your more cherished relationships.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) "Patience" remains the key word in dealing with an emotionally sensitive situation involving a close friend or family member. Help comes your way by week's end.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With new information coming in, it's a good time to rethink some of your goals without taking suggestions from others, no matter how well-meaning they might be.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Making progress on your project is relatively easy in the early part of the week. A problem could arise midweek. But all goes swimmingly once it's resolved.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Selectmen squabble over need for STM

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A mere few hours after discussing civil discourse and codes of conduct, members of the Board of Selectmen were at one another's throats – and that of the Acting Town Manager – arguing over the need for a Special Town Meeting.

The contentious discussion started toward the end of the Tuesday, Oct. 15 meeting, around 10:30 p.m., during the Town Manager update part of the agenda. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski was discussing a memo he'd sent the board on the state-issued Cherry Sheet, which contains estimated state aid for municipalities and school districts. The Cherry Sheet is issued each year after the state budget is enacted by the state legislature and signed by the Governor.

Milanoski explained in a memo to the selectmen, titled "Need for a Special Town Meeting," that the state legislators secured an additional $437,275 of state aid than was projected in July 2013, three months after Town Meeting adopted the town's nearly $48,272,907 budget for fiscal year 2014. Factoring in local receipts with the state revenue, the town has an additional $600,000, along with $1.3 million in Free Cash for fiscal year 2013, which

New code of conduct passed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen managed to be civil on Tuesday night — at least for a while.

During the Tuesday, Oct. 15 meeting, the selectmen voted to approve a new code of conduct for town committee and board members. They also discussed their own "Code of Core Values for Civil Discourse," which was voted on and adopted in 2012 but has since undergone some revision.

However, later in the meeting a few board members seemed to forget to keep things civil during a disagreement with the acting town manager on whether or not to hold a Special Town Meeting this year (see related story).

At least at the beginning of the meeting, the selectmen appeared to be on the same page.

The selectmen's civil discourse document outlines several "core values" and defines a selectman's role.

The core values include: integrity, ethics, civility, respect for the individual, communication, teamwork, leadership, creativity and innovation, quality, stewardship, efficiency, organizational sensitivity, adaptability, and recognition.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said that the board's

Fall flu clinic is Saturday

When: The second annual Cohasset flu clinic, sponsored by the Cohasset Board of Health, will take place in the Town Hall auditorium from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Oct. 19. There is no cost to use this service. The clinic is open to any Cohasset resident older than age 9.

What you need: Participants are asked to bring all health insurance cards and to wear a short-sleeved shirt.

Unable to attend? Mary Goodwin, Cohasset's public health nurse, will administer the vaccine in the home of any elderly resident who is unable to attend a clinic. She can be reached at 781-383-2210, ext. 130.

Reasons to get a flu shot at Cohasset's town clinic:

- The Town of Cohasset is reimbursed approximately $15 (net) by private insurance companies for each dose of vaccine administered. The reimbursement goes directly into Cohasset's General Fund.
- Only licensed registered nurses who are trained to give shots administer the vaccine.
- All clerical staff and registered nurses are volunteers.
- Cohasset's flu clinic is a good way for citizens to become familiar with the services of their health department and for Goodwin to connect with the community. In addition to the clinics, the town sponsors free, ongoing walk-in office hours with Goodwin on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings from 8:30 to 11, where blood pressure checks, immunizations, teaching and discussion of personal health issues are available.
- And finally, the flu clinic provides an opportunity to see neighbors and friends we haven't seen in ages.

POLICE BEAT

Deer-car collisions rise this time of year

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to two accidents involving deer over the past week and warn motorists that deer are more active now that it is the mating season. There is also a large population of deer in the area.

At around 1 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 12) an officer was flagged down by a man who had hit a deer on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Crocker Lane. There was no damage to his vehicle and the man did not want to file a report.

At 9:37 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 13), a 2002 Honda Civic, operated by a 28-year-old Vermont man, hit a deer on King Street (Route 3A) near Sunrise. The deer broke the windshield and damaged the car.

Police said if you see a deer try to stop if it is safe to do so as they can dart out at any time. If there is one deer, there is often another one close by.

Police warn that this time of year deer are more active and more likely to dart into traffic. PHOTO/MARY FORD

Red light

At 5:36 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 7), an officer on patrol observed a 2011 Nissan Altima that was headed south go through the red light on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Beechwood Street. The officer stopped the car and further investigation revealed the operator, a 41-year-old Scituate man, had an expired license. Scituate Collision towed the car and the driver is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and failure to stop at a red light.

Assault

Police investigated a 9-1-1 hang-up call from an apartment in the Avalon complex at around 9 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 7). Police interviewed the alleged victim, a 63-year-old woman who said her son who is 28 and a Hull resident, had pushed his way into her apartment, overwhelmed her, demanded money, grabbed her cell phone and took $40 from her before fleeing in a 1996 Honda Accord.

Cohasset police issued a BOLO (be on the lookout) and Scituate stopped the suspect, Ryan Walsh, 10 Atherton, St., Hull about a half and hour later. Cohasset responded to Scituate and placed Walsh under arrest for the following felonies: assault and battery on a person over 60 years old/domestic; burglary while armed (over taking someone by force); and intimidation of a witness (grabbing the cell phone).

Trek bike

A concerned caller notified police about an expensive looking bicycle that had been left outside a business on Ripley Road on Tuesday (Oct. 8) around 8:40 p.m. Police have the bike and helmet at the station. The bike is a Trek bike with an estimated value of about $200. The helmet is black with a matt finish, police said.

Car into woods

Several 9-1-1 calls reported a single-car accident on Tuesday (Oct. 8) around 1 p.m. where a vehicle drove off the southbound lane on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) between Pond Street and Mendel Road and into the woods. Paramedics from Eascare Ambulance, a private ambulance out of Dorchester, stopped at the scene and provided medical attention to the driver of the2005 Ford Explorer, police said.

The 46-year-old Cohasset man who had been driving the Explorer appeared to have had a medical episode, police said. He was transported to South Shore Hospital by Scituate ambulance. The Explorer was towed. Cohasset police notified the Registry of Motor Vehicles that the driver should be checked out medically and undergo a road test before being allowed to drive again.

Pigs loose

Police responded to a complaint from an upper King Street resident on Wednesday (Oct. 9) around 5 p.m. that seven large, domesticated pigs were in her yard. As it turned out, the pigs belonged to a neighbor and couple of doors down and had gotten out of their pen.

Arrest

A 53-year-old Cohasset man was arrested last week on the felony charge of intimidating a witness after reports that he had allegedly continued to harass a tenant, who is from the Middle East, in the strip mall that he owns on King Street (Route 3A). The tenants, who run a pizza business, had complained to police that they had been the victim of ongoing harassment and ethnic slurs. There is a pending criminal case involving these allegations, police said.

Last week (Friday, Oct. 11), the alleged victim reported to police that the harassment had been continuing. He said the landlord kept placing a portable sign to block a parking space to the business. When the tenant confronted the landlord, Roger Q. Hill, of Great Brewster Trail, about why he was doing that, the tenant told police that Hill used a pejorative term. Police said there were several witnesses to the recent allegation. Hill was arrested on Saturday (Oct. 12) based upon witness statements. Hill was arraigned on the charge Tuesday in Quincy District Court.

Break-in

Cohasset detectives are investigating the apparent break-in of a home on Forest Avenue that was reported on Saturday (Oct. 12). The homeowner reported the incident at the station. Police said a rear screen had been tampered with and entry was gained through a window. Detectives processed the scene and it remains under investigation.

Duck hunters

What a concerned caller thought was a boat in distress turned out to be duck hunters on Brush Island using shotguns, police said. A caller from Atlantic Avenue reporting seeing what was believed to be flares going off at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday (Oct. 12) off Sandy Beach. Police and the harbormaster responded but it was determined from shore that the noise was shotgun blasts. Police said it is legal to hunt duck over there.

Threats

A 19-year-old former employee of the Red Lion Inn walked to the station at 10:50 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 12) to complain that the owner of the establishment had threatened him because he had improperly swept debris in the kitchen under the stove, police said. The teen, who is from Hanover, was also fired.

Toll Brothers widens tricky intersection

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following a recent site visit, the selectmen asked the Toll Brothers to consider changing the curbing plan.

The Toll Brothers construction company recently complied with the Board of Selectmen's request, widening a narrow intersection that had neighbors complaining.

The Toll Brothers are currently constructing 41 single-family homes off Beechwood Street. The intersection of Beechwood and Norman Todd Road was deemed too narrow by the neighbors and the selectmen. Following a recent site visit, the selectmen asked the Toll Brothers to consider changing the curbing plan.

It seems the Toll Brothers have already done the work. Based on an engineering plan by Cavanaro Consulting, the Toll Brothers widened the road by four feet, which according to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, "opens it up and allows for a little broader right-hand turn while still maintaining visibility."

"This is what was negotiated," Milanoski told the selectmen during the Tuesday, Oct. 15 meeting. "Toll Brothers had no obligation to do this," since the work previously done at the intersection had been approved by the Planning Board and selectmen in the past.

The selectmen still had to take a vote on Tuesday night to approve the new intersection, even though it had already been completed.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby asked, "How can we approve something that's already been done?"

Milanoski responded, "You negotiated the widening; they agreed to do it... You can still revisit this in six months but [any changes] will be on our nickel.

"For the Toll Brothers stepping up to do this," Milanoski added, "they went a long way."

Selectmen were still concerned about the issue of traffic there, however; at their last meeting, they asked Milanoski to conduct a traffic study there. He confirmed that he still plans to have the study done.

The board voted unanimously (5-0) to accept the improvements to the intersection.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Cohasset school buses are maxed out

Cohasset school buses are at capacity, the Superintendent and School Business Manager reported at the Wednesday, Oct. 2 School Committee meeting.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said that 48 more students signed up to ride the buses this year compared to last year, but there are approximately another 80 students who are riding but have yet to sign up to do so.

The filled-up buses have created some issues this year. During the first few days of school, Osgood students had difficulty finding seats.

Due to this issue, Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that students are not allowed to take buses that are not their own. In other words — no switching buses for play dates or other activities.

"If we weren't at capacity, we would not be doing this, but we're exceeding the limits," said Cataldo.

The district might need to add another driver to the bus routes and "spread the routes out more," said DeGennaro. There is an extra bus in the fleet that is being saved for breakdowns and other emergencies, he added.

"We have the bus available if we need it," DeGennaro said.

TOWN MEETING

was certified by the state Department of Revenue.

Milanoski stated in his memo, which was also sent to the Mariner and published last week, that the state-issued monies should be voted upon by a Special Town Meeting (STM) and not left sitting until the Annual Town Meeting (ATM) convenes next spring.

"This is a unique opportunity that we have not experienced — having significant extra state revenue that arrived after the budget was approved and not needed to balance that current budget after the fact," Milanoski stated. "Like a work bonus, it should be treated as a one-time event, and put to a one-time use."

This is what the town's fiscal management policies support, the acting town manager added.

Milanoski recommended a STM to vote how to invest the money, recommending beefing up the town's stabilization and capital stabilization funds, as well as allocating funds to facilities and public roads maintenance and the trust fund for the town's outstanding $38 million liability to fund Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) for municipal employees.

Without a Special Town Meeting sometime this fall, "before the tax rate is set in December," the town "will not have access to these funds" in the current fiscal year, Milanoski said.

The only other option, according to Milanoski, is to lower local receipts, but he did not endorse that move, explaining that doing so "pushes the availability out for over a year, maybe longer."

However, this was not the sole concern for selectmen chair Fred Koed or selectmen Karen Quigley and Martha Gjesteby, who all wanted to see a more detailed breakdown of the monies, rather than a one-page memo.

"I wanted a memo with four options," said Koed. "All we have is this memo on the special town meeting" as the only option, the selectmen chair continued. "I don't like you treating us like little kids, like we don't know anything."

Milanoski went on the defensive. "I think I've done a pretty good job righting the financial ship in town." He added that there are only two options, which are explained in his memo.

Gjesteby also asked for a "more expansive" memo. "I deal with numbers, not rhetoric," she said.

Quigley, Gjesteby and Koed all said that Jerry Perry from the Department of Revenue had discussed other available options, such as lowering the town's tax levy. Selectman Steve Gaumer said that would be a result, not an option.

Milanoski argued that this goes against the town's fiscal management policies.

"They're very clear. We tax to the levy of two percent... That's what's outlined in this memo."

Milanoski said that by "doing nothing" with the monies and waiting to vote on them during the ATM, the board would not be "following the rules town meeting has established."

Koed said that wasn't the point.

"You're talking about programming stuff into the budget; I'm asking for the analysis. That's all," Koed said irritably. "I'm just looking for the numbers, Mike. I'd like to see how it works."

Milanoski again attempted to explain the numbers verbally, adding that he wasn't trying to spend any money but allocate it into stabilization funds.

Quigley reiterated that she didn't understand what was in the memo, asking for a breakdown "for those of us who don't deal in [finance] every day."

Milanoski said he could explain it to her if she would meet with him "and ask me the questions, which you have yet to do. Or have a meeting with [finance director] Mary Gallagher. We're the experts; we know municipal finance. We're trying to help the town."

Quigley responded, "You can help by providing [information] in a format I can understand."

"I think I've done a pretty good job righting the financial ship in town."
Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

Milanoski again started explaining the matter verbally, with both Koed and Quigley attempting to cut in. Voices raised as each tried to talk over the other. Milanoski grew visibly frustrated as both Koed and Quigley continued to ask him for a real budget memo or a detailed spreadsheet.

Selectman Gaumer sided with Milanoski on the need for a Special Town Meeting and wondered why the board wouldn't want to spend the $6,000 it would cost to hold a meeting (reserving the school gymnasium or auditorium and printing and mailing out the warrant) to clean up this matter of town finances.

"You may not individually absorb what's written in front of you," Gaumer said of Milanoski's memo. "It lays out two options and the potential result," amending that "the organization of that representation might be laid out in a way that's more mathematically clean."

However, as Koed and Gaumer talked interest rates and depreciation, Quigley cut in. "It's fine for you guys to be throwing around all these numbers, but unless I have something I can look at and analyze," she could not easily follow the discussion.

When Gaumer urged that if Quigley could not understand the "remedial work" outlined in the memo, she should just meet with Milanoski, Koed cautioned, "Let's keep in mind the civility code."

Gaumer retorted, "Let's keep in mind the hour."

The discussion eventually circled back to whether or not the STM is needed.

Gaumer asked why there seemed to be "over my dead body" resistance on holding a special town meeting, "when it makes fiscal sense" to have one. He added an analogy. "If someone gave you a check today of $400,000, would you leave it on your dresser till February?"

Selectmen co-chair Diane Kennedy pointed out that several months ago, the same members who were advocating for a special town meeting now seemed dead set against having one. Milanoski had gotten some pushback at the time by suggesting that since the town appeared to be in good financial shape, the town might not need the STM this year. Gjesteby had been one of the members pushing for the special as part of town tradition, said Kennedy.

"I don't understand what the reluctance is," said Kennedy. "Clearly there is some value" to holding the STM. "Martha articulated very well [in the past] the need for a special town meeting; it's a tradition."

Distraction

Koed said that if a special were called now, it would divert the board dealing with a more pressing issue: hiring a permanent town manager. Milanoski's employment contract with the town is up in December; the consultants the selectmen hired to conduct the town manager search plan to have their list of finalists whittled down in the next few weeks. The selectmen could interview candidates as soon as the first week of November.

When Milanoski asked during the meeting what the board planned to do about his soon-to-expire contract, Koed replied, "We'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

The board should focus on the candidate interviews first, the selectmen chair said.

"The most important thing the board has to do right now is deal with the town manager" search, said Koed. The STM "is just another distraction."

If the selectmen call one, Koed added, "People are going to throw in everything and the kitchen sink." With only six more scheduled meetings between now and December, Koed said the selectmen "don't have the bandwidth" to tackle much more.

Kennedy recalled when Milanoski had told the board that if the town were in good financial health, the STM could be skipped. However, since the town's bond rating could drop by sitting on the free cash and state monies, Kennedy said the STM seems necessary.

"I want to take care of the financial health," said Kennedy. "I have the bandwidth."

Kennedy also said that she didn't know of any boards that had articles in the works. The Community Preservation Committee had discussed holding off on any articles until the Annual Town Meeting, she said, adding that she'd heard the same of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Gjesteby said that she had seen "other things" that could become articles for a special town meeting. "I understand several there are several [citizen's] petitions."

Gaumer asked what Gjesteby had heard. "You can't put that out there and keep it a secret."

She demurred, "There are rumors going around."

At one point, Koed suggested that the town could hold a special within the annual.

Kennedy again wondered why the resistance now, adding that there seemed to be "something else afoot... I think we're avoiding something."

Koed, however, said that the problem was inconsistency; at one moment the board was hearing there was no need for the STM, and now there is.

Quigley added, "The story keeps changing."

"It'll be something new next week," said Koed.

The unpleasant discussion ended with Milanoski agreeing to get a detailed Excel spreadsheet to the selectmen for next week's meeting.

Quigley, however, said she wanted the information before the meeting, so she would have time to study it over the weekend. Milanoski said it would be in the selectmen's packet, but not before imploring Quigley to meet one-on-one with him.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Cohasset Schools ranked no. 22 in state

Cohasset did well in the U.S. News' annual list of Best High Schools. For the 2013 ranking, the Cohasset district placed 22 out of 50 schools.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo noted that eliminating the private and charter schools would bring Cohasset up to number 17.

Most of the top-ranked schools on the list are in the Boston area. Cohasset was bested by its neighbor, Duxbury, which was ranked tenth.

School committee member Helene Lieb noted that Cohasset could do better in the Advanced Placement (AP) testing area.

"We do offer some AP classes, but we could up it," said Lieb. "That's where we don't compete with our like schools."

Of the 58 percent of Cohasset students that tested in AP courses, only 45 percent passed, according to the U.S. News report.

Cataldo said that the district is aware of this issue and is "looking at the whole structure." She added that AP awards will be presented at the next school committee meeting.

CCTV UPDATE

Cable budget approved

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously Tuesday night to approve the fiscal year 2014 budget for Cohasset Community Television (CCTV).

Unlike the rest of the town, CCTV has a fiscal year starting in December (the town's starts in July). The selectmen oversee and approve the cable board's budget each year. The budget is separate from the town's and since it is a non-profit, no town monies are expended.

The 143TV cable studio exists not for profit but community service. And while the studio is a community resource, it's also its own corporation. The studio costs are paid for by a surcharge on viewers' cable bills.

The surcharge is currently 3.5 percent of a user's cable bill, but that fee will drop to 3.2 percent in April, which is "great for everyone but the cable committee because our revenues are going down," said CCTV treasurer Paul Carlson.

The cable board is unique in Cohasset because it has a dual function: as a cable advisory committee, and as the corporation overseeing Cohasset Community Television (CCTV), planning a yearly budget and paying bills, including contracts with Comcast and Verizon and the salary of the cable studio's director, Don Roine.

The cable board planned to increase some expenses this year, notably stipends for volunteers. Roine explained to the selectmen that on the occasion that volunteers travel to cover events, the studio would like to reimburse them with a small stipend to at least cover a meal.

"Our volunteers go above and beyond... traveling to away games, paying for their own gas, editing over the weekend so we can have [the footage] by Monday... I do feel we should compensate them," said Roine.

The cable board budgeted $10,000 to cover stipends as well as contractors.

CCTV has budgeted around $5,000 for a yearly audit, but asked the selectmen if they might reduce to having an audit every other year; that way the money could be spent elsewhere.

Selectman Karen Quigley said she was wary of changing the process, and wanted to make sure it was fair. "I would be more comfortable for the taxpayers... if we continued with the audit" every year, said Quigley. She also wanted to check what it says in CCTV's operating agreement with the town.

Selectman Steve Gaumer said since the size of CCTV's budget is modest, a "bi-annual" audit would be plausible.

"There's not much they're going to get away with in a year; there are not a lot of places to hide," said Gaumer. "It might be worth entertaining a motion of a bi-annual audit."

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore, who was in the audience, suggested that the CCTV ask its audit firm, Powers and Sullivan, to do a review rather than an audit, which "serves the same purpose" but could perhaps lead to some cost savings.

New mics for town hall

A new budget item for next year: Brand new microphones for the selectmen's office on the second floor in Town Hall.

The current microphones the selectmen use during meetings, which the CCTV broadcasts, sit on the board's desk in front of each member. Both in-person and at home audience members have complained frequently about the poor sound quality.

Roine said that he plans to install new pressure zone microphones (PZM) that will hang from the ceiling. The School Committee uses PZM in the community room, where they broadcast their meetings.

It will cost around $3,000 to purchase and install six PZM, one per each selectmen and one for the audience, said Roine.

Pescatore wondered why this expense should come out of CCTV's budget. "Why wouldn't you get town money?"

CCTV chair Pat Martin responded that the cable board exists to provide this service to the town by broadcasting "programs people want to see. We put the equipment in place to make that happen."

And while CCTV is non-profit, "The money that comes into the cable really belongs to the citizens," said Martin. "It pays for their studio, their cable system. It comes out of their pocket, your pocket, and still comes out of our pocket."

Overall, Martin concluded, "We want the audience to be happy. We're trying to make those improvements so people are happy."

Setting the record straight

Carlson read a prepared statement to clear up a recent inaccuracy. Last month, Carlson was unexpectedly bumped from the cable board when he was up for reappointment, and the motion to reappoint him failed 2-2 (selectmen Karen Quigley and Martha Gjesteby voted against him, while selectmen chair Fred Koed and vice-chair Diane Kennedy voted to keep him; selectman Steve Gaumer was absent).

Carlson later came to the selectmen meeting to advocate for his position, asking for a temporary six-month reappointment in order to have time to find a replacement. With only three members on the cable board, including Carlson, Martin, and Rick Shiffman, the board could not function with only two.

Furthermore, as treasurer, it's Carlson's job to balance CCTV's books and pay the bills.

However, Carlson said in his statement Tuesday that he'd heard many accounts of the incident incorrectly state that he went down to the selectmen's meeting in his pajamas that night.

Carlson said, "I came to the meeting to ensure a smooth transition" for the cable board, adding, "I did not come down in my pajamas; I was fully clothed."

Fall color

Hi there, Cohasset! Could we be halfway through October already? It does not seem possible but it is. We have been so lucky this fall with the weather and I hope it continues right through the winter. The colors that are all around from the changing shades of the leaves, the awesome and spooky Halloween decorations and the fall harvest scenes, have our town looking very festive. Take a walk or drive around to enjoy the "colors of fall."

Prayers

I received this very special message about and for a person, that so many of is know. "Healing, loving prayers and thoughts would be appreciated for William (Billy) McAuliffe Jr.

He is currently undergoing treatment for Leukemia at Dana Farber Brigham and Women's Hospital. Many of us know Billy as a massage therapist, the healer. Now with your prayers and thoughts, we can help heal him." Get better, stay strong, Billy.

A $5 charge covers the cost of class and materials. Reservations are required by calling 781-383-9112.

It is the first of three invitational tournaments for the top hunt seat teams in the country.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Fall is in full swing!

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

The brisk air. The sea of oranges and reds and browns formed from fallen leaves. The lazy Sundays filled with football.

You could throw out any of the classic fall clichés to the past week, and it would probably be apropos. The truth is, it's been awesome. There is nothing quite like waking up to see your breath in the morning, and then rushing out the doors of the school at 2:10 p.m. to meet a smiling, warm sun. Fall is in full swing, and with fall comes Life at CHS!

The four-day mini vacation known as Columbus Day weekend gave many students a much-needed break. The main event for many seniors was venturing out to look at colleges. From guided tours, to information sessions and anything in between, CHS seniors took advantage of the gorgeous weather to take a look at some places they may be attending in just a few short months. For others, the weekend saw reunions with family and friends. Packs of CHS alumni rolled back across the town border, eager to wash their laundry, enjoy a home-cooked meal, and get back in touch with their friends. Regardless of what students did over the break, its safe to say most were glued to their TVs on Sunday night, watching what was quite obviously one of the greatest nights in Boston sports history.

Returning to school on Tuesday was certainly a nice break for CHSers; avoiding a Monday is never a bad thing! Despite a four-day school week, there was still plenty going on at 143 Pond St. Students who faired well on Advanced Placement exams last spring were honored at Wednesday night's School Committee meeting, receiving their prestigious AP Scholar awards.

While sports roll on, it is also important to note that CHS's other extra-curriculars have also begun to make strides. Articles were due last week for CHS's student-run newspaper, The Spinnaker, and the newspaper staff is eager to put together the publication and release it to the masses. CHS's Drama Club, under new director Mrs. Afanasiw (the wife of head football coach and CHS history teacher Pete Afanasiw), has started work on their newest production, LOL: A Century of Comedy. And after working so hard to put together Spirit Week and Homecoming, the CHS Student Council sets their sights on the rest of the year, which looks to be packed with new and innovative activities. Just to name a few of the many clubs and activities here at CHS.

I encourage you all to continue to come out and support Cohasset athletics, and of course, continue thinking of those college-stressed CHS seniors. Keep enjoying the fall weather, and remember to keep it classy Cohasset!

GIMME SHELTER

Moira is as pretty as a princess

There are times when animals feel sad, or even let down when the lives of their owners take an unplanned direction, or the love and attention they need is no longer there. Imagine the disappointment and despair in their hearts. This is when shelters come to the rescue, welcome them in and begin the search for the best match and home for each one. This week, our little Moira is looking for her true forever home. One that will last for a lifetime and where she will be shown the attention, affection and care that she so deserves.

Moira is a petty little princess with gorgeous green eyes, a long silky coat and fluffy tail. As a Calico, her markings are beautiful and unique. Caramel, black and white, the pattern of her fur is stunning. Her face is fascinating, with pretty pink nose, a freckle at her lip and the fur framing her eyes is perfectly divided between caramel and black. Small in size, Moira is graceful, quiet and loves sweet talk, gentle brushing and petting.

For this special kitty, a peaceful home with no other pets, where she can enjoy your company and feel safe and secure would be the perfect combination. Once she is at ease, she will love playtime, chasing strings and small toys and curling up next to you afterward.

With affection and petting, you will hear a loving, thankful purr come from Moira and just like any young cat, communication and a gentle voice will bring out the best of her sweet personality.

At about two and a half, Moira will be so happy to find the person who will welcome her in with a warm heart and shower her with a lot of love. If you have time to share with this deserving little girl, Moira might be a fabulous companion for you.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on pretty little Moira. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for their best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pet. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045.

For this special kitty, a peaceful home with no other pets, where she can enjoy your company and feel safe and secure would be the perfect combination.

This week, we have some very, very happy cats after receiving a food donation from Whole Foods in Hingham. There must be some secret ingredient in Whole Paws as each and every adult cat has been eager for more after one small taste! Since it is a healthy, natural formula, that may be the key. Thank you Whole Foods for bringing some culinary joy to our felines as they await forever homes.

Most of the time, we have wonderful and endearing happy endings for our kittens and cats here at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, but there are times when we have to say goodbye to precious little ones and loving adult cats. Every life is treasured and when they are called, it is like losing a part of our family. We continue to have help with some of our special cases and are grateful for and appreciate all that has been and is being done. To our loving foster families, shelter volunteers and the veterinarians and staff at Hingham Animal Clinic and Crazy Paws, our heartfelt thanks.

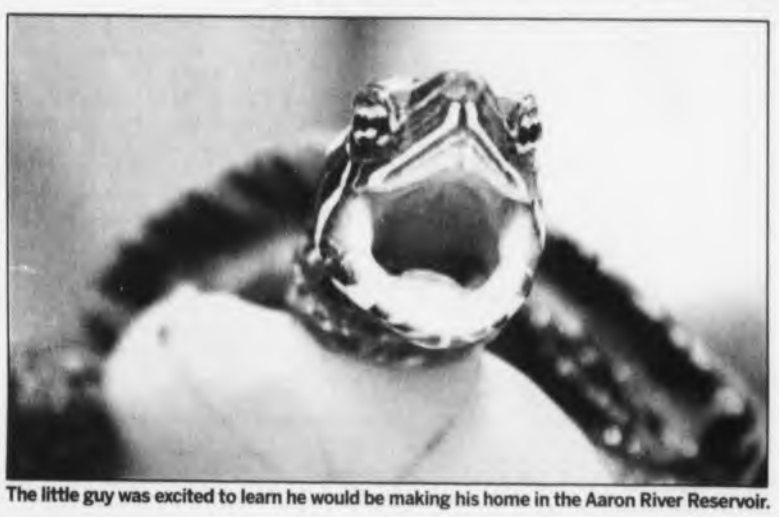
Box turtle rescued



Ian Lyster, junior project manager for the Town of Cohasset, responded to a call about a trapped turtle and went out to see if he could help out. Sure enough the little turtle was swimming around in Meetinghouse Pond.

Lyster ended up releasing him into Aaron River Reservoir where he does a lot of fishing and knows that there are also a lot of turtles there.

Clock Tower restoration under way

Preserving a Cohasset landmark

First Parish is asking for the community's help in preserving a Cohasset landmark — the clock tower of the Meeting House on the Cohasset Common.

The First Parish Meeting House has stood on Cohasset Common since 1747. When news of the battles at Concord and Lexington reached Cohasset in 1775, the entire town gathered in the Meeting House to plan their response. The structure continued to serve as the town's central meeting place for over a century.

Today, the Meeting House stands as a symbol of Cohasset's history and as the iconic centerpiece of town life. Its classic and simple beauty draws visitors from all over. Many of the town's local businesses use the structure in their advertising. It is a favorite subject for artists.

It's even included on Cohasset's Town Seal, which citizens voted for in 1898.

Currently, the Clock Tower has been undergoing significant structural work, as some of the supporting beams have failed. The actual clock belongs to the town, while the Clock Tower is the responsibility of First Parish.

Currently, the Clock Tower has been undergoing significant structural work, as some of the supporting beams have failed. The actual clock belongs to the town, while the Clock Tower is the responsibility of First Parish.

First Parish is a small congregation with a big commitment.

"Maintaining this historic building is our sacred trust, and we are doing everything we can to keep it in good repair," said Rod Hobson, who serves on the Meeting House Clock Tower Restoration Fund. "We have recently painted the entire building, and with the help of the Community Preservation Fund, restored all the windows."

The Community Preservation Committee (CPC) took on the window restoration as an article that went before the May 2012 Annual Town Meeting. Citizens voted in favor of the $65,000 in CPC funds to pay for the restoration.

However, there is still more work to be done, said Hobson.

"We have undertaken the restoration of the Clock Tower, and we are doing our best to raise a significant portion of the needed funds from within our congregation. Now, we are asking for your help."

The cost to restore the clock tower is approximately $60,000.

Said Hobson, "If you believe that the Meeting House is a community treasure and worth preserving, please contribute to the Clock Tower Fund."

There are three ways to make a tax-deductible donation:

1. By credit card – go to: firstparishcohasset.org/clocktower and click on the donate button.

2. By check – made out to Meeting House Clock Tower Restoration and sent to 23 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

3. By PayPal – if you have a PayPal account, you can send funds to clocktowerdonations@gmail.com.

If you have any questions, please call 781-383-1100 or send an email to clocktowerdonations@gmail.com. We thank you in advance for your generosity to help preserve this treasured landmark.

Cohasset Cabaret to perform 'Curtain's Up'

Cohasset Cabaret 2013, "Curtain's Up," will be performed on Friday, Nov. 8, and Saturday, Nov. 9, as well as a matinee performance on Sunday, Nov. 10.

Ticket sales are ahead of last year so Cohasset Cabaret has added another show. Many people have asked to include a matinee and the cast was happy to oblige.

Cost for matinee tickets will be $20. So those who prefer their Cabaret entertainment in the afternoon, it will take place at 1:30 p.m.

Evening performances will start with a social/raffle hour at 7 p.m., with an 8 p.m. show time. All performances will take place at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, Cohasset. Tickets are available at St. Anthony's Parish House office and the CEA office at South Shore Community Center. Friday and Saturday tickets are $25.

Back again directing this year's cabaret is Douglas Trudeau, who is known to South Shore audiences as the founder and director of the Scituate-based Showstoppers organization. He has a unique way of putting together a musical show with a great blend of fun clapping numbers along with some great comedy routines and show tunes.

For more information, call 781-413-7540.

FRIDAYS AT FIRST PARISH

Family Game Night to start

First Parish on Cohasset Common announces a series of family-oriented activities with dinner under the banner of "Fridays at First Parish" starting Friday, Oct. 18th at 5:30 p.m. Activities will be designed to help families get centered after a typically hectic week of work, child care, commuting and after-school sports — and will give parents a "free " night (free of meal preparation, free to do some socializing, and no need for a sitter!)

Families will gather in our Parish House between 5:30-8 p.m. on designated Fridays (every six weeks through May 2014, adjusted to accommodate school vacations and holidays).

Babysitting will be provided for infants, while children age 2 and above are encouraged to participate with parents, siblings, and peers.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

Veterans Summit is scheduled for Nov. 2

Representatives will be present at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St., from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Saturday, Nov. 2, for the South Shore Veteran's Benefits Forum. Questions will be answered for members of all branches of the military and their families regarding benefits, eligibility, applying for benefits, survivor benefits, benefits specific to female veterans and current expanded benefits related to the Massachusetts VALOR Act. Resources will be available to conduct break-out sessions on: Education, employment, housing, health care, legal issues and more. The Cohasset public health nurse will be available to offer flu shots, check blood pressure and answer medical questions.

CONDUCT

code was adapted from similar documents "from a bunch of different towns."

The original intent for the code, according to Kennedy, was to have "something we'd ask all public officials to adopt."

As it's stated in the code, the selectmen "ask all public officials and employees become comfortable with these expectations."

Kennedy had agreed to do some wordsmithing with Cohasset's, and said her biggest problem with the document was its redundancy — not to mention the mouthful of a title.

"The title is so cumbersome," said Kennedy. "But I can't come up with anything better because it describes what it is."

After some discussion, the board did vote on a name change — but not for the code of core values. Rather, the name of the second document up for discussion – the "Code of Conduct" for town board and committee members – was re-named as "Standards and Expectations for members of committees and boards appointed by the Board of Selectmen or Town Manager."

The selectmen discussed asking those that sit on appointed boards to review and adopt the policy.

"When you have to sign something, it makes it a little more real," said selectman Karen Quigley.

The idea is that the policy will be part of the packet of materials new appointees receive that must be signed and returned to the Town Clerk upon swearing in. All new board members are required to be sworn in at Town Hall, as well as take the state ethics exam.

"There's nothing in here that shouldn't be common sense or common decent behavior."

Selectman Diane Kennedy

A code of conduct will now go along with these other requirements.

Quigley said she didn't see how any board member wouldn't agree to these terms.

"I wouldn't think there's anyone who wouldn't want to abide" by the code, said Quigley. "Isn't this how people raise their children to behave?"

Selectman Steve Gaumer quipped, "If my kids don't show up for a meeting, I ask them to resign."

All kidding aside, Kennedy agreed, "There's nothing in here that shouldn't be common sense or common decent behavior."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that good behavior is "implicit" for officials. A town board member, she added, is "supposed to be a good citizen and be honored to be appointed and work for the town."

The selectmen discussed asking elected board members to adopt the policy as well.

"We could ask elected boards to participate; it's up to them to decide," said Quigley. "Or they could come up with their own" policy.

Town employees are not asked to sign the policy; it's a human resources issue, Kennedy explained.

"We felt from an HR point of view that we couldn't ask employees to sign off on it," she said, adding that the board was wary of setting policy standards for town staff. "It has no teeth."

The selectmen wondered if boards appointed by Troika (the town committee comprised of the Selectmen chair, Advisory Committee chair and Town Moderator) should also sign off on the policy.

Advisory chair Peter Pescatore said this "needs to be clarified," adding, "I assume the board of selectmen has policy jurisdiction over the conduct of all committees."

Selectmen chair Fred Koed wondered about this. "We may not have jurisdiction over [Troika-appointed boards] but they could easily adopt" the policy.

Gaumer noted that he believed the selectmen do have authority over some Troika-appointed boards, such as Advisory and the Capital Budget Committee, because those boards advise Town Meeting.

Koed said he wasn't clear "how far this board reaches into Troika appointments."

The selectmen took two votes on the policy – one for the name change from "code of conduct" to "standards and expectations," and one to adopt the document as a policy and have all appointed board members sign it and return it to Town Hall – both of which passed unanimously, 5-0.

However, the board took the votes without settling the Troika issue.

"We're not adding the Troika" to the policy, Kennedy answered Quigley when she asked what the board had decided.

"Then I shouldn't have said 'aye' so quickly," said Quigley.

OUR VIEW

Getting along

It is OK to disagree but not to be disagreeable.

Play nicely in the sandbox.

Establish a Code of Core Values for Civil Discourse.

They all mean the same thing: getting along with one another.

Having a code of civility and following what is common sense in terms of acceptable behavior for Selectmen should be a "no-brainer." But not in Cohasset, where the subject of civil discourse has been discussed ad nauseam including being one of the centerpieces of the recent special workshop with consultant Jeff Nutting who gave the Selectmen tips on how to be the leaders they are supposed to be.

Let's be clear: There is nothing wrong with reviewing a civility policy. In fact, it is a good thing to remind elected and appointed officials and their audiences to be respectful in debates and discussion at all times. And as Nutting said, it is important for selectmen to put any negative feelings on the shelf once a vote is taken and move on.

Sticking to the Code of Civility is the key. It does not matter how many revisions or discussions are held if the code is subsequently ignored.

Do what's best

Only in Cohasset could the news about having a budget surplus turn into a negative thing. We are not financial whizzes and can understand why the numbers confuse people – but that is why we have accountants and financial advisors!

Socking away a budget surplus into accounts where the money can be used down the road to benefit the town sounds like a good thing to us.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski is a numbers guy. Finance Director Mary Gallagher is a numbers gal. Selectmen need to trust and listen to their financial advisors. Also, in a recent letter, Dr. Paul Schubert, who is chairman of the School Committee, weighed in on the need for a Special Town Meeting to appropriate the surplus funds.

So what's the problem?

We hope a majority of the board is not balking because they are afraid of Citizens Petitions coming forward. If Citizens Petitions surface, then so what? When was Cohasset ever fearful of a little controversy?

We have confidence that Special Town Meeting voters will deal with the issues and do the right thing for the town. Let's schedule it and move forward.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the right (by the candy display) after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Organic program rather then pesticide use

The following letter was sent to the Board of Selectmen, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski and Dick Avery, chairman of the Open Space Committee with a copy to the Mariner for publication.

Sept. 26, 2013 was a beautiful day at the Cohasset Farmers Market. Vendors were selling their wares, families were gathered around the musician and enjoying the beauty of the historic Common, many dogs were in the "Pet Parade" and all was right with the world.

Imagine my surprise and shock when I found a little yellow sign at the base of one of the Common trees stating, "CAUTION PESTICIDE APPLICATION KEEP OFF." The sign had the handwritten date of July 19th on the back. I looked up at the green, covered with small children and families on the grass as they do every Thursday for our Farmers Market, and wondered how this could possibly be.

Massachusetts has a series of regulations that requires schools and municipalities to display signage before and after any spraying occurs. What does Cohasset do to alert the citizens to pesticide use on the Common? Has there been any movement towards an organic approach to healthy soil and therefore a healthy, nontoxic lawn? The perception may be that organic controls are more expensive, but what is the price of a healthy child and a healthy community? Statistics prove that over time an organic program costs less than a conventional program because your soil and its microbes do all of the work.

As the Director of Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset, I would be more than happy to discuss organic resources for the town. We have been certified organic since 1998, and produce the healthiest produce you can eat. We can work with the various town departments to teach and encourage the change over from conventional to organic. Please do the right thing for the townspeople and family dogs that frequent the Common. It will save lives and increase biodiversity at the heart of the town, as well as act as an excellent role model for those skeptics who don't understand the consequences of a chemical environment. I look forward to hearing from you.

COMMENTARY

Flip flop on Special Town Meeting is disappointing

DIANE KENNEDY

I challenge my colleagues on the Board of Selectmen, and the community, to put personal attitudes and biases aside and start listening, objectively.

During the past few months of arduous and contentious Tuesday night Board of Selectmen's meetings, I have been disappointed in the "flip-flopping" the Board has shown on some relatively straightforward decisions as well as the Board's disinterest in listening to and considering varied voices on matters important to the town's residents.

The most recent "flip flop" relates to a Special Town Meeting. After months of questioning the Acting Town Manager's desire to avoid a Special Town Meeting unless it was necessary, the Board has once again, changed course and is refusing to call a Special Town Meeting to make important budget adjustments. Cohasset has historically had a fall Special Town Meeting and there is at least $1.3 million in free cash from FY13 (plus additional, unanticipated state aid) to be assigned to the current year budget. The Board's reluctance to have any kind of substantive discussion on the merits of a STM is perplexing to me.

Franklin Roosevelt said the "only thing to fear is fear itself." These words keep coming to me and, unfortunately, this is where we are: The rumors, the innuendo, the "what are they up to" and the transacting in conspiracy theories have officially taken over good governance and good, deliberative consensus building. When I questioned my colleagues about their new reluctance to have a STM, they informed me that rumors of some citizens petitions were swirling about and they wanted to avoid these. Excuse me? One, I know of no organized citizens petitions. Two, our government — both local, state and federal — has been built on the fundamentals of citizens petitions. Is that not what the Declaration of Independence was? If there is a reactionary citizens petition afoot, let it come before the Town and be discussed on its merits. How can we stand in the way of that?

I am concerned that the voices of the community are not being heard, and in some cases are not being allowed to speak, as was the case on Tuesday. Many Board meetings have become conversations among the members and the public; managing public input is an exceedingly difficult task and I recognize the challenges the Chairman has in keeping the meetings productive and focused on the business of the Town. However, to allow free-form discussion on one hand and then refuse to welcome input from the Chairman of the School Committee, who watched patiently from the audience for three hours and then raised his hand to be recognized, only adds to the utter lack of objective debate that is currently taking place.

We spent almost one hour this week parsing words from a 2011 Code of Civility that the Board passed and reaffirmed a few weeks ago. Yet, the Board doesn't have the "bandwidth" to discuss the financial implications of a Special Town Meeting? Or to hear the comments of the School Committee chairman?

I challenge my colleagues on the Board of Selectmen, and the community, to put personal attitudes and biases aside and start listening, objectively. Take the time to read and commit to the substance of the two documents we reviewed, again, on Tuesday evening. In closing, I note one of the values in the Code of Civility: "Leadership — We shall lead by example, using appropriate interpersonal skills, and shall strive to maximize citizen and staff involvement in decisions and initiatives that further the goals of the community."

Diane Kennedy is vice chairman of the Board of Selectmen; she lives at 59 Jerusalem Road Drive.

'COHASSET DEMOCRAT OF THE YEAR'

Collins to be honored at South Shore Democratic Caucus Dinner

"True to her father's legacy, Gail is a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat for whom helping people always comes first."
– Agnes McCann

By a unanimous vote, lifelong Cohasset resident Gail Collins was recently selected to be the 2013 "Democrat of the Year" by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. On Friday, Oct. 18. Gail will be honored at the South Shore Democratic Caucus's annual dinner, along with honorees from the eight Democratic town committees of the Plymouth and Norfolk Senate Seat. The event will be held at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham. Tickets are $45, a portion of which comes back to town committee's treasury. The festivities start at 6 p.m. with a cash bar followed by dinner at 7 p.m. and the program at 8 p.m. For information, contact CDTC Treasurer Peter Pescatore at pjpescatore@gmail.com.

A member of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee since the 1970s, Gail currently serves as recording secretary. She has also been chief coordinator of the CDTC's regular Cohasset Food Pantry drives for many years.

Kevin McCarthy, outgoing Chair of both the South Shore Democratic Caucus and the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, had this to say about Gail: "During my term as Chair of the Cohasset Democratic Committee, Gail was an indispensable member of the leadership team and, even more importantly, a good and loyal friend to all committee members." Kevin will also be saluted on Friday night for his leadership roles on both committees.

Lifelong resident

Gail grew up in Cohasset and recalls a home rich with interesting discussions about political and social issues and ideas. Her father, Dan Kearney, was an activist and a beloved member of both the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee and the South Shore Democratic Caucus. Having started work at age 14 as a Western Union delivery boy, he later went on to be a contract negotiator for the federal government and retired as National Vice President of the American Federation of Government Employees for New England and New York State. With her father, Gail heard JFK and Adalai Stevenson speak at a union convention in New York City in the late 50s. She later became an ardent admirer of Senator, then President, Kennedy, whose loss she felt deeply.

Gail graduated from the State College at Boston in 1964 with a bachelor's degree in elementary education (later earning her master's degree in moderate special needs from Lesley College). This was the early days of special education before legislation to accommodate all special needs children in Massachusetts, and there was little in the way of special assistance or materials available in the classroom. In fact, one of Gail's classmates at Boston State, Massachusetts Congressman Mike Daly, later wrote and sponsored the bill to upgrade special needs education that we now know as Chapter 766.

Gail taught in Charlestown in the mid-1960s before starting her family – Daniel, Matthew, Andrew and Laurel – with her husband (and Cohasset High School Class of '59 sweetheart) Fran Collins. She went on to serve as a public school teacher in Cohasset and in Stamford and Greenwich, Conn. and as director of the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School. In 2002 she retired from teaching at Cardinal Cushing Center in Hanover, a residential school for special needs students, and began tutoring reading in a special needs school in Braintree. In addition to politics, her interests have included Scouting, the Cohasset Historical Society, Friends of the Cohasset Library and facilitating a national program for adults at St. Anthony Parish to help protect children from sexual abuse.

Inspiration

Just as her father provided inspiration, Gail continues to inspire others and make an impact. Her daughter Laurel, who now lives in Washington, DC, describes how her mother passed this legacy on to the next generation:

"It was rare that Democratic politics and issues were not part of our family's daily conversations," Laurel says. "The values imparted by my Mom — being engaged in the democratic process, voting, social justice and human rights issues, care for the poor and disadvantaged and protecting the environment — certainly had an impact on her children: an engineer who designs green homes, a doctor who treats the underserved at a community health clinic, and a social worker serving refugees and immigrants. I am grateful for the example my Mom set and the values she has passed on to me."

Quotes

From her fellow Cohasset Democratic Town Committee members:

COLLEGE CONNECTION

Strategies for a successful college essay

STEPHANIE SEARS

When you are writing about something you love, the writing comes easier. You are the expert on you, and everyone has a great tale to tell.

Terrifying, immobilizing, and stressful are adjectives students have described about writing the main 650-word Common App essay. It's easy to understand the pressure. Having read hundreds of papers while in the admissions office of a selective college, I have seen a page and half make or break a student's acceptance. For a young person whose application was on the edge or wound up in the second pile, an insightful, well-written essay tipped the balance. Conversely, I have also seen a student present high grades and test scores, but grammatical errors and lack of depth in the essay resulted in a denial.

Yet, it does not have to the crucible of the fall semester. It is an amazing opportunity to express something that is not otherwise reflected in your application. The first question inevitably is then, "What should I write about?" My response is always the same, that the first-person pronoun is a mighty tool. Use it to tell a magnificent and true story. Not that every essay will be a shining mountaintop experience. Some of the best essays I have read were about mistakes made and lessons learned, and the difficult decisions young people often have to make in all areas of life. If you have ever told a story to your family or friends, you have the foundation for a fabulous essay. Write about something that you are passionate about and then go into detail about why it's important to you. The rest of your application will explain your extracurricular activities, so the essay is the time to highlight not only your writing abilities but what separates you from the thousands of other applicants who have similar resumes.

However, this is not to time to write about how your trip to Mexico or a sports injury forever changed your life. I can promise you that these subjects are a dime a dozen, quickly tossed aside. Instead, what matters to you? What incites or inspires you? When you are writing about something you love, the writing comes easier. You are the expert on you, and everyone has a great tale to tell.

A large part of the essay is the subject matter. However, admissions officers also want to see that you are ready for college level work, so mechanics and style are equally as important. Before George Orwell wrote 1984, he penned "Politics and the English Language" in which he listed five important lessons to sue while writing. Simply paraphrased, a short word is often better than a long one. Don't use metaphors, similes, or clichés. If you can cut a word out, then please do. Active verbs supersede passive ones. Instead of using a foreign phrase, scientific word, or jargon, try to think of an everyday equivalent. Following these guidelines will streamline your writing.

Remember that spellcheck is not always your friend. Too often "fried" is used for "friend", "farm" for "form", and "form" for "from". It's funny until those are the mistakes that jeopardize your essay. While you should certainly use spellcheck, it is no substitute for an adult who can proofread context and grammar. You can also ask this person who knows you well, "Does this sound like me?" It should, and the seasoned reader will be able to tell when it's not.

Lastly, resist the urge to write what you think the reader wants to hear. Present yourself as you are to a college, rather than how you imagine they might want you to be. They are looking for ways to accept the wonderful person you are, not some made-up version.

FOR THE RECORD

Where were you when...

GREGORY MATHIS

But perhaps the moment most remembered – at least by those born during the Baby Boomer generation, or earlier – came shortly after noon on Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas, Texas.

There are moments in history that capture the collective attention of the nation. Unfortunately, many of those moments are tragic.

Until the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, the most costly strike on American soil in terms of loss of life came at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

But perhaps the moment most remembered – at least by those born during the Baby Boomer generation, or earlier – came shortly after noon on Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas, Texas.

Ask anyone of that age where he or she was and what they were doing when they heard President John F. Kennedy was shot and you'll most certainly hear a story so detailed it will sound as if it happened yesterday.

The 50-year anniversary of that fateful day in American history is rapidly approaching and many will be reliving that moment once again as news outlets will be filing special reports marking the tragic milestone.

News traveled much differently in 1963. For some reason, President Kennedy's motorcade through Dealey Plaza in Dallas wasn't considered interesting enough by the major news networks for live coverage. Today, a president's every move is followed closely.

There was obviously no up-to-the-minute coverage on the Internet, or details of the president being shot flooding Twitter. Times were very different.

For those of us too young to remember JFK's assassination, there have been other moments that lend themselves to the question, where were you when...?

My first "moment" was John Lennon being shot and killed outside The Dakota on Dec. 8, 1980. I was dozing off to sleep in the waning moments of a Monday Night Football game between the Patriots and Miami Dolphins, and Howard Cosell's suddenly somber tone caught my attention. Being a big Beatles fan, particularly a John Lennon fan, I didn't get any sleep the rest of the night.

Another big moment came as a rookie reporter in January 1986 when the Space Shuttle Challenger exploded on live television as we watched – stunned – on the newsroom television.

The onset of Operation Desert Storm is another moment etched in memory. We were suddenly watching the breakout of war in Iraq live on CNN on Jan. 17, 1991 with Wolf Blitzer calling the play-by-play.

Sept. 11 was the moment of all moments, in my opinion. While the assassination of a president is certainly tragic and shocking, what transpired that Tuesday morning was horrifying beyond belief. As we watched the second plane strike the second tower on the small television tucked away in the corner of the newsroom, and heard of other planes being hijacked in other parts of the East Coast, it wasn't a huge leap to think the entire country was somehow under attack. Like Desert Storm, we watched in disbelief as the tragedy unfolded before our eyes.

Those feelings of being attacked were most definitely stirred this past April as the Boston Marathon bombings brought tragedy to our very doorsteps. And there are other moments that evoke such a visceral response. Please share those with me at gmathis@wickedlocal.com and I'll include your response in an upcoming column. And if you have a JFK story, please share that as well as we gear up for our own coverage of that tragic moment in our country's history.

CDTC Movie Night on Oct. 25

The first in 2013/2014 series of films presented by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be "A Place at the Table," a documentary released in 2012 by filmmakers Kristi Jacobson and Lori Silverbush. The film examines incidents of hunger experienced by millions of Americans and stars Jeff Bridges, founder of The Hunger Network. The cast includes Massachusetts Congressman James McGovern, who was one of four members of Congress who pledged to live for a week on an average food stamp budget. The average SNAP, Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, food stamps, budget is $4 per day. According to the Food Research and Action Council, one in four United States households with children report the inability to afford enough food.

The film will be shown at 7 p.m., on Friday, Oct. 25, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. CDTC movies are free.

New website on board's wishlist

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A new town website will be on the way — eventually.

That's the word selectmen were given during their Tuesday, Oct. 15 meeting. The board discussed a new town website as one of their goals for the year.

The current website has gotten its fair share of complaints.

"We don't have the same capabilities other town websites do," such as a bill-paying feature or updated contact information, said selectman Karen Quigley. "Maybe we need to look at a template where committees could submit [updates] themselves."

The board discussed utilizing Virtual Town Hall, a website portal for municipal governments.

"It's not the bricks and mortar town hall but is the electronic town hall," said Quigley. "It contains all the information and reference materials" for the town.

"It's a type of web page that allows every committee to be responsible for their own page," selectmen chair Fred Koed explained.

Selectman Steve Gaumer suggested the board articulate a "wish list" of four to five features they'd like to see on a website, and submit the list to the town's Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell.

Gaumer added that while the Virtual Town Hall model does allow for committee control, it could lead to "monkey business," depending on how secure the portal is.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said that many of the functions they're looking for already exist on the current town website, however, "Good lick finding them... It's not well-organized."

Quigley noted that Bonnell, who splits his time between the town departments and the schools, is a busy guy.

"They have a wanted poster for him at the police department," said Quigley, adding that Bonnell is also in-demand to do work at the library, schools, Elder Affairs and Town Hall. "He's one person," Quigley added.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the "wanted poster" for Bonnell has since been removed from the police department, explaining that the CTO's work with public safety is done.

"He resolved their issues months ago," Milanoski said of Bonnell.

In the meantime, the CTO does seem to have his work cut out for him.

"Rob's priority, clearly, is building up the security of our infrastructure and creating an end-user ability," said Milanoski, so that "every staff person and student has access to computers."

The acting town manager said Bonnell is a few months away from completing that goal.

Milanoski added that much of the work on the new website – the back end, or database and the front end, what the user sees – is functional. The trick is the implementation, and to "train all the department heads" on how to use and update the site.

This special training is "not high in the pecking order," Milanoski admitted, adding that Bonnell does plan to hold a training seminar.

Kennedy said that while "the fact that we have a CTO for the town is great," she was concerned about having only one support person for the entire town. She wondered if the board should budget some consulting money for the upcoming fiscal year to help manage the workload.

Milanoski said that Bonnell has been training high school students to form an IT squad; however, he does bring in consultants on occasion, most recently regarding the town's phone system, which Milanoski said is being held together "with duct tape and bubblegum."

Still, said Kennedy, "I think we need to be cognizant... all these updates in technology can't be on the shoulders of one or two people. We need to plan accordingly."

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Books, toys and more

Buttonwood celebrates 25 years of business

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As Betsey Detwiler, founder and former owner of Buttonwood Books and Toys recently told the Mariner, after spending a quarter-century running a local shop, "You really get a slice of life."

After 25 years in business, the staff at Buttonwood, an independent bookstore, has certainly seen it all. Customers come and go, and many stick around — and bring their children and grandchildren in to enjoy the store that they have grown to love over two and a half decades.

Co-owner and former Deer Hill teacher Arna Lewis said, "I'm meeting kids who are now having children, who are coming in with their grandparents who are original customers. To see the continuity of families shopping in the store is a wonderful aspect of being in business."

Buttonwood Books and Toys has been a Cohasset retail fixture since 1989. Betsey also opened a "kids-only" branch in Hingham five years later, although that store closed after 10 years in business.

Cohasset's Buttonwood, located in the Shaw's plaza along Chief Justice Cushing Highway, is still going strong. Betsey retired this past summer, however remaining an important part of the shop.

The new owners, Arna and Kathy Detwiler (Betsey's daughter-in-law), who took the helm in August, intend to have a special toast to Buttonwood's founder during the store's upcoming 25th anniversary celebration.

"We hope people will stop by, say hi, and take advantage of the sale. It's our way to say thank you to the customers," said Kathy.

The Buttonwood staff has a full day of activities planned for the celebration, to be held on Saturday, Oct. 26 from 11 a.m. to close (see sidebar).

"For us, what we really want to reflect on is to extend a deep appreciation for all the loyal customers who shop here," said Arna. "They're the backbone of why we're celebrating; they have been supporting Buttonwood throughout the years."

To those who have poured a lot of time, energy and love into Buttonwood, it's more than just a store.

"Our tagline is 'rooted in the community,'" said Arna. "That's something we've wanted to enhance over the years — the community spirit. We hope we will be the go-to place in that regard."

Buttonwood's owners hope to offer more to the customers and community than just a place to pick up a toy or book.

"We want to work more closely with the schools and encourage people to use us in a way to come together," Arna explained, adding that Buttonwood hosts around four events per month, around 50 a year, such as a "Coffee with the Authors" breakfast at the Atlantica Restaurant.

Buttonwood also has reading groups and a Wednesday story time for kids.

"We embrace those kinds of events," said Arna, and the staff hopes to have "more programs for teachers and kids."

- When: Saturday, Oct. 26 at Buttonwood, 11 a.m. – 6 p.m.
- Where: 747 CJC Hwy. (Rt.3A), Cohasset.

Also around 4 p.m., prior to McLean's event, there will be a special toast to Buttonwood founder Betsey Detwiler.
- More: Available throughout the day there will be a Spirograph toy activity and a special one-day sale, 25 percent off all items in the store. Wine and cheese will be available at the 4 p.m. event.

While Buttonwood has many exciting plans for the future, at the end of the day, the store still provides a fun place for kids and adults to browse the colorful shelves looking for the perfect book or toy.

"We spend a lot of time with our customers," said Kathy, which is "one of the things that's unique about being a smaller, independent store."

Kathy, who has a background in social work for those with developmental disabilities, said that the Buttonwood staff often receives special requests for materials from therapists who are looking for book-toy combinations for children with disabilities. Buttonwood carries a "variety of choices" of toys geared as specific learning tools.

"We're really committed to having the customer leave with what they were looking for," said Kathy.

"We try to match the perfect toy or book with the individual," Arna added.

And if that certain item isn't found in the store that day, Buttonwood's staff is happy to place an order.

"The special ordering process is a really important component of our business," said Kathy.

Arna explained, "A customer can come in and order any book. Depending on the day, there can be a quick turnaround; we can [sometimes] have it in the next day."

While Buttonwood is known for its selection of children's books and unique toys, working directly with toy inventors and creators, Buttonwood also has plenty of books and events for adults, including book clubs and author talks.

Buttonwood also has a new gift corner, encouraging customers to shop local for the holidays. Unlike many other retailers, the shop offers complimentary gift-wrapping — no matter how big or small the gift.

The children's book section was also recently expanded. Arna, a former Deer Hill teacher, brings with her to Buttonwood a background in teaching children's literature.

"I really try to put the right book into the right kids' hands," said Arna. Of the newly expanded children's section, "We put together an area with early and middle readers, and a lot of non-fiction titles. A lot of kids who don't like to read can learn and love to read," she added.

We do have a lot of kids coming in and sitting on our stools and reading."

Longevity – and loyality – seem to be the key to Buttonwood's success.

"We have an incredible, very loyal staff that works here," Kathy continued. "We have one person who's been here almost 24 years and people who have been here well over a decade."

And in the days of online ordering and e-readers, a brick and mortar bookstore has become a rare commodity. Buttonwood's staff is well-aware of this shift, and are doing what they can to stay on top of it.

"What's really changed is we have the internet," said Kathy. "It makes us be on our toes; we have to keep up with what people are looking for, keep things evolving, keep the inventory fresh and stimulating."

E-books are on their way to Buttonwood; Arna explained that they are in talks with their wholesaler to offer a way for customers to buy books to read on their e-readers and tablets.

"We are looking into that, and hope to fill those shoes, too," said Arna.

For now, the store does have wi-fi. Being able to browse the internet and shop is one way to keep customers staying for a long time.

"We want to encourage people to come in" and stay a while, said Arna. "We're all in a rush these days... We put more chairs in to encourage people to sit and browse."

There are also small stools and tables making up a picture reading book area, the former fifth-grade teacher added.

"We really want people to come in and stay."

Toasting to 25 years

Next Saturday, Buttonwood will toast to 25 years in business — but not without taking a moment to recognize the woman who made it all possible.

On Oct. 26, just before 4 p.m., the Buttonwood staff will have a toast for Betsey Detwiler, who founded the independent store 25 years ago.

"We're doing a special dedication to Betsey to honor her years at Buttonwood," said Kathy Detwiler, co-owner and Betsey's daughter-in-law. "We want to invite any of her friends and former colleagues to toast a glass of wine to her.

"It's certainly a celebration of her hard-earned years and efforts, working multiple hours on the computer, working the desk and ordering books," Kathy added. "She's done an incredible job."

COMMENTARY

Holding Special Town Meeting makes prudent financial sense

STEVE GAUMER

"You – the Board of Selectmen- have become the best entertainment on Tuesday night television"
— Cohasset Voter, 10/16/13

The comment I received this past Wednesday was not meant as a compliment. We've earned it. Consider this:

- It has taken this board five months to address our primary task —setting goals — yet we take almost no time to ignore those we have established;
- We can take more than an hour to edit an established policy statement, yet don't have the "bandwidth" to hold a special town meeting.
- We lead the league in "prepared statements," yet don't seem to grasp the most elementary requirements of the job for which we are elected.
- We make great noise about an adoption of "core values for civil discourse" yet routinely discard those values in our interactions with the town manager.

The latest madcap adventure surrounds the need, or desire, for a Special Town Meeting, which is being resisted by three of your five selectmen.

Special Town Meeting (STM) is typically held in the fall. Cohasset has consistently held one for the past three decades. The purpose for holding a meeting is to allow you (voters) to weigh in on items that may need attention sooner than Annual Town Meeting.

Typically, these items have surrounded the application of "free cash." A bit of a misnomer, free cash is a term used for excess funds remaining after the close of the prior fiscal year. Other items can include settling unpaid bills any other warrant articles voted for inclusion by the selectmen, or originating from the citizens.

This year, thanks in large part to the Financial Management Policies adopted by Annual Town Meeting in 2012, the town has a free cash balance of $1.3 million. These policies, endorsed by your Board of Selectmen, call for applying this one-time cash realization, to stabilization funds. Stabilization funds you may recall are like savings accounts; their balances can be spent only for their stated purposes (like Capital Expenses, or Post Employment Benefit liabilities) and money can only be withdrawn with your (Town Meeting's) approval.

In addition to the $1.3 million in free cash, we have a known surplus for our current fiscal year of at least $437,000, possibly as much as $600,000.

All of this money will remain in a cash deposit account unless it is transferred with your approval, to our stabilization funds, as recommended by your finance team.

Within the cash deposit account, it will earn little interest (estimated at 0.5 percent annually). Deposited to stabilization funds, the dollars can be invested for longer-term use. Last year our stabilization fund deposits earned a bit over 6 percent. Common sense alone compels us to make this deposit.

Yet, the most important reason to take these actions is this:

- These are the directives of town meeting and our own endorsed policies.

Our policies were crafted two years ago at the height of our fiscal and governmental crisis, to set us on a course of sustainable fiscal stability. Adherence to these policies have yielded extraordinary results, including a bond rating upgrade (at AA+, we are just one notch away from our goal of AAA), two years' worth of budget surplus and the makings of a plan to deal with our $38 million OPEB liability.

Holding Special Town Meeting to ask you for your consent to transfer these funds is necessary, prudent and plain common sense. Yet three of the Board of Selectmen continue avoid making the decision to hold the event.

We are stewards of the town and its finances, yet we show little interest in performing our duty as we continue to avoid calling for Special Town Meeting. The logic, common sense and financial arguments are indisputable. So, what could be the reason for their resistance? I have asked; they won't answer my question. Maybe they will answer yours.

Swim Trust land swap, Cable board members

Two recent news items warrant clarification.

A news brief recently reported that the Board of Selectmen deeded a parcel of land to the Cohasset Swimming and Recreation Trust (CSRT), which would in turn swap the land to create a lot for the future town Senior Center.

A transfer of the property, a parcel on North Main Street, was authorized by the 1974 Town Meeting, making the lot compliant. However, the transfer was never recorded and the transaction never occurred, so the 2012 Town Meeting voted again to authorize the selectmen to transfer the parcel to the CSRT. A September selectmen vote to approve the transfer carried out the will of those two Town Meetings.

This action, however, does not affect the Senior Center project, as the news item suggested. While the selectmen voted in April to transfer land to the Social Service League, which is building the new Senior Center, last month's transfer was a separate issue.

Also, in an article on the Cable Advisory Committee seeking new members, the Mariner reported that a former member was attorney Rob Hillman. While Hillman attended many meetings in the past and offered legal counsel, Hillman, who works for Town Counsel firm Deutsch-Williams, never actually sat on the board. The committee still utilizes Hillman for counsel.

Jim Morrison previously served on the board and was replaced by Rick Shiffman when he resigned last year. Merle Brown was appointed to the committee two weeks ago.

The Mariner regrets these errors.

Real Estate taxes due Nov. 1

Cohasset Real Estate and Personal Property Taxes are due Friday, Nov. 1. This has been in place since Cohasset voted for a quarterly billing system in 1992. What is different is that two bills are being mailed together. The bill for these taxes was mailed in June, along with the bill due Aug. 1 and a notice explaining the change.

In the past residents would have received bills around now to prompt them to pay their taxes. It is expected several residents who have never been late will miss this due date. So this reminder is to minimize that number as much as possible. It has been and continues to be the policy of the Treasurer/Collector's Office to never forgive interest, unless the officer or its vendor made a mistake.

There are four due dates but bills are mailed only twice a year. On or before Dec. 31 the town will be mailing Feb. 1 and May 1 bills together. This is a common practice for municipalities to reduce mailing costs and will be continuing in Cohasset. There are paper and electronic reminders around town in an effort to help remind taxpayers of the due date.

Payment Options:

- The best way to pay is through the town's website and online payment vendor UniPay Gold at www.cohassetma.org.
- Mail a check and the remittance slip to the town's lockbox: Town of Cohasset, PO Box 442, Reading, MA 01867-0642. Postmarks do not count.
- Mail a check and the remittance slip to Town Hall addressed to the Tax Collector, 41 Highland Ave, Cohasset, MA 02025. Postmarks do not count.
- Bring a check and the remittance slip to Town Hall (Second Floor, 41 Highland Ave). Business hours are Mon., Wed. and Thurs. 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Tues. 8:30 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.; and Fri. 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.
- Online payment through your bank results in a paper check being mailed to the Town. Postmark dates do not count. Also, please make sure your account number is appropriate for the bill you are paying to avoid delays in processing your payment.

HUGE GAMES

Field hockey

The Cohasset field hockey team will play a hige game today at 4 p.m. against South Shore League power Monomoy.

Monomoy and Cohasset have been battling for league supremacy this season, with both heading into the game with 8-1 league records.

Cohasset beat Monomoy 1-0 earlier in the season.

The Skippers are led by Caty Gilman's 20 goals and 10 assists and Aly Lahey's 14 goals and 13 assists.

There will be a pep rally for the Skippers at 3 p.m. at Alumni Stadium before the game.

MORE HUGE GAMES

Football

The Cohasset football team will celebrate Senior Night Friday, Oct. 25 at home against Mashpee.

If the Skippers beat Carver tonight at Carver, they will win the South Shore League with a victory over Mashpee.

A win tonight will qualify Cohasset for playoffs.

The same night will also be Teacher Appreciation Night.

Come out and cheer on your Skippers.

COACHING

Vacancy

Hingham High School has a coaching vacancy for the Head Coach of Varsity Softball. The season begins on the third Monday in March and ends in early June. Interested candidates should send cover letter and resume to Athletic Director, Margaret Conaty via email mconaty@hinghamschools.org.

FOOTBALL

Confident future

Football looking toward playoffs, title

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Two weeks ago, the Cohasset football team faced some adversity in a 28-12 loss to Abington that in years past may have been devastating.

Until the current season, where the South Shore League split into Large and Small Divisions, the loss to Abington would have put the Skippers behind the Green Wave in the League Standings, needing help just to get a sniff at the playoffs.

This year, with the new format, Abington was just another non-league game for the Skippers, and they quickly forgot about that game by beating Monomoy 50-6 to improve to 4-1 (2-0 South Shore League small) in their next game.

"So far so good," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "With one small exception."

There have been many reasons thie year's group has done well.

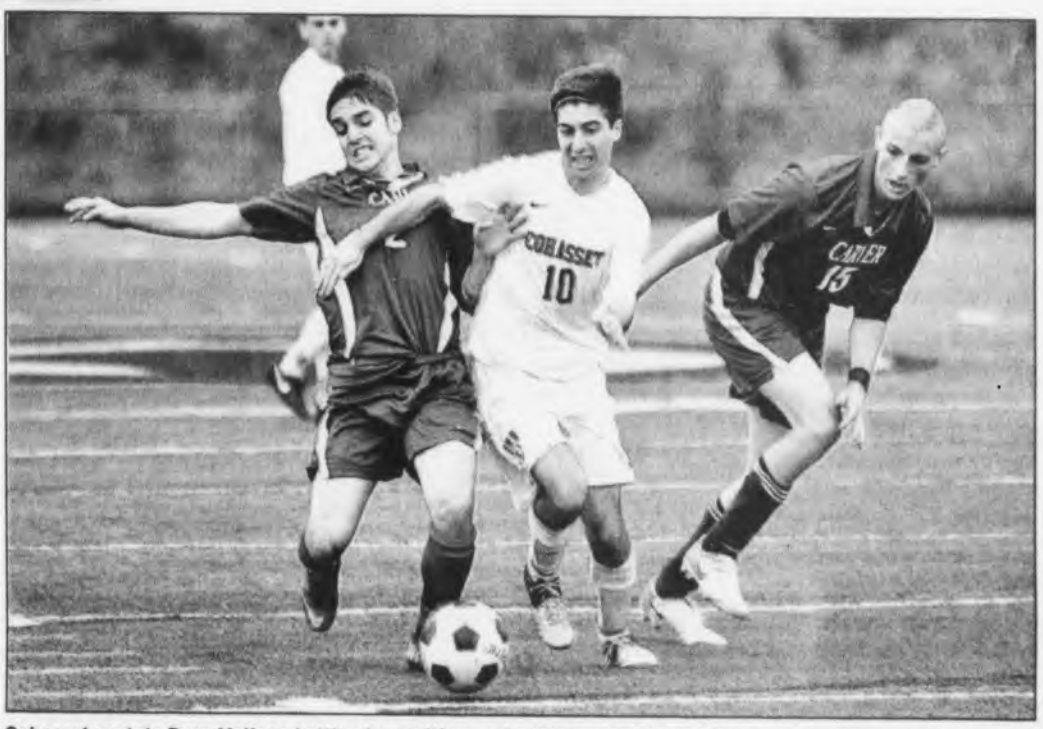
BOYS SOCCER

Biggest win

Skippers stun Carver

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com



The Cohasset boys soccer team had been rolling along, picking up wins on the way to qualifying for the MIAA Tournament and chasing the South Shore League title.

The League is still up for grabs, but Cohasset helped itself toward the goal with an exciting 2-1 win over Carver, Friday.

Joe Buckley scored both goals for Cohasset in the win.

Cohasset coach Jim Willis felt his team played one of their better games of the season on the offensive side, and it was huge factor.

"Our problem earlier in the season is as the game went on, and the balls weren't going for us, we'd get out of our game and wouldn't play good team offense anymore. Today they didn't do that. They kept moving the ball, they were passing the ball, attacking the ball and they got two goals out of it. Joe got two. He got a great cross from Sam Morris, and the second he made happen by himself. That's why you just shot. You never know what's going to happen."

Buckley has been a lifesaver for the offense this year, with 13 goals.

He started his first three years playing defense, and moved to striker this season. Buckley leads Cohasset's scoring.

"He told me he wanted to be striker and I said shut up, no you're not," Willis said. "After the first two games, it (the offense) just wasn't working. We put him up there and he went on a tear. He scored our first five goals. He's the center on the basketball team and he plays like it. He's always physical, boxing out for position. He's also relentless."

Willis knew the league was tight.

"We knew going into the game today that we were three points back (of Carver) in the league," Willis said. "So we knew that we needed to win to still have a shot in the league."

Each team had a handful of scoring chances in the first half but came up empty. Cohasset goalkeeper Pat Federle made a point-blank save early in the first half, and Carver goalie Kevin Harkins responded with a save from close range midway through the first half to keep the game scoreless.

It took just over 12 minutes for Cohasset to get on the board. Morris had possession

Team scores 55 at Tewksbury competition

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset 2013 varsity cheerleading team has been working hard this season, and recently attended the Tewksbury Cheerleading Invitational, October 13 at Tewskbury Memorial High School.

Cohasset competed against five teams and finished with a total score of 55, meeting the goal coaches had set for the team.

Cohasset will stay busy with a competition Sunday (October 20) at the Milford Cheerleading Invitational at Milford High School.

That competition starts at 12 p.m.

Sunday, November 10, the team heads for the South Shore League and Green Wave Invitational Varsity Cheerleading Competition at Abington High School (12 p.m. start).

The team has been working hard on their routines, directed by new coach this year Danielle Hoffman and lead by captains Madison Sullivan and Jesse Lyons.

The team has also made pink bows to wear during games in October in support of Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

of the ball and was racing toward the left side of the net when he lofted a crossing pass in front. Buckley headed it into the top right corner to give the Skippers a 1-0 lead.

Less than two minutes later, Buckley was at it again. The senior midfielder gained possession of the ball inside the box, and used his big frame to shield off a Carver defender. Buckley, a defensive standout last year when he was a Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic pick, gathered himself and fired a shot that ricocheted off the leg of a Carver defender and bounced into the net to give the Skippers a 2-0 lead.

In the next game, a day later, Willis said his defense was "on fumes" by the end of the game, but thanks to junior goalkeeper Patrick Federle, the Skippers had enough in the tank Friday to hold on for a scoreless tie against Archbishop Williams.

Cohasset (9-3-2) was coming off Thursday's big South Shore League win over first-place Carver.

"We were pretty wiped," Willis said. "That was two nights in a row against very good teams. (Federle) saved us. Archies had a lot of very, very difficult shots from outside that were knuckling, and the ball was wet. Federle made a couple of great one-handed saves. The whole defense played fantastic."

Cohasset is on a 10-game unbeaten streak (8-0-2) since stumbling to a 1-3 start. The Skippers had pitched seven straight shutouts before a 2-2 tie with Abington and the 2-1 conquest of Carver this week. Federle had five of the shutouts in the streak; classmate Jack Chamberlain had the other two.

Cohasset hosted Norwell on Tuesday in a big South Shore League matchup that went Norwell's way with a 3-0 Norwell victory.

"Right now, we have great leadership," Afanasiw said. "We have three captains (Chris Haggerty, Jack McElgunn and Mickey Barry) that have been doing a great job. They have been keys. There is also great team chemistry."

Afanasiw likes the makeup of the team.

"This is my biggest senior class by far," he said. "They are special. Each man checks their attitude at the door, although there were no attitudes to start with."

Afanasiw said at times, practices could be as intense as games.

"These guys challenge each other in practice," he said. "They love to play. In some ways, practices are harder, more physical and sometimes more intense than some games."

With the big senior class and a program with huge numbers, participation that would still be big at much bigger schools, more players have been able to get on the field, leading to Afanasiw having the luxury of playing dedicated offensive and defensive units.

"Injuries are way down and depth is excellent," Afanasiw said. "The seniors came back leading the way. They had great off-seasons and are leading the way. Everyone has been reaping the benefits."

Some of the benefits have come in one-sided victories over Hull and Monomoy, where Afanasiw was able to use his bench liberally.

"The hard work pays off on Friday nights," he said. "Everyone gets to play. I have freshmen who have gotten letters this year because they've played enough. It's great because the younger players have been able to get repetitions."

Some of the younger players who have been playing well include sophomore Nick hall, who has played running back and linebacker.

Cole Kissick looks to bounce the ball to the sidelines for a big gain. STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

"Nick has played regularly with the varsity as a sophomore," Afanasiw said. "He brings a lot of physicality. Sophomore Jack Donohue. He's done very well at tight end and defensive end."

Junior Alex Norton, who is only in his second season playing football, has helped solidify the offensive line.

With the big leads, sophomore Danny Axelson has been able to take some snaps, as has freshman Xander Schubert.

Bobby Driscoll, Chris Norton (RB/LB), Max Fitzgerald and Jake Johnson have also seen regular playing time.

Afanasiw said competition has still been tough, but his Skippers have done the job.

Hull is Hull," he said, knowing mostly what to expect from his regular Thanksgiving opponent. "We haven't seen Mashpee yet. Abington is better than they were last year. Hey are even bigger and more physical. We are better than last year by leaps and bounds. We had a great off-season and a great pre-season. The kids came in with a purpose."

To get the early leads, Cohasset has relied on a number of players, starting with Haggerty and Cole Kissick.

Kissick, a junior was handed the keys in the backfield after last year's top rusher Tim Gillis was injured during the MIAA lacrosse championship game in June.

"I don't think many would have expected it from him," Afanasiw said. "This year reminds me of when Dana Valentine was here. It always came through the offensive lines blocking, and a fullback helping out. The front line has always been strong. This year it has been excellent. Having so many guys on the line has been an added bonus."

Center, Will Lucas has been the middle of the offensive line. He's as good as you get.

John Nolan and Steven also have been contributors.

As for the playoff chase, it is very much open.

"We play at carver, Friday night," Afanasaiw said. If we win, all we'd have to do is beat Mashpee at home next week to win the League title."

Afanasiw said that Abington game may have been a mood killer last year.

"Before, one league loss and you were done," he said. "You're done. This has thrown a new re-energizing attitude not just to us, but many teams in the same situation. The top two teams qualify, and there could even be an at-large team in as a third from our league."

Head coach Pete Afanasiw looks towards the field during their game against Hull. Cohasset will face Hull again Thanksgiving Day.

Skippers roll over Monomoy

Big plays key blowout

The Patriot Ledger

The Skippers lost the time-of-possession battle in the first quarter, but it hardly mattered.

The Cohasset High football team used big plays to race out to a 22-0 halftime lead Friday night and never looked back in a 50-6 win over Monomoy, Friday night.

The Skippers are 4-1 (2-0 in the South Shore League Small-School Division).

Cole Kissick ripped off touchdown runs of 58 and 86 yards in the first half to ignite the offense. Quarterback Chris Haggerty's 23-yard TD pass to Liam Burke capped the first-half scoring.

"Offensively, we were able to run and throw and that kept (Monomoy) off balance," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said.

Haggerty threw a 17-yard TD pass to Jack Donohue in the third quarter. Sophomore Nick Hall added a 27-yard scoring run before Monomoy (2-3, 0-2) finally got on the board on Quentin Barre's 80-yard kickoff return.

Cohasset freshman quarterback Xander Schubert (11-yard run) and sophomore running back Chris Norton (81-yard run) had late TDs for the finishing touches.

"Defensively, we played very well," Afanasiw said. "Their senior quarterback, Matt Cooke, posed a serious threat to us. (After the first quarter) we were able to settle down."

Cohasset also throttled Monomoy's top receiver, Jonathan Biggs, holding him to two catches.

"They had two big weapons we were able to negate," Afanasiw said.

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week 6: Positional battles on field and in the poll

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The games have become more intense as the fight for postseason berths and league titles continues. For some teams, they've more of less accomplished both. Last week, we saw some instant classics on both the boys' and girls' sides, not to mention absolute dominance from the No. 1 boys' team.

There was also a bit of slumping last week, which is reflected in the rankings as the top girls' team goes down a notch, and one boys' team and one girls' team both fall out of the top six, which paved the way for two new entries this week and a bit of movement in the top six.

Here are the rankings based on games played from Monday, Oct. 7 through Sunday, Oct. 13.

Boys

1. Silver Lake – Going out on a (short) limb here: no one will beat Silver Lake from here on out. They'll finish the regular season unbeaten and grab the No. 1 seed in the South Sectional tournament. The Lakers had their toughest week of the season last week, but it didn't affect them at all. They beat a 10-win Hingham side, 5-0, and nine-win Duxbury team, 3-1. The Lakers finished the week with a 7-1 win over Quincy to improve to 12-0-1. During their 12-game winning streak, they've conceded just five goals.

2. Hingham – After seeing their seven-game winning streak snapped with a 5-0 loss to No. 1 Silver Lake, the Harbormen responded with a 6-0 win over Quincy and a 9-1 drubbing of Middleboro to improve to 10-2-1 and retain the No. 2 spot for yet another week.

3. Duxbury – The Dragons picked up a 3-0 win over Scituate and a 5-1 victory against Whitman-Hanson. A 3-1 loss to No. 1 Silver Lake was sandwiched in between. The most impressive part of that loss to the Lakers: the Dragons were one of only five teams to score against the Lakers in Silver Lake's current 12-game winning streak.

4. Cohasset – Up one spot from No. 5, the Skippers remained consistent last week, albeit a shaky one to start. They dropped two points by drawing, 2-2, with Abington, but came back to earn a massive win over Carver, which had only lost one game to that point. The Skippers closed out the week with a scoreless draw against Archbishop Williams, a team that has only two losses on the season. The Skippers came into this week with a 9-3-2 record.

5. Pembroke – Just a couple results away from securing the Patriot League Fisher title, the Titans had yet another solid week. Wins over Hanover, Middleboro, and North Quincy, the latter clinched a postseason berth, saw the Titans improve to 8-2-3. They were unbeaten in five straight heading into this week, and during that streak, outscored their opponents, 21-4.

6. Norwell – The Clippers patiently sat on the bubble these last few weeks, just waiting for a team to slip up. After Carver tanked last week losing its first game of the season, followed by another loss and then a draw, the Crusaders fell out of the rankings, leaving an open spot. The Clippers gladly filled that hole. They beat Rockland, 2-1, to improve to 9-2-1. They have seven wins in a row as of Monday and have only conceded two during that span.

On the bubble: Carver, Braintree, Marshfield

Week five rankings:
1. Silver Lake, 2. Hingham, 3. Carver, 4. Duxbury, 5. Cohasset, 6. Pembroke

Girls

1. Duxbury – Looking at the schedule, the Dragons had arguably the toughest week of their season last week. That didn't faze them in the least. They produced massive wins over both Scituate and Whitman-Hanson and drew with a surging Silver Lake side to improve to 10-1-2. The Dragons came into the week unbeaten in seven straight.

2. Scituate – It was the battle of the top two Inside the 6 teams and what a match it was. Unfortunately for Scituate, the game didn't go in its favor. Duxbury came out with a 3-2 victory and overtook the No. 1 spot. The Sailors bounced back with a shutout victory against North Quincy to get back on track.

3. Silver Lake – With the success of fellow Patriot League teams Duxbury, Scituate, and Hingham taking up most of the limelight, Silver Lake has quietly gone about its business and taking care of it in the process. The Lakers drew with Hingham and Duxbury last week, both vital points against top teams, and ended with a road win at Quincy to improve to 6-2-4.

4. Hingham – What started out as a disappointing week with a 2-2 draw against Silver Lake, quickly turned around for Hingham as the girls picked up wins over both Quincy and Middleboro on the road.

5. Norwell – Having all but locked up second place in the South Shore League with a huge, 4-0 win over Rockland last week, the Clippers will more than likely engage in a battle for the SSL title on Oct. 24 with first-place East Bridgewater. There's a lot of soccer to be played between now and then, with games against Cohasset and Carver on the horizon, but the 8-4-1 Clippers are on a tear, having conceded no goals in six of their last eight games.

6. Marshfield – The Rams return to the top six, and deservedly so, after a somewhat lengthy hiatus. Shutout victories against Nauset and Falmouth last week sent Marshfield's record to a perfect 8-0-2 in the Atlantic Coast League. The Rams are playing some of their best soccer of the season over the past couple weeks and hope to continue that trend this week.

On the bubble: Rockland, Plymouth South, Carver

Week five rankings:
1. Scituate, 2. Duxbury, 3. Hingham, 4. Rockland, 5. Norwell, 6. Silver Lake

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. BOSTON STRONG

Local dentist donates to Marathon victims

Cohasset-based pediatric dentist Dr. Kristine Grazioso was deeply saddened and touched by the tragic events of the Boston Marathon bombing on April 15.

In her own words, Dr. Grazioso told the story of how one pediatric dental office in Cohasset turned its grief into good.

"Days after the Boston tragedy, I found myself surrounded by a group of 14 caring, wonderful women who work at my dental practice," said Grazioso. "We decided that we wanted to send our love to the Boston Marathon bombing victims and chose Martin Richard's family as our focus to give back.

"Our idea was a simple one," Grazioso continued. "We would open our practice on a Saturday that we usually do not work, and the dentists and staff would donate their time. We would focus on seeing as many patients as possible and all of the profit generated during this day would be donated to the Richard Family fund."

The Richard family of Dorchester, Mass. was severely impacted by the Boston Marathon tragedy.

At seven years old, Jane Richard lost a limb and was fitted with a prosthetic leg over the summer. She lost her eight-year-old brother, Martin, in the attack. He was the youngest of the three people who were killed that day.

Doctors from Cohasset's South Shore Children's Dentistry recently held a special event to raise money for the Richard Family, who were all injured during the Boston Marathon bombings. From left to right: Dr. Mina Schafft, Dr. Kristine Grazioso, Dr. Anne Kuczma. COURTESY PHOTOS

Martin became known around the world for an image of him taken before the attacks, holding up a poster with a call for peace. "No more hurting people," read the sign he holds in the now-famous photograph.

Jane's parents, Denise and Bill, were also seriously injured.

Grazioso said that the families in her practice "enthusiastically embraced the idea" of supporting the Richard family.

" On short notice, we had 40 appointments scheduled" for that special Saturday, the Cohasset dentist shared. "Our staff dedicated their time and talent to decorate our office and get T-shirts, wristbands, and other items arranged."

Other local businesses quickly rallied to help.

The Atlantic Bagel Company in Cohasset also caught wind of the idea and offered coupons for free bagels to patients participating in the event. Papa Gino's of Cohasset donated certificates for free slices of pizza.

"We had high schoolers offering to dedicate their time to act as greeters for our patients for the day," said Grazioso.

All in all, the Cohasset dentist said, "It was humbling to be part of such a good thing, and we hope this brings the Richard family some small measure of comfort."

South Shore Children's Dentistry sent a check of $8,800 to the Richard Family Fund.

South Shore Children's Dentistry is located at 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A), Suites 102 and LL2, Cohasset, MA. To learn more about Dr. Grazioso's practice, see www.drgrazioso.com.

SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

Pulitzer Prize winning author to speak at library

Pulitzer Prize-winning author Philip Caputo will be the first speaker in this season's Sunday Authortalks at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. He will speak about his most recent book, "The Longest Road: Overland in Search of America, from Key West to the Arctic Ocean," at 4 p.m., on Oct. 20.

Admission to the event is free but seating is limited, so plan to arrive early to ensure a spot. A wine and cheese reception will follow Caputo's talk where Buttonwood Books will have his book available for purchase and signing. For more information call the library at 383-1438 or visit online at cohassetlibrary.org.

Sunday Authortalks is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. Wines for the post-talk receptions are donated by A Taste for Wine and Spirits.

Caputo was kind enough to answer some questions in an email correspondence.

Q: If you were to set out again to answer the question, what keeps us together as a country, what would you do differently?

A: I would take more time, six months instead of four, and spend more time in urban/suburban areas.

Q: If you could require President Obama to read one book, what would it be?

A: "The Meditations of Marcus Aurelius."

Q: And what about Mr. Putin – what would his required reading be?

A: "From Dawn to Decadence" by Jacques Barzun.

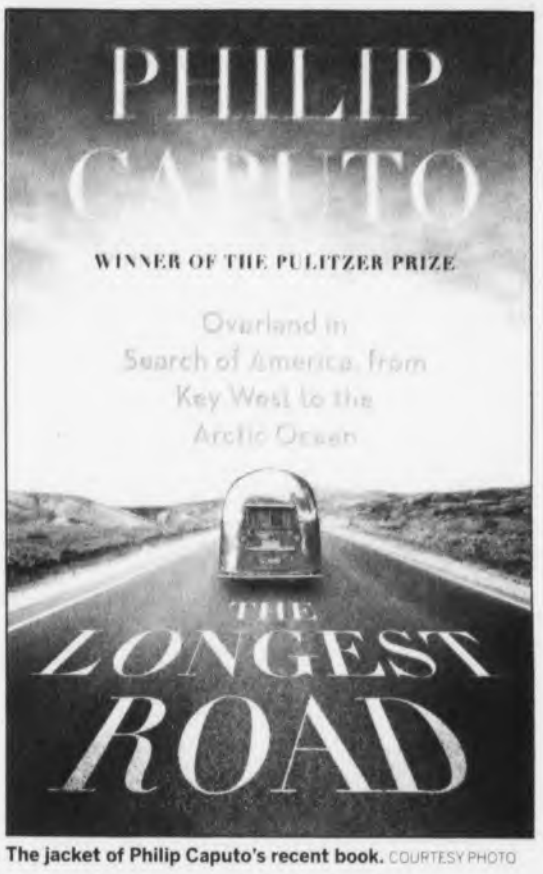
Q: You've been compared to Jack Kerouac. Aside from advances in civil rights, what would you tell Kerouac that's different about the essential spirit of the U.S. now as compared to the 40s/50s.

A: Don't see myself as Kerouac-like. The country is less optimistic, less exuberant, more care-worn because of too many wars and economic recession. It's also more crowded.

Q: What's the best book you've read so far this year?

A: "Empire of the Summer Moon" by S.C. Gwynne.

Q: What do you plan to read next?



A: Now reading Hilary Mantel's "Wolf Hall" and Nathaniel West's collected novels. Plan to read next "Bringing up the Bodies," sequel to "Wolf Hall."

Q: If you had to name a favorite writer, who would it be?

A: Joseph Conrad.

Q: What kinds of books are you drawn to?

A: I'm pathologically eclectic in my reading tastes, so I can't answer this question. Let's say I'm drawn to anything that's written well, that has a certain craft, style, and intelligence.

With a little help from Mel's friends

Bracelets symbolize hope

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Perhaps you've seen the brightly colored baubles in stores, or on the wrists of a nurse, a waitress, your hairdresser, your friend or sister... or maybe you wear one of your own.

If so, you've likely experienced the phenomenon: wearing your Friends of Mel Bracelet in public, only to have a total stranger, sporting the same bracelet, raising her arm to you in solidarity.

Whether you or someone you know has been affected by cancer, you may have received or given one of Mel's bracelets as a show of strength, support, unity – and hope.

And while the bracelets began as a way to raise awareness for breast cancer – and to honor a special woman who lost her life to the disease – the jewelry has gone on to represent all forms of cancer.

The Friends of Mel Bracelets were inspired by Mel Simmons of Hingham and Rockland, a Delta Air Lines flight attendant and single mom who lost her battle with breast cancer in 2005 at the age of 38.

"Mel was a very, very colorful person and had a wonderful sense of humor," said her friend and colleague Pauline Alighieri. "She wasn't a movie star; she was just a regular gal... But she touched so many lives."

While she was still in treatment, Mel's flight attendant friends brought her treasures from around the world, including colorful beaded bracelets from Turkey. Mel would pass these gifts on to the oncology nurses and other patients.

After Mel's passing, the many women who'd received bracelets from her continued wearing them in her honor. Inquiries began popping up – where could the bracelets be purchased?

An idea was born.

A small group of Mel's friends got together with the thought of raising funds for cancer research, and finding a way to pay tribute to their dear friend.

The bracelets, available for a $20 donation, became a smash success with women along the South Shore. However, the eye-catching beads with metallic rings were more than a passing trend.

"It wasn't just the bracelets," Alighieri said of the jewelry becoming so in demand. "It's because they were Mel's bracelets."

The Friends of Mel Foundation was founded in 2006 by Alighieri, who worked as a Delta Air Lines flight attendant for 40 years, where she befriended Mel. Today, Pauline serves as executive director of the Rockland-based non-profit organization.

Friends of Mel became a 501 (c)(3) non-profit in 2007. In just six years, the foundation has donated $3 million to organizations for cancer research or to provide support and education for cancer survivors, their caretakers and families.

In its first year, the foundation gifted $1 million to Mass. General Hospital, where Mel was treated.

Not bad considering Alighieri said the original fundraising goal was $5,000.

When Mass. General celebrated its 200th anniversary, a glass wall was erected to acknowledge donors who gifted $1 million or more. The Friends of Mel Foundation has a spot on that wall.

And while the Friends of Mel has gifted organizations around the nation, Alighieri especially loves donating to local causes.

"Mel's from Hingham and lived in Rockland. Her heart was on the South Shore; this is where her family and friends live," Alighieri said. "We want to support the programs that provide the services people need here."

Local donation recipients include the South Shore Hospital, the STAR program at Brockton Hospital, the Magical Moon Foundation in Marshfield, and Norwell's Cancer Support Community.

The Friends of Mel Bracelets were inspired by Mel Simmons, a flight attendant and single mom who lost her battle with breast cancer in 2005. Mel's flight attendant friends brought her treasures, including bracelets from Turkey, from around the world while she was being treated for her cancer. Mel would pass these bracelets on to other patients; now, women around the world wear them as a symbol of hope.

Going global

While the Friends of Mel has given to many medical programs, Alighieri stresses that cancer care goes beyond medical assistance.

Another way for the Friends of Mel to offer support locally was to start a conference for cancer survivors and caregivers. The Art of Living – Life Beyond Cancer conference is in its third year, offering professional presentations and workshops. This year's conference takes place on Saturday, Nov. 2 at the Marriott Hotel in Quincy.

Alighieri said it was important for her organization to create a conference in order to "address the psychosocial needs [for cancer patients] that are not addressed in hospitals. Anxiety, fear, depression... those emotional responses that grip you can really get in the way of recovery."

That said, Alighieri also believes it's important to give back to "the people doing the work" to find a cancer cure.

"A lot of funding goes to research right from the start," she explained. "There are 200 different types of cancer; we need to find a cure."

Perhaps finding a cure is more possible now than ever... with a little help from Mel's friends.

And now, those "friends" of Mel's can be found all over the world.

"People all over the world have them, and they don't even know Mel," said Alighieri. "We've created a global community of women— a sisterhood of women who wear the bracelet."

A little phenomenon occurs when those who know of Mel's bracelets spot them in public. Those wearing them often raise their arms to one another in solidarity, she said.

"The bracelets are easy to spot; they're bright. There's just something about them," Alighieri continued. The jewelry's wearers are "part of a community of women who share the same heart."

And for those who don't recognize the bracelets?

"They're a real conversation starter," said Alighieri.

Jackie DeRose, owner of the Clog Shoppe in Weymouth, is a breast cancer survivor who lost her husband, Danny, to lung cancer three years ago. She proudly carries Mel's bracelets in her store, and has ever since they first became available.

The bracelets are a popular purchase in her store, said DeRose.

"Sixty percent of my business is from the medical field. You'd be amazed by the number of nurses who are wearing or buying the bracelets or giving one" away to a patient or loved one, DeRose said. "It truly is the perfect gift... We've all been touched by this crazy disease."

DeRose also counts herself as a friend of Mel's. Diagnosed with breast cancer in 2001, the shop owner has been an active participant in the Abington Relay for Life, where she first met Mel.

"She was a courageous lady," DeRose said of Mel. "She truly was a fighter."

The shop owner and her staffers, some of whom are also cancer survivors, "fight the fight every day," said DeRose.

"My little store sees one to four or five survivors every day; they come in to buy shoes when their feet are swollen during chemo, or to buy the bracelets to bring them luck," DeRose shared. "Friends and family buy them for their loved ones who were recently diagnosed... it's a truly inspirational following."

While the jewelry is bright, pretty, and arguably trendy, it's more than just a bracelet.

"The bracelet has so much significance," DeRose said. "It has a profound meaning to some people— it's hope."

What's in your genes?

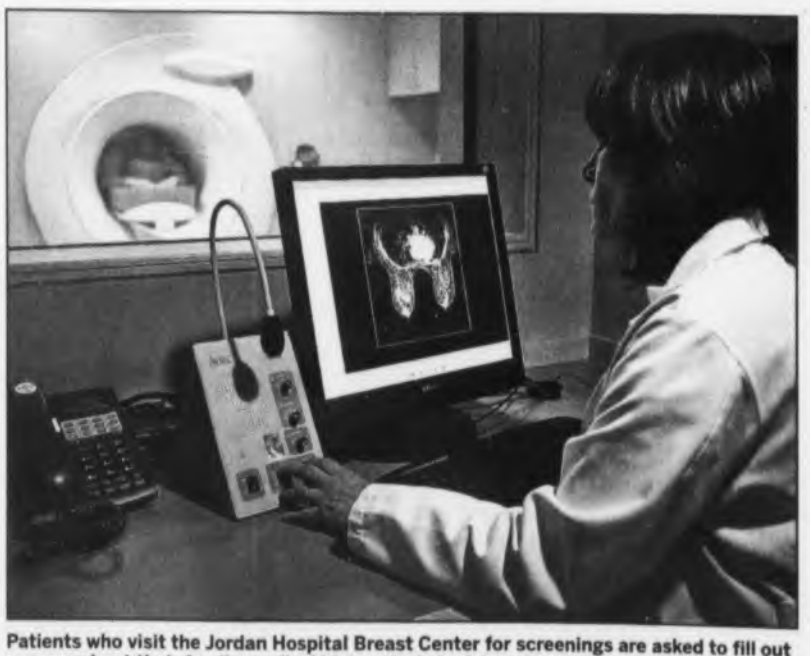
Lecture series looks at hereditary breast and ovarian cancer syndrome

By Rich Harbert
rharbert@wickedlocal.com

Celebrity endorsements can be powerful tools in any marketing campaign, even for things nobody would ever want – like getting breast cancer.

The staff at the Jordan Hospital Breast Center has focused on identifying high-risk patients and targeting them for treatment ever since the center opened four years ago. But patient interest in the testing soared after actress Angelina Jolie went very public with her risky exposure to the disease last spring.

In an op-ed piece titled "My Medical Choice, published last May in the New York Times, Jolie revealed she had undergone a double mastectomy after learning she tested positive for the gene that predisposes patients for breast and ovarian cancer.



Jolie's decision to pursue preventative surgery and cosmetic reconstruction may have surprised some, but it's actually the most common way American women cope with learning they have tested positive for the BRCA gene, according to Dr. Lisa Tito, director of the Jordan Hospital Breast Center.

But since May, nearly every woman who visits the Jordan Hospital Breast Center ends up asking about the hereditary breast and ovarian cancer syndrome and how it may apply to them. And while most women are not even candidates for the testing, let alone the surgery, the public awareness raised by Jolie has clearly helped identify the minority of women who truly need the screening.

"We're getting a lot of people with the Angelina Jolie effect, but once we give them the information, they're comfortable they don't need the test," Tito said.

There are several numbers that women need to be aware of when it comes to the BRCA gene, but three seem to bear special consideration.

ROAD TO RECOVERY

Going the extra miles for cancer patients

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Braintree native and Quincy resident Claire Muollo has relied on the Hingham-based Road to Recovery support group for rides to the Dana Farber Cancer Center in South Weymouth.

Road to Recovery volunteers from Hingham and other South Shore communities are making a difference in the fight against cancer by providing patients with rides to crucial medical appointments.

This service helps alleviate the stress associated with not always knowing where the next ride will come from, thereby helping cancer patients along their individual roads to recovery.

"It's sometimes difficult to arrange a ride into the city for a medical appointment," said Cohasset resident Holly Hill, who coordinates the Hingham-based effort. That's why the role Road to Recovery plays is so important.

The South Shore branch of the American Cancer Society's national Road to Recovery program is based in Hingham and has more than 60 drivers along with desk volunteers.

However, more volunteers are needed to serve the transportation needs of the growing number of cancer patients in the area.

Desk volunteers accept calls from the many cancer patients – or sometimes stressed-out family members or friends – who contact the Hingham office to request rides, responding with understanding and compassion.

Some referrals come from doctor's offices.

"Part of the intake for cancer patients is asking them if they need transportation," Hill said.

Other times a driver might refer his or her neighbor, and word-of-mouth also plays a role in connecting cancer patients with the program.

One woman who eventually contacted Road to Recovery had asked her friends, relatives, and neighbors for rides for her husband, a cancer patient, and "finally ran out of options," Hill said. "We were able to help her."

Rewarding work

"It's very rewarding for both the drivers and desk volunteers, who arrange the rides and drivers," Hill said. "We're always looking for help at the desk."

Desk volunteer Joan Getto of Hingham agrees.

She got involved with Road to Responsibility when, after a period of time driving a friend who had cancer to medical appointments, she saw a notice seeking volunteers.

"From my own experience I realized how important it is for patients to know they have the rides they need," Getto said, "and I think it's important to help others."

She gets a sense of gratification from her volunteer work, "especially when I am talking with someone who has no other means of transportation to their appointments, and we can help him or her with rides," Getto said.

Milton resident John Ryan has been a volunteer driver for five years and also finds the experience rewarding. "I'm retired and have the time," he said. "Cancer patients are going through some tough experiences, and if I can make their lives a little bit easier I'm happy to do so."

The hotline is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Volunteers usually serve twice a month, so there isn't a big time commitment involved.

Drivers normally provide about two rides a month, and cancer patients receive a maximum of three rides a week.

The number of rides needed on a weekly basis by patients varies, depending on their chemotherapy and radiation treatment schedules at local and Boston hospitals, doctors' offices, and treatment centers.

The Hingham call center adjacent to the Sons of Italy Hall on Kilby Street serves Hingham, Cohasset, Braintree, Norwell, Weymouth, Hull, Pembroke, Duxbury, Marshfield, Quincy, Hanover, Milton, and Scituate. It was based at Hersey House in Hingham for a number of years before a private party purchased the property.

Volunteers are needed because family members or friends may not have the time or the means to make frequent trips to treatment centers. Also, some cancer patients may not have a car while others may be too ill to drive themselves to their medical appointments.

'Time to give back'

Hill has been working in the Hingham office as a desk volunteer since 2000, when she retired and decided "it was time to give back."

"I feel I have been very fortunate in my life and this is such a small-time commitment," she said. "I wish there was more I could do."

Hill said she has "met some lovely people. We have wonderful drivers and my fellow desk volunteers couldn't be nicer."

The positive feedback is also gratifying to Hill and fellow volunteers. "Those we have helped are very grateful," she said. "We often get thank-you notes and phone calls thanking us for what we provide."

Hill noted that the new Dana Farber Cancer Center in Weymouth treats many of the individuals who call Road to Recovery for rides. "It's an easier distance for all involved, but we still have a lot of patients who have medical appointments in the city," she said.

The current space at the corner of Route 3A and Kilby Street was provided for call center volunteers by State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, several years ago. Bradley rents space at the Sons of Italy Hall to hold local office hours and campaign meetings and agreed to share it with Road to Recovery volunteers during the day.

The late Hingham resident Lillian Valorz, a cancer survivor, established the Hingham Cancer Hotline in 1973 with assistance from Hingham's public health nurse Pat Smith. She worked from her home for two years coordinating volunteer drivers out of a recognition of the growing need for an organized system to help patients with rides to and from treatment appointments

In 1975, Valorz was offered space for use as hotline headquarters in the then-Hingham Senior Center at Hersey House.

In 1997, the American Cancer Society heard about the Hingham call center and adopted it as one of its signature outreach programs.

The schedule for volunteers is flexible. Treatment appointments take place weekdays during business hours. For more information about Road to Recovery, to volunteer, or to request rides, call 781-749-2535 or 800-952-7664 (patient services, based in Framingham) or visit www.cancer.org.

According to Tito, doctors are particularly concerned about women who have multiple relatives who developed the disease early in life, while still in active childbearing years. Doctors are also looking for male relatives with a breast cancer history.

First, most women do not have to worry about having it. Only about 5 percent of women would test positive.

Second, people who have the gene have a 60 to 80 percent change of developing breast or ovarian cancer.

Third, surgical options can vastly improve their medical outlook. Women like Jolie, who choose a bilateral mastectomy with reconstruction before developing cancer, reduce their risk of developing cancer by 96 percent.

The process of detecting the gene starts locally with an iPad and a seat in the waiting room at the Jordan Hospital Breast Center.

Every patient who visits the Center for any type of screening is handed the tablet and asked to complete a family medical history with special attention placed on relatives who were diagnosed with premenopausal breast or ovarian cancers.

According to Tito, doctors are particularly concerned about women who have multiple relatives who developed the disease early in life, while still in active childbearing years. Doctors are also looking for male relatives with a breast cancer history.

The screening is not looking for relatives who develop cancer late in life. "One in eight women get cancer because they're women and getting older. It has nothing to do with the cancer gene," Tito said.

Men and women who have the BRCA gene have a 50 percent chance of passing it on to their offspring, so it is important for patients to explore the family medical history on both sides of the family tree.

The staff at the Breast Center assesses the answers to the surveys and determines if a patient is at high risk. If so, they are then encouraged to get tested for the BRCA gene.

A positive BRCA test begins its own course of action for the 5 percent who carry the gene.

There are two schools of thought on breast cancer: mastectomy with reconstruction or high-risk screening designed to detect cancer early enough for effective treatment.

Most Europeans opt for the screening. Americans tend to favor preventative surgery.

The screenings involve both MRI and mammogram testing. Tito said she prefers to alternate between the two methods every six months to ensure patients get tested twice a year. But even when detected early, the cancer must still be treated and patients have a higher-than-average chance of developing it again.

The surgical option has better long-range results. It is a local option as well.

Jordan Hospital is equipped to conduct the mastectomies and reconstructions, with Tito, the hospital's breast surgeon, and local plastic surgeons using procedures that leave the skin, nipple and areola intact.

Screening for ovarian cancer is not as advanced, so the options are not as good.

For BRCA positive patients, doctors recommend having ovaries removed after patients have finished having children. That alone drops the risk by 50 percent, Tito said.

In either case, time is a factor. Tito said early detection and prevention are important for patients who inherit the gene. The process of assessing the risk and testing for the BRCA gene should start by the time patients turn 25, she said.

House Calls, Jordan Hospital's educational speaker series, will devote a two-hour session to hereditary breast and ovarian cancer syndrome later this month. The discussion, titled "What's in your genes?" features Tito, along with Dr. Nadine Tung, director of the cancer risk evaluation program at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, and Dr. Russell Atkin of Jordan OB/GYN and Midwifery.

The panel will focus on how genetics affect the risk of developing cancer, exploring counseling and testing, treatment and monitoring of BRCA positive individuals.

The lecture will be held from 6 to 8 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 30, at Blackstones Pub at the Indian Pond Country Club in Kingston. Dinner will be provided. Call 1-800-2JORDAN to register.

FRIENDS OF MEL FOUNDATION

There is life beyond cancer

Nov. 2 conference will bring together patients, survivors with stories of hope and healing

By Scott MacKeen
smackeen@wickedlocal.com

Kathy Armany likes to tell the story of when she first met Pauline Alighieri.

It was in 2006, four years removed from Armany's diagnosis of colon cancer.

Armany, a longtime Plymouth resident, was in her office at the Pathways Center for Cancer Support in Hanover, a place where she had gained much emotional support during her own battle with cancer and was now returning that support through volunteerism as a registered nurse.

In walked Alighieri, a person Armany knew through reputation but had never met. Alighieri, a Delta Airlines flight attendant from Norwood, had made news at the time along with a small group of women, for starting a memorial fund in memory of their friend, Mel Simmons of Rockland. Simmons, a fellow Delta Airlines flight attendant originally from Hingham, lost her battle with breast cancer in 2005.

In the wake of Simmons' death, a fundraising campaign was started to support cancer patients in her memory. The idea was to build relationships with local cancer care facilities across the South Shore, such as the one Armany was working for.

That day when Alighieri walked into Armany's office, she noticed something on the wall.

"There was a picture of a butterfly on the wall when we were talking, Armany recalls. "That was Pauline's sign for Mel. It was her symbol. It was like an instant connection. It was like: this is the place she wants you to be. We had this beautiful, beautiful connection."

From this meeting came a lasting partnership between Alighieri's foundation and Pathways Center for Cancer, which has since morphed into the Norwell branch of the nation-wide Cancer Support Community.

Life beyond cancer

For Alighieri, and others like her – those who commit to fighting the seemingly endless multi-front battle against cancer – this story is one found repeated across so many lives and circumstances. It is the journey to overcome disease – physically and mentally – and find common hope and strength.

That is at the heart of what Alighieri wants to communicate with "The Art of Living – Life Beyond Cancer," an upcoming conference created by Alighieri's Friends of Mel Foundation, which takes place Saturday, Nov. 2, at the Boston Marriott Quincy, 1000 Marriott Drive in Quincy. Workshops are scheduled throughout the day, with registration beginning at 8 a.m. and keynote speaker Dr. Mitch Golant of the Cancer Support Community delivering opening remarks at 8:45 a.m. Registration is $25.

Alighieri said the conference is meant to provide a forum for people to frankly discuss heartfelt concerns with experts and others who share similar experiences. The focus of the conference is distress and the emotional and psychological impacts of cancer, which both Alighieri and Golant say is an area of new focus for medical experts in the cancer research and treatment fields.

"Over the years, we've listened to cancer patients," said Alighieri in explaining the idea for the conference. "We just felt like there was a need for this. This is something we haven't seen anyone else doing. You can reach a lot of people in one day."

There are 16 workshops scheduled throughout the day covering many different areas of cancer support, including dealing with the impact on personal relationships, the physical toll of treatment, financial impacts and getting back into the workplace, among others.

"The big idea is that it's not just about living longer, it's about living better," said Golant, who is coming in from California for the event. "I think that's at the heart of this conference."

Golant has spent the past 20 years as a leading researcher in the field of the psychosocial care of cancer patients.

"Cancer is a multiple traumatic event for the individual, the families, and the friends," he said. "The world of cancer care needs to be better, and this is beginning to be better addressed, this aspect of cancer care. There's some heavy lifting in this area and this conference is perfect timing."

This will be the third such conference for the Friends of Mel Foundation, a Rockland-based nonprofit organization founded in 2007 to continue Simmons' legacy of compassion and grace in times of crisis.

Simmons was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2000. She and Alighieri had worked together as flight attendants for more than 30 years and were close friends.

"It's impossible to even describe her," said Alighieri of her longtime friend. "She was wonderful. People just wanted to be in her energy."

When Simmons received her cancer diagnosis, it became a learning experience for both her and all those who knew and loved her. Above all else, Alighieri said, Simmons taught her friends the strength of the spirit.

"A lot of us learned about cancer through her experience," Alighieri said. "She had just a powerful force. She taught us how to live life to the fullest despite the odds."

That notion of living life to the fullest was the driving force behind the original fundraising campaign in 2005. During her ordeal, Simmons would frequently receive gifts from her flight attendant friends who traveled around the world. One gift was a collection of colorful beaded bracelets from Istanbul. Simmons loved this gift so much that she shared the bracelets with her caregivers at Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH).

Simmons lost her battle that July, but the story of "Mel's bracelets" began to spread, and her friends used this as the basis for which to raise funds in her memory.

They set a fundraising goal of $5,000; within a year, they had raised $1 million. They gave that original gift to MGH. It was just the start of their giving.

"We've created this unbelievable community of women. It just took off," said Alighieri.

Today, Friends of Mel Foundation is an international community of women united to making a difference in the world of cancer. The organization that originated out of a simple idea of paying it forward has donated over $3 million to programs and groups that work to improve the lives of cancer patients.

Paying it forward

Like the story of Armany and her butterfly picture, many other cancer-care organizations have found support from the Friends of Mel Foundation and have continued that notion of paying it forward through their own support of those touched by cancer.

"We can testify to the effectiveness of the way Friends of Mel operates," said Pam Ahl, who co-founded the Learn, Live and Love Cancer Outreach Organization in Scituate in 2005 after her own battle with breast cancer. "There are times when our funds may be running very tight to the belt. Friends of Mel in the past has come through to meet our immediate needs."

Ahl called Alighieri "just an absolutely amazing, amazing woman."

"That organization is just one of the greatest things that's every hit this area," Ahl said.

For Ahl, the battle with cancer started in 2005 when she turned 40 and went in for a routine mammogram. Fortunately for her, the cancer was discovered in its early stages.

"Since 2005 I've been totally cancer-free. Early detection literally saved my life," she said.

Through that experience, Ahl said, she received a "community of support," something the Friends of Mel have also tried to provide with Life Beyond Cancer.

"You don't even know what you're going to need until you go through it," she said, adding of her own organization: "We decided we were going to do something to pay it forward due to the enormous amount of support we received. We decided to make it a personal challenge to help as many women as we could."

Ahl's partner at Learn, Live and Love is Rosemary Lonborg, wife of former Boston Red Sox pitcher Jim Lonborg, a longtime supporter and volunteer for The Jimmy Fund.

Lynne Coyne of Hanover happened to meet Alighieri on a Delta flight where Alighieri was the flight attendant. The two struck up a conversation about the Friends of Mel and Mel's bracelets.

Coyne, a breast cancer survivor, has volunteered with Alighieri's foundation the past seven years and has attended a previous Life Beyond Cancer conference.

"I have met some wonderful friends and fellow survivors," Coyne said. "Everyone involved with Friends of Mel is supportive, caring and encouraging. It was quite overwhelming to be diagnosed with breast cancer at 42 years old with a kindergartner and a third-grader. I could not have gone through this cancer journey without the love, support and kindness of my family and friends."

Coyne said the conference gives cancer patients many tools and techniques for living their best life through treatment and beyond.

"The conference is a safe forum for talking about tough topics and personal issues as a result of cancer," she added.

One of the workshops at the Nov. 2 conference focuses on helping cancer patients return to the workplace. As with any other part of cancer, this is something where having a supportive environment can make all the difference, according to Chris O'Neill, executive director of Braintree-based One Life at a Time, which was formed in 2008 in response to a rise in unemployment in New England.

One thing O'Neill wants to get across at the conference is that "there's still hope" for cancer patients in getting themselves back into the professional world.

"There are still opportunities for [cancer patients] even though they've been through a lot," she said. "There's still work available to them, and we try to give them that kind of group support."

And for Armany, now a decade removed from her diagnosis, receiving the news of cancer was like "having the rug pulled out from under you.

"Really what it is, is an existential crisis. It impacts every single aspect of your life," she said. "I feel like you need to fill up again. When you have had a traumatic event, you need to be filled up more. I really do feel it was that extra, added piece that kept me going. I would not have made it without that extra piece, without that belief that there's something larger."

LIFE BEYOND CANCER CONFERENCE

Goal is to 'address the whole patient'

Q&A with Pauline Alighieri, executive director of Friends of Mel Foundation

What do you think is the key message of this conference?
The key message of "The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer" conference is to recognize and validate the distressful feelings that are often a part of an individual's cancer journey.

Current research confirms that treating distress will not only improve the quality of life for people living with cancer, but will also enhance treatment adherence, hasten recovery and even lower heath care costs.

Recognizing the importance of healing the mind as much as the body has become so critical that – starting in 2015 – more than 1,500 cancer centers in the nation will need to screen patients for distress in order to maintain their accreditation with the American College of Surgeons Commission on Cancer.

"The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer" conference provides a forum for survivors to frankly discuss these concerns with experts in the field and others who have also been impacted by cancer. At the end of the day, it is our hope that attendees will leave feeling empowered, recharged and equipped to live life beyond cancer.

How did you get involved in sponsoring the conference?
Over the years, we have attended and have often been sponsors at other cancer conferences. Through these experiences, we have had the opportunity to talk with many survivors and professionals in the field. We learned that – although there are excellent conferences being offered to individuals with cancer – none really address the whole patient. From what we have seen, survivors are given information about cancer – our goal is to give them tools to help them manage their experience and to help them in the healing process.

What have you learned through the course of sponsoring this?
I have learned that many survivors are caught unaware by the emotional impact of cancer and the residual effects of their treatment. They want to do everything in their power to heal and get back to a relatively normal life. I have also learned how important it is for survivors to connect with others who share their experience. At the same time, I have realized that caregivers are struggling, as well, and need a forum where they can also voice their concerns.

What are some of the challenges you face with planning this type of an event?
The Friends of Mel Foundation is primarily known as a nonprofit that raises funds to support cancer causes with a colorful beaded bracelet, called Mel's Bracelet. Many people do not realize the impact that this funding has had on the cancer community. Not only have we donated $1 million to breast cancer research but we have also granted another $2 million to support more than 45 grassroots organizations directly helping cancer survivors.

We have also been a contributing sponsor for other conferences that provide support to individuals who are trying to navigate their cancer journey.

Once we learned just how many survivors we could reach during a full-day event, we decided to design and host our own. This will be our third annual event. We want cancer survivors and caregivers all over the South Shore and even on Cape Cod to know about this valuable resource that's available to them on Nov. 2, right in Quincy at the Quincy Marriott. Guests can register at http://friendsofmel.org/conference.

Who has helped you?
Amazing, wise and incredibly dedicated professionals who work on the front lines in the cancer community every day have helped the Friends of Mel Foundation with "The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer" conference. We have been very diligent about surrounding ourselves with professionals who are entrenched in medical, psychological and social aspects of cancer, plus those who are experts in integrated therapies for healing. For example, Tim Cummings, clinical director at the Cancer Support Community in Norwell, has worked with survivors for more than 20 years.

Of course, at the Friends of Mel Foundation, we make it a habit to listen to cancer survivors and caregivers about what they feel their needs are.

Did you experience anything unusual or unexpected being involved with the conference you otherwise might never have experienced?
It was amazing to learn that although individuals may have a different medical diagnosis, the emotional experience is often the same. For example, vulnerability, sadness, anxiety and fear – these feelings seem universal.

I was also amazed to see how powerful it is for survivors to share their experiences with other survivors.

Individuals with cancer think of it as a death sentence, but when they have a chance to share experiences with other survivors, they think, "If they can do it, I can do it." This is the kind of connection we provide with The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer conference.

What are your expectations?
I think – no, I know – we are going to have another incredible event where individuals with cancer will walk away knowing that they too are one of the 14 million survivors who are managing to live their best life – beyond cancer!

Interview conducted by Scott MacKeen.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

A stuck gas pedal that is caused by a mechanical defect is rare. More common causes may be an object such as a floor mat, a shoe or an item inside your car rolls forward or becomes wedged under the pedal. If your gas pedal does become stuck, keep your eyes on the road, shift to neutral, pull off the road when safe to do so and turn off the engine. COURTESY PHOTO

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 28, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The high standards you set for yourself don't always translate into the behavior you expect of others. That relationship problem can be resolved if you're more flexible and less judgmental.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Not enough party bids to satisfy the Bovine's fun-loving side this week? Go ahead and throw one of your own. Then prepare for some serious work coming up early next week.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A new and intensely productive cycle is about to kick in. Be careful not to get too stressed out, though. Make time to restore your energies by relaxing with family and friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This could be a good time to share some of your plans with those closest to you. Their comments could give you some added insight into how you might accomplish your goals.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An attack of self-doubt might be unsettling for the usually super-assured Feline. But it could be your inner voice telling you to hold off implementing your plans until you've reassessed them.

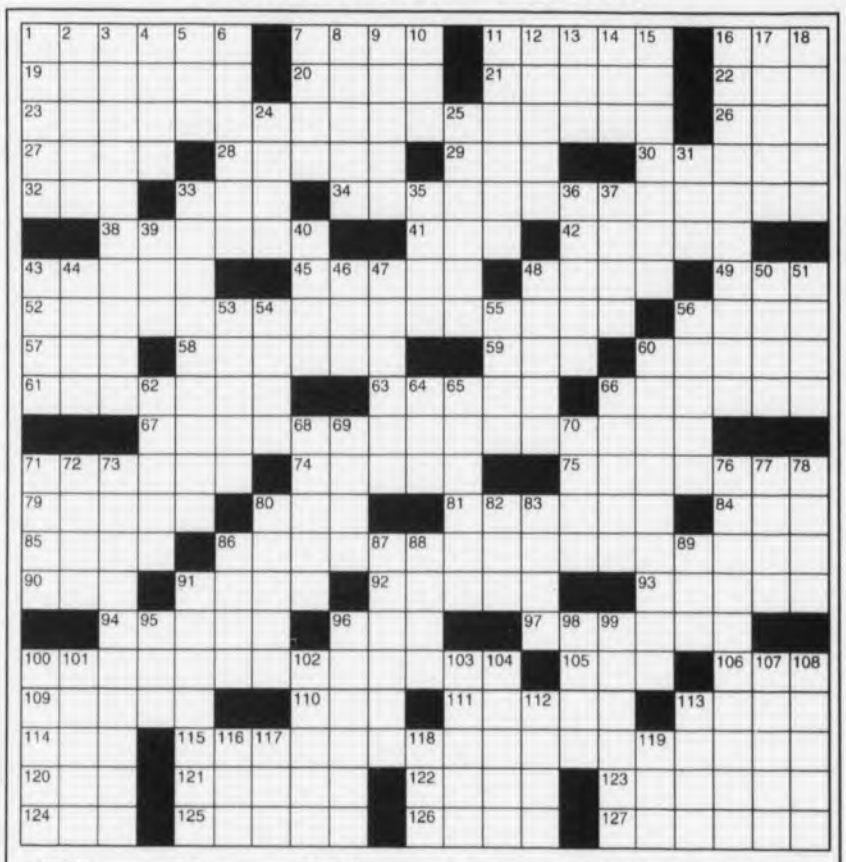
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a great time for you to reward yourself for all your hard work by taking a trip you haven't spent months carefully planning, to somewhere you never thought you'd be going.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Some misunderstandings resist being resolved. But your sincerity in wanting to soothe those hurt feelings wins the day. By month's end, that relationship should begin to show signs of healing.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A hectic job schedule begins to ease just in time to blow off all that work-generated steam on Halloween. A family situation runs into an unexpected complication.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A cutting remark in the workplace needs to be handled with finesse. Remember: How you respond could determine the depth of support you gain from colleagues.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Once again, that Capricornean stubborn streak sets in and could keep you from getting much-needed advice. Fortunately, it lifts by week's end, in time to make an informed decision.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A surprise trip early in the week could lead to other unexpected offers when you return. Word to the wise: Avoid talking too much about this until you've made some decisions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Learning dominates the week for perspicacious Pisceans, who are always looking to widen their range of knowledge. A series of important job-linked commitments begins late in the week.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Petition forces their hand

Selectmen set date for Sat., Nov. 23

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Nearly 400 Cohasset residents signed a petition to hold a Special Town Meeting to appropriate roughly $1.9 million in unencumbered funds. The Board of Selectmen had no choice but to set a date; once a Special Town Meeting is called, it must occur within 45 days.

The petition was filed in response to contentious discussions between the selectmen and Acting Town Manager over the past few weeks on whether to hold a Special Town Meeting (STM) this fall, as is Cohasset's tradition. The meeting is usually reserved for financial articles, although in recent years zoning articles, bylaw changes, and other hot topics have made their way to the fall meeting. Cohasset officials tend to prefer saving these "heavy hitters" for the Annual Town Meeting in the spring.

While a majority of the selectmen has shown reluctance in holding a special this year, the petition overruled the board members' preferences.

"We're going to a special town meeting, want it or not," Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said during the Tuesday,

Sewer plant awarded best in state

By Erin Dale

Cohasset's sewer treatment plant may be small, but it recently received a big honor—the plant was awarded as the best small wastewater treatment facility in the state.

The recognition came from the Massachusetts Water Pollution Control Association (MWPCA) during a special ceremony on Sept. 18. United Water has been operating the Elm Street plant since January 2011 and has a five-year operation agreement with the town.

Mark Cataldo, the plant's Chief Operator, and Assistant Chief Operator Tim Swimm, were both recognized for their efforts to help revitalize the sewer plant since taking over operations two years ago.

Cataldo said in a phone call that receiving this honor was "humbling," explaining that Cohasset's plant was chosen out of 37 other communities that were in the running.

"The other treatment plants were just as qualified; it's not like they didn't do their jobs," said Cataldo, adding that according to the state's Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), "What threw us over the edge was that we did so much with so little."

Swimm said that despite Cohasset's small size, "It takes a lot to run a plant. Everyone assumes because of the size of the plant it doesn't take a lot, but that's not necessarily the case... We've

Over the course of Columbus Day weekend, the Cohasset Sailing Club said goodbye to its clubhouse.

The clubhouse, which had stood since 1979, was torn down to make way for a new and improved building, which will be constructed in December.

"We're so excited," said Sailing Club trustee Sandy Crough. "This has been almost eight years in the planning."

Thanks to raised monies and Community Preservation Committee (CPC) funds, the new clubhouse is almost fully funded.

"We're so excited. This has been almost eight years in the planning."
— Sailing Club trustee Sandy Crough

The new building is estimated to cost around $500,000. The CPC gave $260,000 to the cause, as approved by the spring 2012 Annual Town Meeting; the Sailing Club has managed to raise an additional $240,000.

The costs that have been covered so far include the foundation of the new building, according to architect and CPC member Susan Hoadley, whose firm Hoadley-Martinez Architects worked on the project pro-bono.

"They donated all their services; it's been fantastic, as well as the civil engineering piece from Cavanaro Associates," said Crough, along with "a terrific amount of contractors, electricians and masons volunteer their services, helping to defray our costs... There's a nice community feel to the project. It's finally come to fruition

Handicap placard swiped from car in lot

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to the parking lot outside Stop & Shop on Monday (Oct. 14) around noontime on a report from a witness who observed an older man reach through the open window of a 2002 black Saturn and swipe the handicap placard and put it in his car. The man later identified as being 71 and from Cohasset had driven up in a Toyota RAV4.

Police responded and spoke to the witness who had been waiting outside while his wife was shopping when he saw the theft and described the man. The 49-year-old Cohasset woman, who owned the Saturn, returned to her car and confirmed the placard was missing.

When the man, who took the placard exited the store and was confronted, he apologized and told police he was having back problems and wanted a handicap placard. The victim was not interested in pursuing charges, police said.

Front lock

Police responded to a concern from a 73-year-old Hull Street resident about a potential break-in on Monday (Oct. 14). The resident said he had been having trouble with his front lock and wanted to be sure that no break-in had occurred. An officer went to the home, determined that nothing was missing or out or order, other than the doorknob, which was defective, police said.

Vandalism

Police have decided to seek a criminal complaint for vandalism against a Border Street resident for allegedly repeatedly pulling out stakes, turning over flowerpots and lawn ornaments over a property dispute with their next-door neighbor. Police said the issue has been ongoing for years; first with the prior neighbors and now with the current neighbors in the side-by-side home. Police said they have had enough and are going to summons the alleged perpetrator to court to face the charge of vandalism.

Peace restored

Police restored the peace at around 5:50 a.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 15) on S. Main Street by mediating a dispute between an ex-girlfriend and boyfriend. The boyfriend complained to police that his ex-girlfriend had been knocking at his door all night and would not leave. As it turned out, the boyfriend had the woman's keys and cell phone which police had him return to her.

Civil citation

A 21-year-old Holbrook man is being issued a $100 civil citation for possession of an ounce or less of marijuana after police saw a pipe and rolling papers in plain view in a 2005 Mazda parked at Dunkin Donuts where the officer had gone to pick up a cup of coffee.

Police interviewed the man and his girlfriend, who is 21 and from Weymouth; she told police she car belonged to her stepmother. The man admitted the drug paraphernalia belonged to him; police said the pipe contained a small amount of marijuana, hence the civil citation.

Flat tire

Police caught up with an au pair outside the Osgood School at 11:20 a.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 16) after she had been spotted driving a Land Rover that was smoking after she blew the tire out and kept going along Sohier Street. She had a valid license and the woman who employs her as a nanny came to the scene to assist.

MV crash

The 34-year old Hingham man who was operating a 2003 Dodge was cited for following too closely following a rear-end accident by the rear driveway to Stop & Shop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) around 4 p.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 16).

Police said the man, who was headed north and was slowing in traffic, became momentarily distracted when he looked at his radio before striking a 2008 Honda, operated by a 20-year-old woman, that had stopped in traffic. Neither car was towed and there were no reported injuries.

Threats

The ex-boyfriend of the alleged perpetrator's sister told police that a 19-year-old Hanson man had threatened him with a knife outside the Mobil Mark on Sohier Street at around 1 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 18). Police said the alleged victim claimed his ex-girlfriend's brother threatened to slit his throat.

Several days later, police located the suspect who is being summoned to court for assault with a dangerous weapon. The alleged victim is 21 and also from Hanson, police said. The two men were working in the area and ran into each other at Mobil Mart where they went to buy a snack, police said.

OUI arrest

A 56-year-old Cohasset woman has been charged with drunken driving following a traffic stop at 10:31 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 18) on Sohier Street. Police responded to a report from a cell caller about an erratically operated Infiniti that was "all over the road." Police pulled the car over and saw that both the passenger-side front and rear tires were blown out, the wheel rims were damaged and there was a scrape along the right side of the vehicle.

Police said the woman, identified as Denise M. MacKinnon, of 67A Gammons Road, told them she had come from the Hingham Shipyard. Hingham and Cohasset police traced her route of travel but could not locate what the vehicle may have struck to cause the damage.

Police said MacKinnon exhibited the signs and symptoms of intoxication and was placed under arrest. She was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol and negligent operation.

Police praised the 22-year-old Hingham man who alerted them to the erratic operation.

Citation

A 42-year-old Cohasset woman was issued a citation for leaving the scene after causing property damage after the Ford Escape she was driving hit the back of a Toyota Tundra that was parked on Cushing Road. She reported the incident the next morning (Saturday, Oct. 18).

Dog on dog

Police responded to a report from a 63-year-old Cohasset woman on Saturday (Oct. 19) around 6:20 p.m. that while she was walking her dog on the common, a man's dog tried to attack her dog. The animal control officer is investigating, police said. Police said the man with the black Labrador retriever is 48 and also from Cohasset.

Extra patrols

A Forest Avenue resident asked for extra patrols after finding his pumpkins stolen and later smashed, police said. The incident was called in at 11:07 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 20).

UPDATE

Public comment sought for Route 3A corridor study

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We want public input. At the end of the day, it's up to us to motivate MassDOT to do something."
Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski

The Town of Cohasset is seeking comments on Route 3A to help with a state corridor study.

The Planning Board and Board of Selectmen held a joint meeting Tuesday night to discuss the latest on the state department of transportation's (MassDOT) study of Route 3A. With the help of Planning Board member Clark Brewer, the town received a grant from the state earlier this year to have the 3A corridor examined for problems and potential solutions.

The focus of the study, said Planning Board chair Stuart Ivimey, is to determine "what can we do for 3A today with an eye to the future."

"The biggest emphasis is on safety," said Brewer.

Since the route is owned by the state, the town must "advocate for changes" with MassDOT, Ivimey explained.

The community's thoughts are sought in order to provide a framework for the project.

"We want public input," said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. "At the end of the day, it's up to us to motivate MassDOT to do something."

This is not the first time the Planning Board has solicited input on this issue. The planners held a public forum in the spring to explain what the MassDOT study would encompass, asking attendees to weigh in on what the biggest issues are with 3A, and suggest any possible improvements. Town officials, business owners, and residents from both Cohasset and Scituate attended the forum.

Chief complaints were high speeds and accidents, along with a lack of turning lanes in certain sections. Suggestions ranged from narrowing the road to force cars to go slower, changing traffic light patterns, or perhaps installing medians or traffic circles. Many expressed interest in seeing sidewalks and bicycle paths on 3A and discussed how to pay for those; the planners explained that there are grants and other funding mechanisms available.

An initial report was recently issued by the MassDOT; however, Ivimey emphasized, none of the state's suggested improvements are set in stone.

"This is a conceptual plan," said Milanoski.

According to the report, improvements include adjusting curb cuts, reducing four lanes in front of the Shaw's plaza to two, and implementing new traffic signals at "key intersections," including left-hand turning lanes.

The Planning Board and selectmen discussed holding another public forum in the future to discuss the corridor study. In the meantime, they are seeking public comment on the issue.

An email link to submit comments has been posted on the town website; those who would like may send comments to 3Acomments@cohassetma.org.

Comments are due by Tuesday, Nov. 5 and will be consolidated and sent to MassDOT.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

after getting the CPC money last spring."

The new clubhouse will have some new features that expand the size of the classroom "without changing the footprint of the club," said Crough.

The design also "lets the outside in" with garage doors that open up to a deck and big barn doors on the driveway side that will be "much more inviting," according to Crough.

The new structure will also be ADA-compliant for handicapped accessibility, not to mention eco-friendly. Hoadley explained that the design is LEED-certified.

"There are lot of things about it that make it a green building," Hoadley said of the new clubhouse, adding that she is a LEED Accredited Professional. "I was able to go down the checklist and make sure we fulfilled green criteria whenever possible. There's natural ventilation, so the building will stay cool without AC. We're sourcing lot of local materials and reusing components of old club."

"We invite community members that would like to bring groups for educational purposes to come watch this thing get put together."

Susan Hoadley, Hoadley-Martinez Architects

The new clubhouse is also being built with "forest-stewardship council lumber and timbers, which is sustainably-grown and harvested wood," said Hoadley.

The idea is to build a clubhouse that will last for generations.

"It should be a really cool building, and we hope it will be there for the next one hundred years," said Crough.

Hoadley said that the new building would be erected in December using a nail-less post and beam kit.

"The whole frame will go up in about two days," said Hoadley.

There is also an educational component to the construction; the Boy Scouts have been invited to watch the clubhouse get built and learn about the architecture. Hoadley said, "We invite community members that would like to bring groups for educational purposes to come watch this thing get put together. It's going to be a real-time, in action learning experience."

It's not every day you get the chance to be part of history in the making. Said Hoadley, "These kids are going to be able to occupy the building and hearken back to the way it was built; that's really exciting to me."

AUTHOR TALKS

Author Andre Dubus on desire, loss and hope

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Andre Dubus's latest book, "Dirty Love," hit bookstores last week, so the buzz is just starting to build. Mr. Dubus will speak about his book at Sunday Authortalks at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Nov. 3 at 4 p.m.

It's always a pleasure to hear the charismatic Dubus speak — he's funny, ironic, provocative, irreverent — and genuinely enjoys the warm connections he builds with people. This public persona is sometimes hard to reconcile with Dubus the author, whose themes of disillusion and love's dark side inhabit "Dirty Love." Each of the book's four novellas grows into one another as characters struggle to fulfill their need for control, sex, hope, and redemption.

The stories are set on a chilly, overcast coast north of Boston, in small, economically depressed towns — places that reflect the vulnerability of those who live and work and be and yearn for more. Ron Charles of the "Washington Post" says that "Dirty Love" is a "quiet" book. "It's one in which people's desires are smothered in frustration, their anger left to sputter in loneliness..."

Andre Dubus fans know him best for his 1999 novel "The House of Sand and Fog," which was a finalist for the National Book Award and an Academy Award-nominated film, "The Garden of Last Days," and his memoir "Townie," in which he writes about growing up in mill towns along the Merrimack River. He has taught writing at several colleges and universities in both Cambridge and Boston and lives on Boston's north shore. He has been awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship, the Pushcart Prize, and is a 2012 recipient of American Academy of Arts and Letters Award in Literature. His books are published in over 25 languages.

Admission to this event is free but seats are limited, so come early to ensure a spot. A wine and cheese reception will follow Mr. Dubus's talk where Buttonwood Books will provide copies of "Dirty Love" for purchase and signing. For more information on the Sunday Authortalk series, phone the library at 383-1348. To learn more about authors and find links to book reviews, author bios, and other works, visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Sunday Authortalks is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors and the Cook Estate. A Taste for Wine and Spirits donates the wines for post-talk receptions.

Wellspring

Have you ever had a wish that seemed so small and basic, yet was so far away to grasp? "I wish I had a bus pass, my GED, winter boots, food on the table, hearing aids, my own bed." People come to Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull with problems and with wishes. Some of the wishes are for the little things that most of us take for granted. But these wishes are very real, and present serious obstacles to the clients who seek assistance from Wellspring. A group of Cohasset residents are helping Wellspring raise the funds needed to help make certain wishes come true. Karyn Ellinger, Debbie Flanagan, Julie Rafferty, Sarah Roche, Gitte Shea, Patty Smith, Brenda Basile, Mary Anne Chase, Bernadette Faulkner and Joyce Whitman have donated time and talents to Wellspring's Big Wish.

This jazzy gala, takes place at the Nantasket Beach Resort, Friday, Nov. 8th, 7 p.m. Guests will be transported to the Roaring 20s. The hotel will be transformed by into a swinging nightspot that includes a speakeasy, vintage photo studio, and swell dance music provided by The Smoking Jackets. Partiers can learn to Charleston and comedian Jimmy Tingle will keep the group laughing while he invites bidders to try for live auction items.

This fundraiser will support Wellspring's mission to provide clients with the tools to achieve independent living and to help make the most basic "wishes" come true. So mark your calendars for the Big Wish, Friday, Nov. 8, Nantasket Beach Resort. $100 per person. To reserve a place go to: wellspringhull.org or call 781-925-3211.

Please send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Battle of the Bands supports April trip

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

On Friday, Nov. 15th, bands will convene in the CHS auditorium, and there is sure to be refreshments. If you know a band that would be interested, be sure to get in touch with myself, or Mr. Willis.

Fear. Shock. Horror.

No, these aren't the emotions running through students as first quarter grades prepare to arrive in the coming weeks; rather, it's just the feelings associated with Halloween. It may just be per chance that the candy-packed holiday coincides with the final stretch of the school year's first quarter, but nonetheless, there is certainly a lot going at CHS this week.

Speaking of Halloween, the Appalachia Service Project, aka ASP, has taken to Wheelwright Park with their annual Pumpkin Patch Fundraiser. Forming a maze of bright orange with these gourds, the ASP volunteers, nearly all of whom are CHS students, are hoping to raise money for their service trip this summer.

And speaking of trips, the biannual Europe Trip, run through the Educational Foundation and organized by CHS history teacher Mr. Willis, is in the process of fundraising for a trip of their own. This April vacation, the trip will take 40 or so CHSers to soak in the cultural hubs of Athens, Rome, and Istanbul in what figures to be an unforgettable excursion. To raise money for the trip, fundraiser organizer and CHS senior Maggie Littlejohn has proposed the idea of a "Battle of the Bands". On Friday, Nov. 15th, bands will convene in the CHS auditorium, and there is sure to be refreshments. If you know a band that would be interested, be sure to get in touch with myself, or Mr. Willis. Hope to see you all there.

And since we are talking about bands, I'll take this opportunity to shout out to the CHS band, directed by Mrs. Stephanie Moriarty. Rehearsals have began for the Winter Concert, and the band can also be found in its "pep-band" form at the sidelines of the football games.

And finally, since we just spoke of football games, there's a huge tilt for the 5-1 football Skippers, this evening. The 4-2 Mashpee Falcons will arrive this evening in what is sure to be an exciting bout. I have been lucky enough to get the opportunity to do play-by-play commentary up in the booth, with the help of 143TV program director Don Roinc. Be sure to check in to 143TV next Wednesday if you're interested.

Go Skippers, Happy Halloween, and as always, keep it classy Cohasset.

JINGLE BELL WALK

Do you want to be one of Santa's elves?

By Liz Fuller correspondent

"It's such a magical event. You have a town walking behind a carriage drawn by Clydesdale horses, with the sound of jingle bells all around."
Danielle Carter

It's only October, but Christmas is coming! The holiday season kicks off with the annual Jingle Bell Walk, sponsored by South Shore Community Center. This year's Jingle Bell Walk will take place on Friday, Nov. 29 at 2 p.m. at Cohasset Harbor, off Border Street, where Santa, Mrs. Claus, and his elves will arrive by boat. Fun activities and refreshments will be waiting back at the community center for all to enjoy.

One exciting opportunity for a few local children is the elf raffle. The elf raffle allows children a chance to ride on the boat into the harbor with Santa. The raffle began three years ago as a supplement to the Nardo Scholarship, a scholarship named for three Cohasset children who died more than 30 years ago in a house fire. The scholarship benefits the community center in many ways; free tuition to the nursery school, special activities, the annual art show, and special guests and performers.

The elf raffle contributes to the community center, not only in monetary ways, but creating special experiences and memories for the community. Raffle tickets can be purchased at the community center for kids age five and older to win a chance to be one of the elves on Santa's boat. Former elf, Lola Carter, 8, said that being an elf was "really fun."

"I got to ride into the harbor with Santa and Mrs. Claus. We (she and the four other elves) got to hand out jingle bells and then we took a carriage ride to the community center and everyone who came to see us on the boat followed the carriage."

Lola said she was excited to help Santa. "We said hi to everyone and helped them to sing Christmas songs. We had hot chocolate, cookies, and doughnuts."

Lola admitted she had been nervous at one point during the celebration. "I got a little nervous when I had to sing on stage," she recalled. "But then I was okay and had a lot of fun."

Lola's mother, Danielle Carter, echoed Lola's feelings. "She had a great time," Danielle said. Danielle, a board member of the community center, pointed out that the Jingle Bell Walk is a unique and special experience for the town, but especially for the children.

"It's such a magical event," she said, providing imagery with her words. "You have a town walking behind a carriage drawn by Clydesdale horses, with the sound of jingle bells all around. The kids who win the elf raffle feel very special, very important, to be part of that."

Ann Madden, director of South Shore Community Center Nursery School said that the Nardo Scholarship and the elf raffle really "benefit the whole town."

"The money goes into our enrichment fund and allows us to provide special activities for the town," Madded said. "We have the New England Aquarium come, Mama Steph comes to sing, yoga, cooking classes, and the annual art show, which is our signature event. It just provides many opportunities for enrichment. The Jingle Bell Walk is our way to give back to the community. It's a free event, so families can come and enjoy themselves and celebrate the season."

Danielle Carter sums up the event by saying, "This event is so Norman Rockwell."

Farmers market wraps up for season

Cohasset Farmers Market ended its season with a flourish!

The farmers market ended its 22nd season on Thursday, Oct. 18. Families turned out on the town common one last time to enjoy the fresh produce, baked goods, prepared foods, ice cream, handmade crafts and live music.

The highlight of the day was a cooking demonstration by Anna Abruzzese, who prepared a Harvest Vegetable Casserole, which was not only a beautiful sight to behold but tantalizingly delicious as well. If you tasted it and want to make it yourself, or if you missed the tasting, the recipe is below. You can still purchase all the vegetables at Holly Hill Farm or other local farm stands.

Thank you to all the shoppers who made our market so successful and to all the faithful vendors who are so committed to our market. Shopping at a farmers market helps our local farmers, small businesses and musicians as well as stimulates the local economy.

Farewell for now! The Cohasset Farmers Market will return for its 23rd season in June 2014.

Oil-Roasted Farm Vegetables (from Nantucket Farm Vegetables)

3 large or 12 small red potatoes, scrubbed

3/4 to 1 cup olive oil

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1 medium eggplant

2 medium zucchini

2 medium summer squash

2 yellow bell peppers

Red bell peppers

2 medium red onions, peeled

3 ripe medium tomatoes, seeded and cut into ½-inch thick wedges

1/4 cup chopped fresh basil

Cut potatoes into 1/8-inch thick slices. Arrange slices in a single layer in a 12x9-inch baking dish and drizzle lightly with some of the oil. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper.

Cut the unpeeled eggplant into ½-inch thick slices, then cut the slices crosswise in half. Slice the zucchini and summer squash in the same manner. Core and seed the peppers, cut into ½-inch thick rings, and then in half to make half circles.

Preheat oven to 375 F.

To form a rainbow of colors, arrange all the vegeta bles over the potatoes in compact, alternating rows, each vegetable slice standing balanced on its straight edge. Drizzle the vegetables with about 1/2 cup oil and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Cover the dish very tightly with foil. Bake for 1-1/4 hours. Remove foil and insert the tomato wedges randomly between rows of vegetables. Sprinkle the basil over the top and drizzle with a bit more olive oil if the vegetables seem to be drying out. Bake uncovered 30-40 minutes longer. Serve warm or at room temperature. Makes 8 – 10 servings.

Annual Meeting and Fall Dinner

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its Annual Meeting and Fall Dinner on Sunday, Oct. 27, at the Cohasset Harbor Inn, 124 Elm St. in Cohasset. The speaker for this evening is William Fowler, distinguished professor of history at Northeastern University. Dr. Fowler is the author of a number of books dealing with American and Maritime history with "Empires at War: The French and Indian War" being his latest. This book looks at the French and Indian war, 1754 to 1763, from a global perspective and calls it the "first world war". In this narrative, he postulates that George Washington may have been responsible for the Revolutionary War. This was that has been called "The Seven Years War" is largely overshadowed by the Revolutionary War and has received little attention until now. The effect of this conflict had far reaching consequences and Dr. Fowler explores the topic thoroughly'

The dinner will begin with a cash bar and cheese tray at 5:30 p.m. with dinner following a brief business meeting. The cost for members is $31 and non-members $36. A choice of entrees includes roasted salmon with apple cider and mustard glaze or sausage and apple stuffed chicken breast with a shallot white wine sauce. GIMME SHELTER

Chris has a story to share

Sweet and petite, lovable and adorable, this is Chris. Such feminine, feline beauty she possesses. At just one year old, she has a quiet and calm personality and loves attention and affection. Gentle petting and being told how special and beautiful she is, are just what she deserves as her road to being rescued was not an easy one. Responsible, loving and loyal, Chris has a litter of five kittens that are bound to have their mom's wonderful traits. They will be available for adoption soon as well.

Chris's story is one that will be remembered by us forever. So young and innocent, with the instinct of a true survivor, she is more than special. Her saga began in September after she delivered a litter of five beautiful kittens. Have you ever been separated from young children without any warning? The feeling of confusion, frantic searching and calling out for little ones who have no way to care for themselves without you becomes overwhelming. Waiting, worrying, knowing instinctively that what was happening was beyond comprehension?

Chris's story is one that will be remembered by us forever. So young and innocent, with the instinct of a true survivor, she is more than special.

Well, Chris has been through all of that and probably more.

While her babies were involved in a dramatic rescue from a shoebox left outside, and quickly brought to one of our foster homes, Chris was searching for them. She had been shoved away while trying to get to them, leaving her babies to be bottle fed and desperately missing their mom given their young age. Within a few days, volunteer efforts intensified, arrangements were made, and this little momma and her babies were reunited leading to one happy little family, but what a traumatic experience. There is relief for us knowing that all of them will now have a chance to move to real, loving homes where they will know affection, caring, years of fun and never feel abandoned again.

You have met Chris, our feature cat this week, and hopefully she will steal many hearts. Really, she is just a kitten herself, but has been burdened by a situation beyond her control. Thankfully, she made her way to Hull Seaside and has found peace, comfort and love. Chris will thrive in her new home and what a great companion she will be. Now that her babies are weaned, this is definitely her time to be young, spoiled, and enjoy tons of affection, playtime, exploring and relaxing her new home. Curling up with you will give her security and provide you with hours of warmth and love.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Chris. She deserves a happy, welcoming and loving forever home so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for their best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. events.

Triathlon date set for June

Selectmen ask tough questions but approve event

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We're trying to do our job, you're trying to do your job; we hope to work together."
Selectman Karen Quigley

The date for the eighth annual Cohasset Triathlon has been set, voted for unanimously by the Board of Selectmen.

The next tri will take place on Sunday, June 29, 2014.

Cohasset Triathlon organizer and director Bill Burnett reported that town department heads and the Sandy Beach Association all approved the date; it was also agreed upon by local clergy, who hold church services during the time of the race (the race begins at 7:45 a.m. and typically concludes around 10 a.m.).

Burnett said that some changes have been made to next year's route so that the churches will be far less impacted.

The popular event, which sees as many as 1,000 descending upon Cohasset to partake in the swim, bike and run, helps bring buzz and business to Cohasset while promoting a healthy lifestyle and raising funds and awareness for juvenile diabetes, said Burnett.

To date, the event has raised approximately $1 million for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF).

Before approving the triathlon date, Selectman Martha Gjesteby asked Burnett some tough questions about the event's financials, specifically concerning Burnett's business Streamline Events.

Burnett explained that he runs a for-profit company holding athletic events all over the state, from Salem to Nantucket.

"It started as a dream for me and became a reality," Burnett said of owning his business, adding, "In every community we come to, we're always invited back."

Gjesteby responded, "I just wanted to know the scope of your activities; I didn't know." She further asked what percentage of the money coming in from the event goes back into Cohasset.

Burnett said that he looks for projects that will benefit the town, including the "Share the Road" signs that were installed several years ago. The race director said he solicits various town departments and organizations, from the Department of Public Works to the Chamber of Commerce, asking for ideas on ways to give back to the community.

When told that it costs $90 to participate in the race, Gjesteby quipped, "You get a lot of money."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski noted that Streamline Events pays for all of the police details for the race, which also provides an opportunity "to assemble a disaster response team," something the town would "otherwise pay tens of thousands for.

"That's another value for the community," said Milanoski.

Selectman Karen Quigley said that she and Burnett have "been around and around on this in the past," and while she said she supports the triathlon, and is "envious that you can have a business you truly love," she is concerned about the size of the event and its impact on the town.

Quigley noted that 1,000 people are allowed, but said she recalled the event being capped at 900. Milanoski said that it's been 1,000 for the past few years, which was approved before his time.

"It's still a major impact on the community," said Quigley, however thanking Burnett for the improvements that have been made to the route.

When Gjesteby said that she'd gotten a lot of complaints about the triathlon, particularly from church parishioners and beachgoers, Burnett asked her to please call him with any complaints in the future.

Quigley said Burnett ought to not take the comments, questions or concerns personally. "We're trying to do our job, you're trying to do your job; we hope to work together."

Selectmen chair Fred Koed thanked Burnett for the improvements he's made so far. "As long as we keep working together, we should be in good shape."

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said that the Cohasset tri is one of the best she's ever been to, explaining that her husband runs in races all the time.

"I've been to hundreds of these events," said Kennedy. "This is one of the best-run."

Kennedy noted that the race draws Cohasset residents in to watch, and most of the day's volunteers are townspeople.

And while she agreed the board has "ask hard questions," Kennedy said of the tri, "I think it's fabulous."

The board voted unanimously (5-0) to approve the June 29 date.

PETITION

Oct. 22 selectmen meeting.

The STM will take place on Saturday, Nov. 23, starting at 9 a.m., as voted unanimously (5-0) by the selectmen on Tuesday. The vote was pending the legality of the petition, which will be reviewed by Town Counsel.

The petition to call a STM was turned into the Town Clerk's office on Tuesday. Dr. Paul Schubert, who chairs the School Committee, said during the selectmen's public comment period that he was behind the petition.

Schubert said the petition was not a "personal decision" but was in "the best interest of the town." The school board chair said he considered several options before deciding the launch the petition, including the "devil's advocate point of view."

Schubert added, "If you can't get the devil's advocate to sway the decision, it's the right decision."

The petition packet contained 16 pages with 398 signatures; 200 signatures are required to hold a STM. The Board of Registrar's Office certified eight sheets, 226 signatures. Certification stopped once the 200-plus signatures were certified, according to Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre.

Next Tuesday, Oct. 29, is the deadline for warrant articles.

Selectmen debated the need for a STM last week, during their Tuesday, Oct. 15 meeting. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski urged the selectmen to agree to hold one in order to have citizens vote on how to utilize unencumbered funds, including $600,000 from the state-issued Cherry Sheet and $1.3 million in Free Cash, which has been certified by the state Department of Revenue.

In a memo to the selectmen last week, Milanoski stressed the need to call a STM in order to vote on these funds, following the town's financial management policies that were voted on by the 2012 Annual Town Meeting (ATM) and implemented last year.

"We need to vote on the $600,000 so it's recognized this year in our tax levy," Milanoski said Tuesday. Otherwise the money will not be available until next fall, the acting town manager explained, appropriated by the spring annual Town Meeting or another Special Town Meeting.

Milanoski would like to see the unexpected funds moved into the town's stabilization or trust fund accounts, which will "allow the town's treasurer to invest in higher interest yielding accounts."

"This is the only group I know of that can argue over financial success."
Selectman Steve Gaumer

The town's treasurer collector Paula Linhares attended Tuesday s meeting, along with Finance Director Mary Gallagher. Both vouched for the need of a Special Town Meeting, but seemingly failed to convince a majority of selectmen.

Besides rising interest rates that will incur if the funds sit for a year, Gallagher said that failing to take action now could negatively affect the town's bond rating.

"If we have financial management policies and it doesn't look like we're taking them seriously," the town's rating with bond agencies could drop, she said.

When Koed suggested the town could lower local receipts by $600,000, Gallagher responded that the town doesn't need to go to a STM to do this, however it was more "fiscally responsible" to vote to appropriate the funds.

Lowering receipts, however, is "not realistic," said Milanoski, saying it would be more "prudent" to "appropriate the money so you can realize it this year."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby wondered why the STM couldn't be delayed until January or sometime in early 2014, since the town is in the process of hiring a permanent town manager. The consulting firm the selectmen hired to conduct the search is in the midst of selecting final candidates to be interviewed by the selectmen. The finalists could be presented as soon as Nov. 1.

"We're hiring a new town manager in November," said Gjesteby. "I think [a STM] would tie his hands."

Koed said it felt like the board was being "forced" to have the STM, noting that the reasons for the STM outlined in the petition echoed Milanoski's recommendations for what to do with the free cash and Cherry Street funds.

"We've got a petition here telling us how we're going to do it," Koed said, referencing the document. "We're being forced to accept the town manager's recommendations... all the recommendations made their way into the petition."

Koed also said he was under the impression that the town needed to act on the monies now to lock in lower interest rates.

"It seems like we're chasing interest rates," he said, arguing that the funds could be allocated to the town's trust fund for the Other Post-Employment Benefit (OPEB) liability, a $38 million debt the town carries to fund town retirees' health insurance.

Milanoski said that the matter should be discussed with the town's OPEB committee, who will update the selectmen next week with recommendations for tackling the liability.

Tax rate

The impression that selectman Karen Quigley had last week was that the tax rate needed to be set at Town Meeting, she said. Gallagher said that wasn't the case. The funds had to be voted on before the tax rate is set, Milanoski added, so that the monies can be allocated before next fall.

Quigley's point was that there was an issue with the "process and procedure" of the matter, and she wondered "how we got to this place," scheduling a last-minute STM before the end of the year.

"If somebody had alerted the board earlier that there were special circumstances" for holding the STM, said Quigley, "we would've had this conversation earlier, so as not to subject the townspeople to another unpleasant discussion with the board of selectmen and town manager."

As arguments continued over the financials and how best to invest the surplus monies, Selectman Steve Gaumer grew agitated.

"This is the only group I know of that can argue over financial success," said Gaumer. "If there's a point here, make it. If it's just to beat up our public employee [Milanoski], go ahead... Do we really need to carp?"

The STM has to happen regardless, said Gaumer. "Three hundred ninety-eight townspeople said to 'do what we told you to do.'"

"It's a moot point," said Koed. "We're going to a special town meeting, want it or not."

After a lengthy discussion debating the merits of a Monday versus Saturday town meeting, the selectmen decided unanimously on Saturday, Nov. 23 as the chosen STM date, starting at 9 a.m. Milanoski said he would check on the availability of the high school gymnasium or auditorium.

Warrant articles are due on Tuesday, Oct. 29.

Town Hall renovation board to brainstorm

The Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee recently received a report by Building Envelope Consulting, Inc. on the condition of Town Hall.

The survey BEC conducted identifies several structural issues of concern with the building, including decay, trapped moisture and other damage. It could cost upwards of $700,000 to repair the building envelope.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the Board of Selectmen will receive a detailed update from the committee next week.

Renovation committee member Todd Goff said that the committee has a brainstorming session scheduled for the first week of November.

OUR VIEW

3A corridor

While the Board of Selectmen is split on many issues – we think they can find common ground when it comes to working with the state Department of Transportation (MassDOT) to make improvements along Route 3A.

Route 3A (aka Chief Justice Cushing Highway and part of King Street) is perhaps Cohasset's worst-kept secret.

Not only is it a largely unattractive stretch of roadway in a town known for exquisite vistas and charming neighborhoods – but traffic-wise it is a complete mess. There is also no way that bicyclists or pedestrians can travel the highway without being put at risk.

We are not traffic engineers but often wonder "what were they thinking?' when 3A developed into a major thoroughfare with tons of shopping centers, curb cuts, myriad signage and visual clutter.

Cohasset cannot turn back the clock and make 3A a scenic roadway – but surely smart people can put their heads together and make the highway safer with clearer traffic rules.

The left-turn light at Beechwood and Route 3A – has never worked for us. We have seen the green arrow occasionally work for other motorists. It appears one has to be waiting at exactly the right spot to trigger the left-turn arrow. The lack of that consistency, in our view, has resulted in numerous left-turn accidents at that intersection.

The speed limit by Shaw's is 35 miles per hour. We try to follow that only to be highly tailgated by impatient and hurried motorists either heading out of or toward Scituate. People also pass on the right along that stretch – an illegal and dangerous practice!

We think speed limits all along 3A need to be examined and to be more consistent. The 35 mph speed limit, we just talked about, goes back up to 50 mph pretty quickly. If 35 is too slow, isn't 50 too high for such a congested roadway?

The stretch of 3A (King Street) by Avalon is a very tricky area. We've witnessed motorists traversing straight across King Street from the Avalon driveway into the Dunkin Donuts parking lot while another motorist is waiting to exit Dunkin Donuts and make a left onto 3A against traffic. Clearly that entire stretch is a recipe for disaster.

Parts of Scituate and Marshfield got it right when they kept most of 3A residentially zoned. Much of 3A in Hingham (Summer, Otis and Lincoln streets) is equally as cluttered and crazy as 3A in Cohasset.

Cohasset cannot turn back the clock and make 3A a scenic roadway – but surely smart people can put their heads together and make the highway safer with clearer traffic rules.

Acting Police Chief William Quigley is looking forward to working with stakeholders to make improvements a reality.

"It has taken over half of my career, but we finally have all of the stakeholders at the table and meaningful safety improvements are imminent for the 3A corridor in Cohasset," he said.

Please weigh in on the 3A corridor study by visiting the town website where an email link to submit comments has been posted; those who would like may also send comments to 3Acomments@cohassetma.org.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Praise for Selectman Koed

Selectman Chairman Fred Koed is doing a great job. He is diplomatically and skillfully navigating a severely divided Board of Selectman (BOS). Although civility has too often been a casualty, that is not his fault. He has done his best to give all Selectman a fair hearing. On many issues, he casts the critical vote because you can usually rely on Karen and Martha to agree with Steve in opposition and Diane more often than not (not always) agreeing with Steve. Other than the sometimes-heated disagreements – this is not necessarily bad. We get to hear both sides of issues and we end up with a smart, fair-minded person often casting the deciding vote.

Chairman Koed should be commended for emphasizing the importance of "process." It was a failure to respect "process" that did in Town Manager (TM) Mike Coughlin. Rewriting the Town Manager Act (TMA) was a blatant "work around" to qualify the Acting Town Manager (ATM) for permanent appointment. It is unconscionable that revisions to the TMA dilute prerequisites to compete for the position. Selectman Koed is correct to emphasize "process" in selection of our next Police Chief. Again, it would be unconscionable to appoint such a crucial position without competing it. No doubt, Acting Chief Quigley will be a very strong candidate.

Again, Chairman Koed is on target in giving priority to the TM selection process over a last minute flip flop to have a Special Town Meeting (STM). Almost 30 years ago, it was decided to have regular fall STM meetings for the specific objective of reviewing capital budget spending articles. I was on the Capital Budget Committee at that time. Since that time, the floodgates have opened to "anything and everything." One major change, since 30 years ago, has been establishment of the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) tax surcharge that results in additional spending articles. This year, neither the Capital Budget Committee (CBC) nor the CPC have sought to present STM spending articles. There has been some recent talk about the School Committee wanting to present spending articles at the STM. As a former School Committee member, I can assure you that the School District has the flexibility to move dollars between line items and sufficient funding to wait for the Annul Town Meeting to mark-up their budget.

I do not understand why a State Cherry sheet mark-up necessitates a STM. It would be wiser to "bank" the added funding and very deliberately recommend its allocation before the Annual Town Meeting. The Acting Town Manager made it sound as if we had to spend up to some arbitrarily established spending level; otherwise, the funds would burn a hole through our pocket. Chairman Koed correctly suggested that the current priority is the selection "process" for the new TM. To do a "flip flop" and hurriedly schedule a STM could result in a chaotic, poorly organized STM and a distracter from the immediate priority – selection of the permanent Town Manager.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Clearing a field, learning together

The task is to clear Hap's Patch, a growing field out on the edge of Jerusalem Road, for growing this year: dried flowers, thai basil, husk cherry tomatoes and Winter squash.

JON BELBER

It's that time of year: The cool, crisp morning air, mere days and hours before frost descends on the South Shore coast, meets the sunny, ripe farm with good energy.

The first block of the day begins with all 28 or so students from the Cohasset High School community service class taught by Jack Buckley arriving by carpool to tackle a needed chore. They have come before to clear away brush from an inactive ditch meant to catch water from drenching the nearby growing field. On this recent day, though chilly themselves, they quickly settled into work, having been summoned for service in the community here at Holly Hill Farm.

The task is to clear Hap's Patch, a growing field out on the edge of Jerusalem Road, for growing this year: dried flowers, thai basil, husk cherry tomatoes and Winter squash. It does not take long for weeds of sumac, wild black raspberry bramble and bittersweet to take hold.

However, though they seem to dominate and perhaps destroy our landscape, there is no need for yellow flags to quell these weeds. Having descended the old stairs, which used to climb to the old house, the students put a great deal of kind service into their community.

Once weeds were lopped, raked and cleared, the students began to wheelbarrow over the spent manure (read humus and compost) to replenish the hard working soil. While diligently working and warming up due to their labor and the brightening sun, the discoveries were new and perhaps appealing. I peeled back some husks and shared the juicy fruit, which apparently has not yet made its way to the Cohasset cafeteria.

The pungent thai basil, with leaves alive, was also new and intriguing. But the greatest delight seemed to be finding petite gourds and colorful carnival squash. The field was beginning to again take shape and the kids, mostly all seniors, began to remark at the possibilities for new plantings and rightly proud of their accomplishments.

Frank White, for whom education was a constant resource, saw lots of value in working with kids and adults of all ages.

"Whenever you are working in the field with someone," he would often say to me, "there is bound to be important teaching involved." I did not stop and explain each crop or the benefits of the nutrient-rich humus or the importance of cutting back field edges, but when Deanna the farmer appeared with a broad smile, it was clear to me we were all learning by doing.

There may not be a wealth of farmers in this particular class, though welcome them I would, but there is the possibility that a positive experience was had by all.

There are more fields to tend, crops to cultivate and chances to reap what has been sown, but today, an impact was made and little gourds could be symbolic of grand success. For more than an hour, there was helpful learning and something upon which to reflect. And for that we at the farm continue to grow – in large part due to those in the community who serve. Thank you.

A tax credit for Fairoaks residents

I really dislike Halloween. No seriously, without a doubt, Halloween is my least favorite holiday and to make matters worse, my family loves it.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Roughly a year ago, when I was approached about possibly submitting a monthly piece to the Mariner, the first thing my wife said to me was "Please, please, please don't write anything that will get us run out of town." It's a pretty funny comment until you realize – she wasn't joking.

Without patting myself too much on the back, I've been pretty good. So far, most if not all of my "run out of town" worthy thoughts have been either wisely deleted, toned down or unwisely saved for a later date. However this week I just can't contain myself but it's not the town I am worried about being run out of, it's my house. I really dislike Halloween. No seriously, without a doubt, Halloween is my least favorite holiday and to make matters worse, my family loves it.

The reasons why I dislike All Hallows Eve are numerous and most likely began when I was in third grade. Growing up in Plymouth there was an older lady new to the neighborhood, who on Halloween ran out of her homemade treats (remember homemade treats?) and she was overwhelmed and weeping at her door as waves of kids kept showing up. I remember walking away from her house feeling really bad as I listened to my friends complain. Ironically, my costume that year was a Santa Claus outfit my mom made (remember homemade costumes?). Throw in my aversion for scary movies, the color orange and the smell of a cut open pumpkin and you begin to see how Halloween just isn't my thing.

And when did Halloween evolve into a three-week event? Anyone remember when Halloween started when the sun went down on Oct. 31 and ended with incredibly sore feet, and an upset stomach? Aside from the school dance Halloween was a few hour event, not anymore. The marketing geniuses on Madison Avenue keep coming up with ways to convince us that Halloween is much more than a single night of sweets and debauchery. Costume parades, numerous costume parties, yard decorations, Halloween lights and a candy themed version of ding-dong-ditch are just some of the things that keep expanding the holiday and my family loves them all. And another thing, at what point did all female costumes require garters and a receding neckline? Unfortunately, I can tell you that it was sometime after I graduated college.

Don't get me wrong, not everything about Halloween is bothersome. It's hard to find something cuter than a little child in a homemade costume knocking at your door, and is there a better holiday cartoon moment than when Charlie Brown says "I got a rock."? However, if I had my druthers, I'd take a pass on Halloween and move right on to Thanksgiving.

All of this brings me around to the concept of a tax credit for homeowners on Fairoaks Lane. I propose that our esteemed Selectmen take a break from fighting over which town employee they like or don't like, put their differences aside and immediately pass an official something or other that grants a $200 tax credit to Fairoaks homeowners. Call it a Halloween Candy Tax Credit to offset the amount of candy given out each year.

Fairoaks Lane is Cohasset's trick-or-treat ground zero. Seriously have you been in our neighborhood on Halloween? Last year alone we gave out close to 200 pieces of candy and while I'm not a math whiz I am pretty sure there aren't 200 kids living in the neighborhood and the ones that do are not changing costumes in the woods and coming back for seconds, thirds and fourths.

How is it that Fairoaks is inundated with so many kids each Halloween? The answer is quite simple; we have a great school system. Obviously the kids are applying skills learned in geography and math and have wisely determined that Fairoaks offers the best candy per square foot ratio in town. Some say that Linden Drive may have a similar candy per square foot ratio and to that I say fine if they want a Halloween Candy Tax Credit let them apply for one; this article is for all of us underprivileged Fairoaks homeowners.

To be fair, I believe in order to be eligible for the Halloween Candy Tax Credit a resident should be required to give out at least a full size candy bar and that brings me around to the responsibility of the kids. Above and beyond the important safety tips everyone needs to be aware of on Halloween, if a kid is going to go door-to-door demanding the goods, they need to put in a little effort.

This paragraph is mainly for you junior high/high school kids out wandering the night. If you are going to come knocking on our doors looking for our tax credit candy bars how about a little effort in dressing up? There's a time we all outgrow going out and if you're one who can't be bothered to dress up you've most likely reached that time. Seriously, pajamas, sports jerseys, sports equipment, all black clothes and a scream mask, army fatigues or anything else that takes 2 minutes to throw on doesn't really cut it.

With the mass of costumed humanity that descends each Oct. 31 onto Fairoaks, it's only fair that we be eligible for a significant credit. With that said, I'd like to ask our Selectmen to add a crucial piece to the legislation before they unite in a unique act of civility and vote 5-0 in supporting our plight; please disqualify anyone who gives out a piece of candy with coconut in it. Coconut candy, now that's something to be really scared about.

Thanks for reading and Happy Halloween to all. Be safe, be creative and give a little effort; we'll be waiting for you down on Fairoaks – with a bit of a wink.

SENIOR SCENE

Times, they are a-changin'

We did have a Victrola onto which a record was put, and then we wound it up by hand. I really enjoyed that Victrola.

LOUISE SMULLEN

The first family home I lived in had gas lighting. When the gas supply got low my mother would drop a quarter in the meter and we would have a new supply of gas. The house was heated by a big black coal and gas range in the kitchen and a potbellied stove in the living room with no heat at all upstairs. By the time I reached fourth grade electricity had been installed and a big hot air furnace into which my father shoveled coal had been put into the cellar. Upstairs one hot air register had been installed in the hall. I remember gathering my clothes and dressing for the day standing over that register.

We didn't have a telephone or radio until I started going to junior high. We did have a Victrola onto which a record was put, and then we wound it up by hand. I really enjoyed that Victrola.

You can perhaps imagine how mind boggling all the new technology is to someone who was a child way back then. When the bank where I worked in later years got its first fax machine it was just amazing. We've come so far since then. Does it make you wonder what is in the store for our children and grandchildren? This technology is part of their everyday life.

Autumn is in full swing with its bright colors and falling leaves. We've had some beautiful days. Plans are already being made for Halloween and the holidays to come.

On Monday, Oct. 28 at 10 a.m. there will be a safe driving seminar. You will learn about defensive driving techniques and how to adjust your driving for age related changes. Make your reservations by calling 781-383-9112. Also, make your reservations for the Halloween Party and lunch on Thursday, Oct. 31. Wear a costume if you desire. Hope to see you there.

CDTC Movie Night tonight

The film examines incidents of hunger experienced by millions of Americans and stars Jeff Bridges, founder of The Hunger Network.

The first in 2013/2014 series of films presented by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be "A Place at the Table," a documentary released in 2012 by filmmakers Kristi Jacobson and Lori Silverbush. The film will be shown at 7 p.m., on Friday, Oct. 25, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. CDTC movies are free.

The film examines incidents of hunger experienced by millions of Americans and stars Jeff Bridges, founder of The Hunger Network. The cast includes Massachusetts Congressman James McGovern who was one of four members of Congress who pledged to live for a week on an average food stamp budget. The average SNAP, Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, (food stamps) budget is $4 per day. According to the Food Research and Action Council, one in four of U.S. households with children report inability to afford enough food.

Further research through a report of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, revealed that "the 2009 Recovery Act's temporary boost to the SNAP program is scheduled to end on Nov. 1, 2013, resulting in a benefit cut for every SNAP household. For families of three the cut will be $29 a month or $319 this year. Without the Recovery Act's boost, SNAP benefits will average less than $1.40 per person per meal in 2014. It seems unlikely that Congress will enact legislation to remedy this problem, as President Obama and some members of Congress have proposed. Consequently, states need to prepare for the benefit cuts."

"A Place at the Table" tells the stories of three Americans who try to maintain their dignity even as they struggle just to eat. Barbie, a single Philadelphia mother who grew up in poverty and is trying to provide a better life for her two children; Rosie, a Colorado fifth-grader who often has to depend on friends and neighbors to feed her and has trouble concentrating in school; and Tremonica, a Mississippi second-grader whose asthma and health issues are exacerbated by the largely empty calories her hard-working mother can afford.

FOR THE RECORD

Another look at the big picture

GREGORY MATHIS

As the saying goes, a picture is worth 1,000 words.

I'll spare you and won't use that many words to describe our policy on purchasing photographs, but we do get many requests for reprints, and an explanation may answer some questions and clear up any confusion.

We take pride in the photographs produced in our newspapers as well as on our Wicked Local websites. Part of our philosophy always has been to provide as many photos from community events as possible, as well as high school sports, school events and even news photographs.

Going back 15 or 20 years, in the day of film and darkrooms and before digital photography, many people were content to cut the black & white photograph and the caption out of the newspaper. It may have ended up on the refrigerator for a few weeks or in a scrapbook or tossed in a box to be discovered years later.

Around the mid-1990s, we began offering reprints of photos that were published in the newspaper. Getting prints to the public was a lengthy and cumbersome process as it often involved photographers having to go back into the darkroom to make prints or bring the negatives to a photo shop. It sometimes took months for a reader to get their copy of a photo.

Purchasing photographs today is a lot quicker and much easier thanks to our website and digital photography. It also creates some challenges because those digital images theoretically can be easily shared.

Our photos are for sale, but the idea is those photos are for personal use. The intention is the picture ends up in a frame and placed on a desk at work or hung on the wall for family and friends to see.

The photographs for which we have the copyright are not intended to be purchased and used in advertisements or for commercial purposes, on political propaganda or on websites for other companies. And it is our general policy not to provide free copies of our photographs to be used for those and other purposes, just like we don't give away free copies of our paid newspapers. Both are valuable sources of revenue for our business.

With that said, it's easy to purchase photos. Each photo that's eligible for purchase online has the phrase "Purchase this photo" to the right under the photo. When you click on that, it will take you to an online order form. You'll see a number of options and price ranges for various size photographs, as well as several novelty options to display the picture, from coffee mugs, to mouse pads, to T-shirts.

If you're intimidated by the online order form and would just like to speak to someone about a photograph you saw in the newspaper, you can call our photo reprint hotline at 866-746-8603 and a customer service representative can help you through the process.

While a picture might be worth 1,000 words or more, and cost a few bucks, it also can be priceless when it captures that special moment for someone.

SEWER PLANT

dedicated seven days a week to working there."

"It's a sophisticated, challenging plant to run," said Cataldo.

The United Water operators are on-call 24-7 to keep things running smoothly, according to Cohasset Sewer Commission Administrator Diane Hindley.

"The award is based on plant performance," she said. "David Burns [of the DEP] said to me that another community came close, but Cohasset was chosen because they go above and beyond; I really see that, too.

"I'm amazed at the amount of work they do," Hindley added, in regards to the hours the plant operators put in. "They're out at people's homes," answering calls to work on grinder pumps.

"They get calls on weekends, holidays, nights," Hindley continued, adding that she's received plenty of positive feedback from Cohasset residents who have needed United Water's assistance.

The good word gets back to the guys running the plant.

"When people have a problem, we've gotten nothing back but positive compliments for our service, response time, making people aware, calling them back... We keep people happy," said Cataldo. "We've changed the attitude, I believe, of not only the neighbors in the [plant's] vicinity, but the neighbors in the town."

"Our plant is unique because of the process we use — membrane treatment. It presents challenges to the wastewater industry."

Diane Hindley, Sewer Commission Administrator

"It goes beyond just the operation of the plant," said Hindley. "It's community outreach that extends even further to be not only good neighbors, but good stewards of the environment. Anyone who runs the plant has to be aware of the environment and the neighbors."

Cohasset lies in an "environmentally sensitive" area, Hindley added, which presents its share of challenges.

"Our plant is unique because of the process we use — membrane treatment," she explained. "It presents challenges to the wastewater industry."

The plant made the transition to using a membrane water filtration system in the early 2000s, according to published reports.

Swimm said that there are "a lot of little jobs" to do around the plant; multi-tasking is key.

"To an outsider, if would seem crazy when things do go wrong" at the plant, Swimm said. "It's one of those things; we're always told we're one of the most advanced plants. The technology could be the greatest out there, but it still relies on the operator to operate it correctly and stay running. The point is to keep running with preventive maintenance... We always have to be running, twenty-four seven."

Straightened out

Another challenge for United Water was coming into a bit of a mess when it took over plant operations, Cataldo shared.

"The plant was in disarray but we straightened it out," Cataldo, who has worked with United Water for three years and has over 25 years of experience in the field. "It was a mess; it needed to be cleaned up. Things were broken that we had to fix," including equipment that had to be replaced.

There was a lot of overhauling, said Swimm, "knowing what to look for" when it comes time to replace equipment. "I just fix things and try to make them better— upgrade."

Swimm started working with United Water in June last year shortly after he was discharged from the Navy. And while he didn't plan to work for a sewer department, Swimm shared, "I get the opportunity to do lot of different things and work with a bunch of good guys."

Cataldo echoed the sentiment. "It's nice working with people like United Water; it's a very good company to work for. Tim is a great worker, and a great guy to work with— that's half the battle every day."

"It felt good," Swimm said of receiving the MWCPA award. "The military's the same way; when you do good work, you get recognized. We work for town of Cohasset and get paid to do that; but to go above and beyond, doing more than what we're supposed to do... It's a good feeling [knowing] we can run the treatment plant better than it's been run before."

It's a job that often goes unrecognized, Hindley admitted.

"I had no idea this award even existed — it was a really nice surprise," the sewer administrator said. "The sewer plant is just not something people think about, but I guess that's a good thing."

"I like the fact that it's something that's never really thought about," said Swimm, amending that, however, it's nice to " finally be recognized for day to day operations of the plant."

Every day either Mark Cataldo or Tim Swimm would get a sample of the influent to test for pH for their own internal control so that they know what adjustments are needed.

About United Water

United Water is one of the nation's leading environmental companies, providing water and wastewater services to approximately 5.5 million people in the United States. In addition to owning and operating 16 water and wastewater utilities, United Water operates 90 municipal and industrial water and wastewater systems through innovative public-private partnerships and contract agreements. Founded in 1869, United Water is a subsidiary of SUEZ ENVIRONNEMENT.

About MWPCA

MWPCA is a non-profit organization established in 1965, to provide education, training, and promote the exchange of information among operators and water quality professionals.

MWPCA President Ray Willis said after the Sept. 18 awards ceremony. "Often times, many citizens in our communities overlook or just are unaware of the work that goes on behind the scenes, and underground, to provide clean and safe water to them. Wastewater treatment is the "forgotten infrastructure" in many ways – while everyone notices roads and bridges, our water reclamation facilities quietly do their job, for the most part unnoticed. It is an honor to be able to present such prestigious awards to the Town of Cohasset facility and its operators today; their achievements are truly outstanding, given the tremendous competition from other facilities in the state. The performance exhibited by this facility's group of operators is a great example of the high level of commitment and professionalism that is a goal of all water quality professionals in this state."

Volume 38 - Report No. 42 October 14 - 18, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on three roll calls and local senators on two from the week of October 14-18.

	Y	Y

$94 MILLION SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (H 3700, S 1890)

House 155-0, Senate 36-0, approved different versions of an estimated $94 million spending plan to close out the books on fiscal year 2013 that ended June 30. The Senate version now goes to the House for consideration. Provisions include $20 million for low-income heating assistance; $8.1 million for the recent special elections held in the state; $81,517 to reimburse Watertown for expenses incurred in April during the search for the Boston Marathon bombing suspect; $13 million for emergency shelters for the homeless; $11.5 million for early education; and $2.1 million for the Welfare Department to implement new monitoring and oversight programs.

Supporters said the package is fiscally responsible and funds necessary programs including several that are running out of money.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $94 million budget.)

	*	N

AUDIT WELFARE DEPARTMENT (H 3700)

House 42-112, rejected an amendment requiring the state auditor to audit the Welfare Department and issue a report to the Legislature by February 15. The audit would include monitoring and counting out-of-state usage of EBT cards, and verifying that social security numbers are being required prior to benefits being awarded.

Amendment supporters said it is time for another audit to ferret out waste and fraud and ensure taxpayer money is being well spent only on people who legitimately are needy. They noted an audit will also reveal if any recent reforms to the system are working.

Amendment supporters said the auditor recently conducted an audit and reported on fraud and waste and that the state is working on addressing those problems. They noted the auditor has said it is too soon for another audit.

(A "Yes" vote is for the audit. A "No" vote is against it.)

	*	N

REQUIRE SIX HEARINGS ON TAX HIKES (H 3700)

House 31-124, rejected an amendment requiring the House and Senate Ways and Means Committees to hold at least six public hearings on any bill that raises taxes or fees and to give the public three days notice prior to each one.

Amendment supporters said this requirement will ensure the public has the opportunity to be informed about pending tax hikes. They pointed to the recently repealed tax on computer system design services and a new law tying future increases in the gas tax to the Consumer Price Index as incidents in which many people were not made aware of these hikes prior to their passage.

Amendment opponents said the amendment is poorly drafted and flawed. They said it does not differentiate between a multi-million tax hike and a $1 increase in the fee for a marriage license, and would require six hearings on each.

(A "Yes" vote is for requiring public hearings. A "No" vote is against the requirement.)

	Y	*

FLOOD INSURANCE (S 1890)

Senate 9-27, rejected an amendment that would provide $100,000 for a grant program to distribute funds to cities and towns to be used to help lower their residents' premiums for flood insurance.

Amendment supporters said that recent changes in flood insurance mandated by the federal government in 2012 have raised premiums for thousands of homeowners and also mandated that some homeowners who previously were exempt from the requirement buy it. They noted the funds can be used by cities and towns to directly help reduce premiums or to pay a coordinator who can help the community's residents receive discounts through another program. They cited the case of one homeowner whose premium rose from $1,300 to over $68,000.

Amendment opponents said this issue needs to be addressed but that this piecemeal approach was not the way to go. They noted the Senate should study the issue more and address the problem in a comprehensive way.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $100,000 program. A "No" vote is against it.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

SENIOR CITIZENS SAFETY ZONE (S 77) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would allow cities and towns to double speeding fines in areas adjacent to nursing homes, assisted living facilities, hospitals and senior housing and community centers.

LIMIT SPEED IN HISTORIC DISTRICTS (H 3097) - The House gave initial approval to a proposal that would allow cities and towns to set vehicle speed limits inside a historic district.

MONEY FOR MILK FARMERS (H 751) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would reimburse small independent dairy farmers from a special insurance fund created in the 1980s to protect farmers when dairy processors go out of business without paying the farmer. The program is funded by the dairy farmers themselves and has been used in the past but has been mostly stagnant for years. Farmers would be reimbursed based on what they have contributed to the fund over the years. It is estimated that the state's 100 or so dairy farmers would receive amounts ranging from $10,000 to $20,000 while still leaving a minimum of $1 million in the fund, as required by law.

PROTECT ANIMALS - Lead sponsor Sen. Bruce Tarr (R-Gloucester) announced that his recently filed Act Protecting Animal Welfare and Safety (PAWS) has attracted 75 legislators as cosponsors including 22 Republicans and 53 Democrats. PAW's centerpiece would create a statewide animal abuse registry of animal abusers that would have to be checked by animal shelters, pet stores and breeders before a person is allowed to buy or adopt the pet. Other provisions include establishing an anonymous animal abuse tip hotline and increased penalties for cruelty to animals. The bill was filed in response to the recent "Puppy Doe " case in which a dog was euthanized after she suffered extensive injuries, including a stab wound to her eye and burns to her body.

ALLOW PUBLIC MEETINGS VIA INTERNET (H 2088) - The Committee on State Administration and Regulatory Oversight heard testimony on a proposal to allow city and town boards and commissions to hold their meetings and discussions online. The bill would change a current law that requires these meetings to be held in a physical building. Supporters said it is time to bring these meetings into the computer age and not require people to drive miles and spend hours at a meeting. Opponents said the change would be unfair to many who cannot watch the proceedings online including some seniors, people with disabilities and residents of rural areas that don't have Internet access.

COMMENTARY

More on the need for Special Town Meeting

MICHAEL R. MILANOSKI

Editor's note: The following was sent to the Board of Selectmen as background before their meeting on Tuesday. Although the Special Town Meeting has now been scheduled (see story, page one); the information contained in this memo and accompanying charts may help explain the fiscal reasoning for the STM.

Financial Management Policies have been the cornerstone to our financial turnaround over the last 20 months. These specific Financial Management Policies were approved by the Board of Selectmen and Town Meeting in 2012. Further, the Board of Selectmen adopted its own budget policy for FY15 on Oct. 1, 2013. Consistent with these policies is the following, "It is the Financial Objective of the Board of Selectmen to demonstrate sound financial management of Cohasset taxpayer resources..."

Consistent with the Financial Management Policies, and as outlined in my memo dated Oct. 10, 2013 there are only two options for managing fund balances beyond the do nothing approach, one which I recommend and the other I would not recommend given it will forgo $74,354 in revenue and it is in direct violation to Cohasset's Financial Management Polices which defines our professional conduct

A. The first option recommends the additional $600,000 be recognized in FY14 and transferred to the Town's Capital Stabilization Fund; this further recommends that FY13 certified free cash of $1.27MM also be transferred to stabilization and trust funds at a special town meeting. This must be completed before our tax rate is set in December that would have an estimated positive benefit to the Town of $74,354.

B. The result of the second option "to arbitrary lower estimated local receipts and not call a special town meeting" action is twofold:

1. This action would allow the $600,000 surplus in FY14 to remain in the general fund deferred earning nominal interest until free cash is certified in fall of FY1 5. At that time, the town may call a special meeting making these funds available for further use or investment. We estimate that this choice will result in a lost interest opportunity of $34,140 (see attached spreadsheet).

2. The FY13 free cash of $1.27MM will remain outside of stabilization and trust funds resulting in estimated additional lost interest of $44,214 (see charts).

C. The result of a "do nothing" action is threefold:

1. We will set our tax rate without recognizing the FY14 $600,000 revenue increase. We estimate that this choice will result in a lost interest opportunity of $34,140 (see charts).

2. This will reduce our levy capacity by $600,000 and funds will be lost for a year in FY14 in violation of the Town's Financial Management Policies.

3. The FY13 free cash of $1.27MM will remain outside of stabilization and trust funds resulting in estimated lost interest of $44,214 (See charts).

At the Oct. 15th meeting, certain Selectmen indicated that they were confused by my written presentation and municipal finance generally. Once again, I offer to meet personally with each member in order to share the depth of information required to establish each Selectman's command of the subject. Further, as requested, I have attached a spreadsheet, which quantifies the anticipated cost of one choice versus the other.

The data in the spreadsheet was compiled with the assistance of our Director of Finance/Town Accountant and Treasurer/Collector. We have applied FY13 achieved interest rates. The result of our analysis shows that the Town would realize a net opportunity loss of an estimated $74,354. This net amount includes the estimated cost to hold a Special Town Meeting. The $74,354 opportunity loss is calculated based on FY13 invested rates of return available in stabilization funds (6.19 percent) and state PRIT trust fund (14.3 percent), versus the rates available when held as cash (less than 0.5 percent), over applicable time periods. An investment disclaimer: past rates of return are not an assurance of future rates of return.

Diversion from these policies now, where no legitimate reason has been offered, will indicate to all constituencies that our government is not committed to sound fiscal management, or does not possess the requisite desire to do so.

Another way to look at this is if you had $1,797,751 resulting from sound financial management actions, that you were not going to utilize for at least six months but most likely longer, would you A) put the funds into a checking account with a rate of return of 0.05 percent; B) put the funds into a money market account with a rate of return of 0.50 percent; or C) put the funds into a managed portfolio account or state PRIT trust fund account with a rate of return of 6.19 percent and 14.30 percent respectively?

Finally, our adopted financial policies have produced positive results. Our directive to apply these policies rises from the legislative actions of Town Meeting. Our latest credit rating upgrade is directly related to the adoption of these policies and our ability to implement them.

As you can imagine, our actions and the resulting upgrade have sent a powerful message to voters, the DOR, our auditors, financial advisors, ratings agencies and investors. The most tangible results have been interest cost savings of $1,750,000 from the refinancing of two separate bond issues of which $1,300,000 was a direct savings to all of Cohasset tax payer spread out over 11 years in reduced interest cost for excluded debt.

Diversion from these policies now, where no legitimate reason has been offered, will indicate to all constituencies that our government is not committed to sound fiscal management, or does not possess the requisite desire to do so. Such action will exact an unnecessary cost in reputation and taxpayer dollars due to higher interest rates. In the long run, the cost of losing integrity with our bond-rating agency could be much greater than any numbers noted above.

Michael Milanoski is the Cohasset Acting Town Manager.

Skippers advance to State Finals

Golfers second at Div.3 South Sectionals

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset High School Boys Varsity Golf team placed second in the MIAA Division III South Sectionals held at Glenn Ellen Country Club in Millis this past Monday.

Eight teams competed with two teams, Dover-Sherborn and Cohasset, advancing.

The format of the tournament provided for each team to select the four best individual scores out of their six players who competed.

The top four scores for the Skippers at this par 72 course were Bryce Avila (81) Mike McKelvey (83) Luke Carlyle (85) and Jack Stanganelli (86).

Cohasset's total score of 335 was good for second place and a trip to the state finals to be held at Wyantenuck Country Club in Great Barrington this upcoming Monday.

This is the most recent accomplishment for a team that has had a stellar season, winning their fifth straight South Shore League title with an overall league record of 12-1-1.

The Skippers success is largely attributed to the stability and depth of their starting lineup; the same six players have started throughout the season.

Cohasset's starters were anchored by senior captains Bryce Avila, Derek Benson

Monomoy tie leaves Skippers in control of own fate

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Friday afternoon was a banner day for the Cohasset field hockey team, as they faced off against League rival Monomoy to stay in contention, and basically wrap up a league title with a win or a tie.

Cohasset didn't get the win, but did manage a 1-1 tie that left the two teams ties in the league standings with one league game to go.

"One of our goals was to win the League Championship and we were cruising along," Cohasset coach Laura Guiliano said. "Then we lost to East Bridgewater 1-0 after having beaten them 7-0 the first time around. That looms large today. If they had won today, they would have sole possession of the league title. We were happy. Monomoy has a great team and a great coaching staff. We share with them all the time. It's a great team to share a league title with."

Guiliano said her team has been playing extremely well.

"The whole team has been playing well," she said. "Day to day one person shines over another. Molly Cunning won that game for us with the back corner. They were driving and she brought it out. McKenzie Axelson had a great game keeping it out of our end. Dagmar Seppala had a fantastic game. The forward line, you see Ali (Lahey) and Caty (Gilman)

Focused on crown

Gridders excited for Senior Night

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Friday night is going to be a special night for Cohasset football.

With a 40-8 win over Carver last week, the Skippers will be playing for the South Shore League title and a playoff entry in a winner-take-all game against Mashpee.

"Friday's game vs. Mashpee is a big deal for the kids," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "They are very focused on bringing home another SSL title and have been working extremely hard all season long in trying to do so."

Mashpee is 3-0 in the South Shore League, 4-2 overall.

Afanasiw expects to see a very tough opponent.

"Mashpee brings a lot of formations into play, that forces our defense to really be focused and attentive, and they have a handful of very talented skilled position players that have big play potential," he said. " Defensively, Mashpee is a physical and hard hitting team, that never quits and is always well prepared. It should be a very good game for the spectators to enjoy."

As for playoffs, Afanasiw knows the only was to guarantee playoffs is to win.

"I don't want to be a negative Nancy, but we are not 100 percent guaranteed a playoff spot," he said. "There is a very high probability, and with that being said, it has been our main focus to make the tournament, a win Friday would guarantee that and we've tried to approach Friday night as a 'win and you're in' game, as well as it being a league title game."

The players are taking it all in stride.

BOYS SOCCER

Still in the battle

Soccer rebounds from Norwell loss

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Last week, the Cohasset boys soccer team lost a tough 3-0 decision to Norwell, a loss that gave the Clippers the edge in the chase for the South Shore League title.

The loss could have been crippling, especially because the Skippers lost three midfielders to injury in the first half against a physical Norwell team, but this group is resilient and Cohasset rebounded quickly with wins over Rockland and Hull.

"We have two games to go," Cohaset coach Jim Willis said. "We're trying to keep up with Norwell (who recently lost one of their top scorers to injury) and work for seeding."

The pair of victories improved Cohasset to 11-4-2 (10-3-1 SSL) with league games against Monomoy (Thursday, results were unavailable at press time) and Mashpee Tuesday.

Willis said the Norwell game was tough.

"They play a strong physical game," he said. "Earlier in the year we held them. We were only down 1-0 at the half. Then they scored, we ran out of gas and it spiraled from there."

Still, if Norwell loses and Cohasset wins out, the Skippers would win at least a share of the title."

Regardless of the South Shore League, the next big concern is the MIAA Div. 4 South Sectionals.

Golfers second at Div.3 South Sectionals

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset High School Boys Varsity Golf team placed second in the MIAA Division III South Sectionals held at Glenn Ellen Country Club in Millis this past Monday.

Eight teams competed with two teams, Dover-Sherborn and Cohasset, advancing.

The format of the tournament provided for each team to select the four best individual scores out of their six players who competed.

The top four scores for the Skippers at this par 72 course were Bryce Avila (81) Mike McKelvey (83) Luke Carlyle (85) and Jack Stanganelli (86).

Cohasset's total score of 335 was good for second place and a trip to the state finals to be held at Wyantenuck Country Club in Great Barrington this upcoming Monday.

This is the most recent accomplishment for a team that has had a stellar season, winning their fifth straight South Shore League title with an overall league record of 12-1-1.

The Skippers success is largely attributed to the stability and depth of their starting lineup; the same six players have started throughout the season.

Cohasset's starters were anchored by senior captains Bryce Avila, Derek Benson

Monomoy tie leaves Skippers in control of own fate

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Friday afternoon was a banner day for the Cohasset field hockey team, as they faced off against League rival Monomoy to stay in contention, and basically wrap up a league title with a win or a tie.

Cohasset didn't get the win, but did manage a 1-1 tie that left the two teams ties in the league standings with one league game to go.

"One of our goals was to win the League Championship and we were cruising along," Cohasset coach Laura Guiliano said. "Then we lost to East Bridgewater 1-0 after having beaten them 7-0 the first time around. That looms large today. If they had won today, they would have sole possession of the league title. We were happy. Monomoy has a great team and a great coaching staff. We share with them all the time. It's a great team to share a league title with."

Guiliano said her team has been playing extremely well.

"The whole team has been playing well," she said. "Day to day one person shines over another. Molly Cunning won that game for us with the back corner. They were driving and she brought it out. McKenzie Axelson had a great game keeping it out of our end. Dagmar Seppala had a fantastic game. The forward line, you see Ali (Lahey) and Caty (Gilman)

Gridders excited for Senior Night

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Friday night is going to be a special night for Cohasset football.

With a 40-8 win over Carver last week, the Skippers will be playing for the South Shore League title and a playoff entry in a winner-take-all game against Mashpee.

"Friday's game vs. Mashpee is a big deal for the kids," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "They are very focused on bringing home another SSL title and have been working extremely hard all season long in trying to do so."

Mashpee is 3-0 in the South Shore League, 4-2 overall.

Afanasiw expects to see a very tough opponent.

"Mashpee brings a lot of formations into play, that forces our defense to really be focused and attentive, and they have a handful of very talented skilled position players that have big play potential," he said. " Defensively, Mashpee is a physical and hard hitting team, that never quits and is always well prepared. It should be a very good game for the spectators to enjoy."

As for playoffs, Afanasiw knows the only was to guarantee playoffs is to win.

"I don't want to be a negative Nancy, but we are not 100 percent guaranteed a playoff spot," he said. "There is a very high probability, and with that being said, it has been our main focus to make the tournament, a win Friday would guarantee that and we've tried to approach Friday night as a 'win and you're in' game, as well as it being a league title game."

The players are taking it all in stride.

Still in the battle

Soccer rebounds from Norwell loss

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Last week, the Cohasset boys soccer team lost a tough 3-0 decision to Norwell, a loss that gave the Clippers the edge in the chase for the South Shore League title.

The loss could have been crippling, especially because the Skippers lost three midfielders to injury in the first half against a physical Norwell team, but this group is resilient and Cohasset rebounded quickly with wins over Rockland and Hull.

"We have two games to go," Cohaset coach Jim Willis said. "We're trying to keep up with Norwell (who recently lost one of their top scorers to injury) and work for seeding."

The pair of victories improved Cohasset to 11-4-2 (10-3-1 SSL) with league games against Monomoy (Thursday, results were unavailable at press time) and Mashpee Tuesday.

Willis said the Norwell game was tough.

"They play a strong physical game," he said. "Earlier in the year we held them. We were only down 1-0 at the half. Then they scored, we ran out of gas and it spiraled from there."

Still, if Norwell loses and Cohasset wins out, the Skippers would win at least a share of the title."

Regardless of the South Shore League, the next big concern is the MIAA Div. 4 South Sectionals.

Division 3 to Division 4 for this season's tournament.

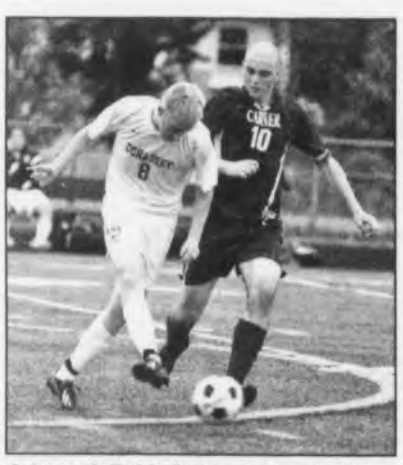
Aside from not having to face an always tough Dover-Sherborn team in the tournament, Division 4 doesn't guarantee as easy ride.

"Abington, Carver, Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop Williams, Sacred Heart are all in Division 4," Willis said. "There are at least seven or eight teams that can win it. We should get a good seed, in the four-to-six range. We should get a home game."

After the Norwell loss, Cohasset beat Hull 5-1 and added a 3-0 win over Rockland, Monday.

The Skippers also tied Archbishop Williams the day after they beat Carver 2-1.

Joe Buckley scored a goal and an assist against Rockland, as did Teddy Craven, while Ryan McKeon led the way with 3 goals against Hull, making the start at striker.



"Rockland was nerve-wracking," Willis said. "They were fighting to get in the tournament. We knew they would be tough. We answered. We scored three goals in the first 10 minutes of the second half."

In the game, Willis moved players around due to injury.

Dan Toomey stepped in to fill in on defense, and Craven played in the midfield, and Mathias Loft started in the midfield.

Willis said the last two games are important.

"We really want to win those last two games," he said. "We want to go into the tournament with a head of steam."

INSIDE THE SIX SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week 7: Top ranked teams have established identities

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

It didn't take long for the rankings' leaders to plant themselves as top teams. Looking at rosters alone, it was expected the top 2-3 teams on both sides would hold down the top few spots throughout the season. Not much has changed from the unveiling of those season-opening rosters. With one week remaining in the regular season, it's now time for these teams to gain as many points as possible to get the highest seed possible in the postseason.

This week's rankings reflect a somewhat uneasy week for a few teams. While the top three on each side remain unchanged, the bottom three did some shuffling. One boys' team disappeared, opening a slot for a team that started miserably but rebounded in a big way. For the girls, there's a bit of movement, but nothing too shocking. Here are the rankings based on games played from Oct. 14-Oct. 20.

Boys

1. Silver Lake - The Lakers received their first big scare since their season opening tie to Weymouth, going down 1-0 to Pembroke before coming back to win, 2-1. The Patriot League Keenan champs then extended their winning streak to 14 with a win over Whitman-Hanson to close out the week. The last week of the season is always the toughest for teams as they stack it with top opponents to gear up for the postseason, but the way the Lakers are playing, they should be able to win out and go into the tourney unbeaten.

2. Hingham - The Harbormen quickly bounced back after suffering just their second loss of the season two weeks ago. They've now won three straight, including a huge 3-2 win over Duxbury, which came just days after a 4-1 victory over Whitman-Hanson. Hingham came into the week at 12-2-1, winners of 10 of their last 11 games.

3. Duxbury - What have the Dragons done best this season? Quickly get over a loss. Expect that this week after the Dragons closed out last week with a 3-2 defeat to Hingham, a week that began with a 3-1 win over Quincy. This week, the 11-4 Dragons finish the regular season with games against Plymouth North, Marshfield, and Falmouth, the latter two on the road.

4. Norwell - The Clippers jump up two spots this week and earn their highest ranking this year after knocking off last week's No. 4, Cohasset, 3-0. They closed out the week with a 5-1 win over Carver. Entering the week with an 11-2-1 record, including nine wins in a row, the Clippers looked to close out the season with the South Shore League title in hand.

5. Pembroke - Despite going 0-2, the Titans remain idle at No. 5. They nearly upset No. 1 Silver Lake, taking a 1-0 lead before falling, 2-1. The loss snapped their five-game unbeaten streak. The Titans closed out the week with a tough, 2-1 loss to Scituate and came into this week at 8-4-3.

6. Weymouth - Don't look now, but the Wildcats, yes, the same team that went 0-4-4 to start the season, have returned to the top six since the preseason. Why? They've won six in a row, including a massive 2-1 victory over second-place Framingham. That one goal, well it's the only goal Weymouth has conceded during its six-game winning streak. They entered this week with a 6-4-4 record.

On the bubble: Marshfield, Cohasset, Rockland

Week 6 rankings: 1. Silver Lake; 2. Hingham; 3. Duxbury; 4. Cohasset; 5. Pembroke; 6. Norwell

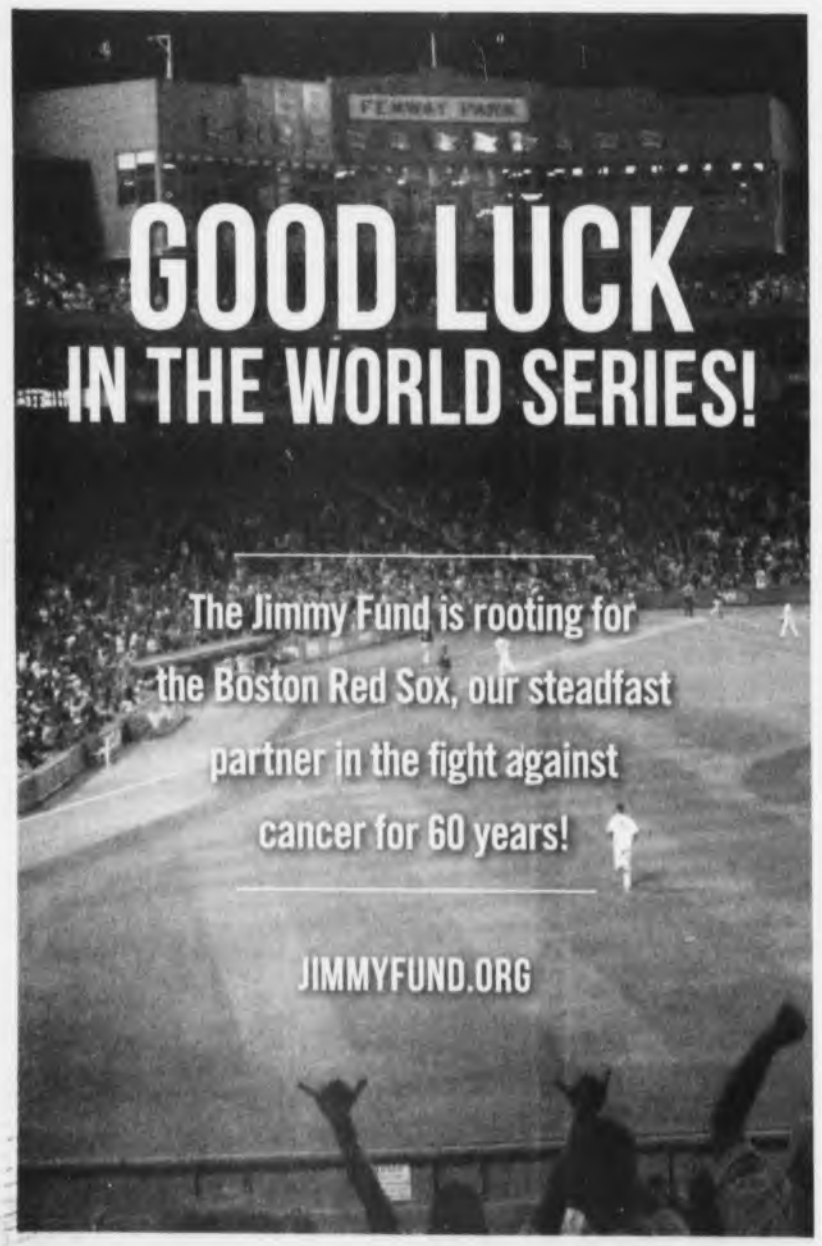
Girls

1. Duxbury - Securing their first Patriot League title since 2007 with a 1-0 win over Quincy to start the week didn't slow down the Dragons, who blanked Hingham 2-0, to end the week and improve to 12-1-2. They entered the week on a nine-game unbeaten streak, playing some of their best soccer to date this season.

2. Scituate - The Sailors don't like losing. And since dropping a match two weeks ago, one that dropped them down to No. 2, they're back on track. Three wins, one each over Hanover, Middleboro, and Pembroke, last week pushed their winning streak to four. Even more impressive, the Sailors outscored their opponents, 13-1 last week. Yes, the Sailors are back and mean business.

3. Silver Lake - A 1-1 tie to open the week against Pembroke was a wake-up call, and the Lakers most certainly woke up. They notched their biggest win in years, beating Whitman-Hanson, 1-0. It was only the third time all season that W-H has not scored a goal. The Lakers surged into the week at 7-2-5.

4. Norwell - Defense gets you far, but only if you've got an attacking presence that yield victories. That's just what the Clippers have this year. They're up one spot to No. 5 after a 6-2 win over Cohasset and 2-0 victory over Carver to improve to 10-4-1.



5. Marshfield - Gaining at least a share of the Atlantic Coast League title, the Rams picked up a huge league point when they drew with Plymouth South, 0-0, last week. They ended it with a 1-1 tie against a tough non-league Dartmouth side. The Rams, 8-0-3 in the Atlantic Coast League, can wrap up the league title with a win over Dennis-Yarmouth this week.

6. Hingham - A pair of Patriot League losses sound worse than they actually were. Consider the opponents. Hingham lost to first-place Duxbury and second-place Whitman-Hanson, shut out both times. They losses snapped a seven-game winning streak.

On the bubble: Plymouth South, Plymouth North, Pembroke

Week 6 rankings: 1. Duxbury; 2. Scituate; 3. Silver Lake; 4. Hingham; 5. Norwell; 6. Marshfield

The Inside the 6 - Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. Girls beat Scituate and tie Monomoy

By Tom Hinkley
The Patriot Ledger

It's that time of year in the high school sports universe. The time when teams are trying to scrape together enough wins to earn a tournament bid, or in some cases something more.

Tuesday's matchup between the Cohasset and Scituate field hockey teams saw two squads fighting at each end of the clinching spectrum.

Scituate entered the game with a .500 record, needing to at least split its remaining two contests to earn a playoff bid. Cohasset had already clinched a tournament berth but still was in a dead heat with Monomoy for the South Shore League crown.

Scituate nearly escaped the first half unscathed, but Cohasset senior Christina Tedeschi slammed home a rebound with just four seconds left for a 1-0 lead, and the Skippers used the momentum of that late goal to cruise to a 3-0 victory on Senior Night.

"That first goal is always so huge," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "It just opens the floodgates for us. We sometimes have trouble scoring that first goal and we've lost some games this season, 1-0, because we just never got that first goal."

Although the game was tied for nearly an entire half, it was Cohasset (12-3-1) that dominated play from start to finish. The vast majority of the game was played in the Skippers' offensive zone; Scituate (7-8-2) never had a legitimate scoring threat.

"I think their backs did a really nice job of shutting things down," Scituate coach Sara Paster said. "They just never let us get anything going."

Junior Caty Gilman scored her team-leading 23rd goal of the season less than two minutes into the second half for a 2-0 lead.

"I don't think the first goal really deflated us," said Paster, "but that second one was tough to come back from."

Sophomore Aly Lahey capped the scoring with her 16th goal of the season.

"I thought it was big for the girls to come off the field that way," Giuliano said. "I'm really proud of them. They've done a great job. It was our Senior Night, so the focus was on playing the seniors. We're going to lose some really talented seniors."

Cohasset and Monomoy are both 10-1-1 atop the SSL. Cohasset's last league game is against Hull (0-13, 0-13) while Monomoy faces Mashpee (2-8-1, 2-7-1). Cohasset won the season series from Monomoy, getting a win and a tie.

"(Cohasset) is a really good team and we played them close in the first half," Paster said. "We just need to play like we did in the first half. We need to be first to the ball and communicate and play a smart game."

Busy weekend

Program in full swing with Rally and Jamboree

The Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset Field Hockey had a busy weekend.

The fun started first with the Annual Pep Rally held Friday before the Cohasset showdown with Monomoy.

The Cohasset Field Hockey Club girls (4th through 8th grade) wrote special notes to all the players, made a beautiful banner, decorated the locker room and formed the "Run under the Arch" as the High School girls crashed through the banner on Alumni Field!

Over 125 girls created a "C" on the field for the Varsity and JV girls to run under and cheer them on!! The girls – all in uniform and faces painted- went into the stands and cheered the team on to a 1-1 tie.

On Sunday October 20- the Annual Cohasset Field Hockey Jamboree was held and games played on Alumni, the Front Field and Deer Hill

Sixteen teams competed from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. comprised of 300 players from 10 towns.

Cohasset's new fourth and fifth grade team played a showcase game for the crowd as well.

Points were given to each team based on results and for the first time- we had two ties resulting in a shootout.

Cohasset's sixth grade goalie Carly Ford had a shootout against Franklin to determine which team would play in the sixth championship game along with the seventh/eighth Blue team who played a 10 minute challenge against Franklin and won the spot in the 7/8 Championship Game.

The results for Championship Games-

Sixth team game- Franklin 1- Cohasset Navigators 1

Seventh team game- Cohasset Blue team 2- Foxboro 0

Eighth Team game- Cohasset Silver team 2- Duxbury 0

It was an action packed sunny day filled with fun and very competitive games.

Tonight is Senior Night for Field Hockey girls, with the game starting at 6:30 at Alumni Field.

Guiliano said she hopes for a big playoff run.

"We had a great season," she said. "I'd like to see them go deep in the tournament. It depends on who we see, but it's what we train for from the beginning of the season."

Cohasset followed Monomoy with a non-league win over Scituate and then added a 7-0 win over Hull on Tuesday that guaranteed a share of the South Shore League championship.

"This team doesn't get affected by much," Afanasiw said. "They have tremendous chemistry, all the players and coaches get along very well, and they push each other in practice and the weight room, and support each other on game day. We're starting to get a few people back from injury and that will also add to our depth at a time when we could use it."

If the Skippers do prevail, they could have a nice run at home.

"If we remain as the number one or two seed in D-VI then we have the potential to host as many as two and possibly three playoff games, depending on the outcome of other games," Afanasiw said. "But I believe the higher seed hosts the games through the first three rounds. With so many potential opponents playing each other this weekend, rounding out the bracket will all transpire Friday and Saturday, and we should know by Sunday whom we are playing and where."

Last Friday's game

Cohasset 40, Carver 8:

The Skippers (5-1, 3-0) routed the Crusaders (2-4, 2-2) on the road to set up a winner-take-all home showdown against Mashpee (4-2, 3-0) tonight night for the South Shore League Small-School Division crown.

Cohasset all but locked up a playoff berth with this win that featured three TDs from Ryan Gillis (3-yard run, 9-yard catch, 1-yard run) plus some outstanding defense. Linebackers Matt Froio, Danny Tangherlini and Jack McElgunn smothered Carver early – the hosts had minus-22 yards of offense midway through the second quarter.

"Really a fine defensive performance right off the bat," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said.

Rocco Laugelle had a 38-yard TD run and a 37-yard TD reception for the Skippers. Cole Kissick (14 carries for 174 yards) added a 28-yard scoring run.

Brandon Rudolph scored on a 60-yard run for Carver. He then caught the 2-point conversion pass from Ryan Feeley.

Summer reading supports Working Dog Foundation

Founded in August of 2011, the foundation helps fund the Cohasset Police K9 program, provides grants for the purchase and training of Service Dogs for local residents, and is currently training a Therapy Dog who will do reading therapy with children and visit with the elderly.

A five-week summer reading program "Dig Into Reading" with 221 young participants, sponsored by The Friends of the Cohasset Library, the Massachusetts Library System, the Boston Bruins and the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners culminated with the presentation of a donation to the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation.

Each student set a personal reading goal of how many minutes a day they would read. After reading each day, the students would then log their reading minutes.

Reading logs were displayed in the Children's Room at the completion of the program.

In years past, participants were awarded T-shirts, backpacks, books and other similar incentives at the end of the program. After careful consideration and promotion, the decision was made several years ago to move from an individual prize-based program to a world service/citizenship based program. For five years, Heifer International was the chosen foundation, with children reading toward the donation cost of an animal chosen by the participants. The Friends of the Cohasset Library donated one dollar for each summer reading log returned.

After the Boston Marathon bombings, Children's Librarian, Sharon Moody felt a need to bring the focus closer to home and to sponsor a local organization or foundation, and The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation was selected.

Most of the children in the program were already familiar with Cohasset's Police K-9 team, Patrick Reardon and K-9 Erik. "The Foundation's recent announcement of the purchase and training of a service dog for a Cohasset child is a tangible reminder of how, by doing a little bit of reading each day, we can make a profound difference in our community," said Moody. "It's a win/win for all".

Selected to present the donation to the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation to K-9 officer Patrick Reardon and K-9 Erik were three of the program's enthusiastic participants: Maggie Young, age 8; Kevin Wrenn, age 9 and Josh Young, age 7. Maggie read more than 3,000 minutes, Kevin more than 1,100 minutes and Josh read more than 300 minutes.

The generous donation from the library's reading program will be put to use immediately, as The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation is currently training a young black Labrador Retriever named Sophie to become a therapy dog who will make regular reading therapy visits to Cohasset's Paul Pratt Library as well as visit nursing homes and senior centers in the area. Look for Sophie wearing her Dog B.O.N.E.S vest at the library and around town soon!

The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation supports the service of working dogs in the town of Cohasset. Founded in August of 2011, the foundation helps fund the Cohasset Police K9 program, provides grants for the purchase and training of Service Dogs for local residents, and is currently training a Therapy Dog who will do reading therapy with children and visit with the elderly. The SeaPerch crew heads to the outer Cohasset Harbor Estuary aboard the Harbormaster's vessel.

SeaPerch project maps eelgrass beds

JACK BUCKLEY

Colonies of invasive tunicates can be seen covering the eelgrass.

Generous funding from the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) allowed 17 students and two teachers to spend the summer building, repairing, and equipping Remotely Operated Vehicles (ROVs) to explore and document the health of eelgrass growing outside of the harbor in the Bassings Basin near the Glades. This area, known in environmental management circles as the outer Cohasset Harbor Estuary, "is one of the few remaining estuaries that contain extensive eelgrass beds" (Massachusetts Bays National Estuary Program COHASSET HARBOR ESTUARY 2006 MONITORING PILOT). According to the MassBays Program, "eelgrass beds are considered to be a highly-valued habitat. They support diverse and distinct groups of aquatic and avian species and provide critical nourishment to herbivores and detritivores (animals that eat partly decomposed organic material)."

Knowing that this sensitive and critically important habitat had not been monitored in many years, Cohasset High School students and staff began an exploratory investigation dubbed the SeaPerch project, named after the ROVs assembled to document the health of the eelgrass beds. Multi-year SeaPerch participant and current senior Jack Stanganelli remarked that "it was fun being able to use something we had built from scratch to map the eelgrass. It was cool to see the practical and important application of something that we had made in the lab. We were forced to work together, too, to solve the problems we faced with equipping the ROVs with cameras that would capture good footage."

SeaPerch leader, CHS AP Stats and math teacher Laura Humphrey, echoed Stanganelli's comment about the problem-solving skills required for the job. "We learned how to share responsibility for the checklist after forgetting things and not realizing until we were out on the boats in the harbor! That was a difficult, but important lesson for all of us to learn. But, we also learned through trial and error how to be videographers, and how to guide a robot with the use of video and how not to be distracted by crustacean activities at the bottom of the sea. We learned, too, that Wi-Fi and GPS don't work under water and we tried several inventions to overcome that."

But, one of the most important lessons learned by all participants was that the eelgrass beds are covered with invasive sea squirts, or tunicates. Sophomore Levente Haber commented, "I learned that we do have eelgrass, meaning we do have a fairly healthy harbor, but much of the eelgrass has died and a large percent is covered in tunicates. This is a direct threat to the long term health of the harbor."

Students and teachers reached out to experts from the state and federal government to guide their investigation. They learned that large populations of eelgrass beds all along the eastern seaboard from Maine to Maryland were being inundated by the invasive tunicates. To assist with the documentation of the eelgrass beds, students located the beds with the ROVs, and then snorkeled to obtain samples to bring back to the lab. The SeaPerch group received instruction from the EPA to establish protocols for examining the eelgrass so the students will be able to contribute more data next year, continuing to build on this multi-year project. SeaPerch is open to all middle and high school students, and can be used toward class credit or community service requirements. In addition to providing an enriching cross-curriculum experience, the program had no shortage fun, including robot races, detangling parties and sea floor crab hunts. One student enthusiastically summed it up by noting, "three times a week we got wet, we laughed, we learned and we had a great summer!"

Nick Schubert holds a bag of eelgrass for students to study and report to the EPA.

SeaPerch participants included: Kevin Justice, Marcus Rowland, Nathan Arnold, Ben Bernsee, Quentin Humphrey, Amby Tierney, Matthew Fitzpatrick, Levente Haber, Jack Stanganelli, Ryan McElhinney, Sam Morris, Alexandra Lanier, Nick Schubert, Joe Cavanaro, Cole Morrison, Alex Norton and Chris Norton.

The Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) works in partnership with teachers and school administrators to promote excellence in Cohasset's public education. The CEF is an independent, non-profit organization financed completely through private funds.

Arne Kjell Gjesteby

COHASSET – Arne Kjell Gjesteby of Cohasset, died peacefully at home on August 31, 2013 after a long illness. He was 89.

A native of Oslo, Norway, Arne was a World War II veteran of the Royal Norwegian Air Force in exile in "Little Norway", Ontario, Canada. During the war, members of his family were imprisoned by the Nazis. He graduated with a degree in law from Oslo University and he studied in the graduate business program at Northeastern University in Boston, MA.

Arne was an astute and successful businessman with a tireless work ethic. He is the former owner of Klausen/Gestby, a ship supply company located in Boston, MA. Arne was also a two term member and Chair of the Cohasset Advisory Committee and served on the Ambulance Study Committee.

He was an avid sailer and skier. Arne was a long time member of the Cohasset Yacht Club and over the years was seen at the helm of "Solace" heading out of Cohasset harbor. He was a fixture in Waterville Valley, New Hampshire where the family spent 20 years skiing, hiking, swimming and being together. Grandpa Arne often was seen there teaching his grandchildren the finer points of the card game hearts. Arne also enjoyed playing competitive bridge and achieved the level of Silver Life Master.

Arne is survived by his wife of 60 years, Martha, and by his children Erik Gjesteby of Potter Valley, CA; Rolf Gjesteby of Cohasset; Ingrid Janes and her husband Dale of Longmeadow, MA; and, Nils Gjesteby and his wife Janet of Winchester, MA.

SURVIVOR'S STORY

Wire mapping

By Susie Scholl

"I was diagnosed (with breast cancer) last May (2012), went through surgery, chemo and radiation.
My treatment ended shortly before last Christmas. Shortly after being diagnosed, I was asked to consider writing a book about my experience. Apparently the individual that asked me to do this was hoping I would take my typical comedic approach to recounting the ordeal. She thought it might help others in a similar battle and as she reminded me, laughter is a great medicine.

"In that moment, without realizing it, that individual probably changed the way I would deal with breast cancer and all that goes with it. I'm certain she saved me from some very down and depressing times. I was immediately put in a position of looking at my situation from the outside. That type of perspective saved me from myself when there were moments of extreme fear and sadness.

"I have been working on the 'book' and have chapters completed. It is an unusual perspective on the process of surgery, chemo and radiation and may not be what you are looking for. In fact, I anticipate some will feel my continued ability to laugh and poke fun at the situation while dealing with a life threatening disease is disrespectful. But it is the only way I was able to routinely separate myself from the seriousness of the situation and manage to live a happy life while dealing with a life threatening disease, volunteering in the community and raising two strong and fearless daughters with my husband.

"This is the approach that worked for me as I tried to occupy my mind during what can only be described as the worst year of my life. I'm happy to report, I was able to laugh my way through it most of the time and continue to live a fairly full life in the process... albeit a bald one for a several months! My process is not for everyone. But I much prefer to laugh than cry."

The following is from a chapter in the book titled: Wire Mapping.

As part of the prelude to having a partial mastectomy, or lumpectomy as they are now called, there are two procedures that often occur. The first is wire mapping, a process that will lead your surgeon to the lump that will be removed. The second, not always part of the process, involves a tracing of dye that will lead to the lymph nodes that may have had cancer pass through them. Both procedures take minutes to perform and the doctors highlight them for you briefly as they go over the greater details of the surgery.

As your surgery date approaches, you start to get more details surrounding both of these "little" procedures. Wire mapping, or "sticking a wire coat hanger through my cantaloupe" as I've come to refer to it, probably needed a little more description before the day of the surgery. At least in my case, since I was overwhelmed by the cancer diagnosis and clearly had difficulty grasping the concept of some of the things on the docket as a rookie cancer patient. Hindsight is indeed 20/20!

Of course, I had done some research on the process, part of which was asking some friends about their experience with the procedure. I did not do a lot of internet surfing. I heeded the warnings of various doctors on that one since the internet can be grossly graphic. I decided that worrying about something that had to happen, despite my concerns, was a waste of time and a drain on my energy. But friends do like to volunteer info. And boy did I get some info from one gal that had been "wire mapped."

After hearing her description, and her complaints regarding the pain, it was tough to sleep that night. I wondered how I would sleep during the week leading up to the surgery. Thankfully, I had booked a trip to Dallas. I was going to spend a week at a Model and Talent Expo, with my teenager. Here's a helpful tip for you. If you want to be distracted from thinking about pending stressful events, I highly recommend you take this approach. Spending a week, in a hotel room, with your hormonal, tired, anxiety riddled, aspiring singer/actor/model teenage daughter, surrounded by stage moms and the unique characters in that industry will definitely distract you from your troubles! I didn't sleep a lot, but it had very little to do with wire mapping, dye traces and lumpectomies.

Two days after my return from Dallas, I headed for the hospital. I made peace with the procedures that were going to happen and all that goes with it. I was determined, as they say in Dallas, to "Get 'Er done!"

My husband and I quietly drove to the hospital, feeling ready for whatever they threw at us...I thought. The first thing I had to do was change from street clothes into my "Johnny." Where the heck did that stupid name come from?

So there I stood, no makeup, no hair done, in a faded, open in the rear "Johnny" staring at myself in a full-length mirror under florescent lights. There's a reality check for any woman who recently turned 50 years old like me. If I had tried, it is unlikely I could have made myself look any worse.

A gentle tap on the door announced the arrival of Lorraine, my nurse. I smiled for the first time that morning. I thought to myself, she has to be a sign from God. All was going to be fine. You see, Lorraine is my mother's name and my middle name. What are the chances?

Well Lorraine came in, smiled at me and asked me to step on the scale so she could record my weight.

Shit!

No, I didn't say it out loud but yes, I thought it. If it was possible to be more unraveled than I already was, Lorraine had gotten me there with one simple request. There must be something about women named Lorraine! But I digress.

I looked at her and just said, "Really?"

Talk about kicking a girl when she's down. And no, I'm not telling you my weight. Just keep reading.

I was guided out to the pre-op area and placed up on a rolling bed. My husband sat reading through his emails and smiled up sweetly at me as I came out. I love that guy. I know I look like a hot mess but here he was looking at me like I was his prom date coming down the stairs all "blinged" out in my finery. I'm a lucky girl.

So there we sat until things got rolling. Nurses came and checked my vital signs. IV drips were set up and forms were signed. Shortly afterward, my surgeon came and started to go over the various things that were about to start happening. This tall, thin beautiful blonde medical professional smiled as she began to highlight the day's activities for me.

"Hi Susie. Are you all set?" she asked.

"As set as I can be I suppose," I said cheerfully as I looked up at her.

"Well, let me go over what you are going to do this morning. First, you are going to go across the hall for the wire mapping. You'll undress and stand at the mammography machine and the doctor will start the procedure. It will..." she started to explain.

I cut her off. "Whoa, back up. What do you mean I'll undress and stand at the mammography machine? Why do I have to undress and have my naked rear end and all the rest of me hanging out in a room full of people when you are only working on one breast?"

I furrowed my eyebrows, crossed my arms and gave her my best "mom look" and said, "I don't do naked!"

Still looking at her firmly, I waited for the explanation. Tears began to form in my eyes.

She took my hand and said, "Susie, you need to look at the bigger picture here."

She may have been saying other things but all I could hear was my own voice in my head.

Oh I know the bigger picture. It is my fat fanny hanging out for all the word to see while somebody smashes my boob in a machine and sticks a wire through it!

Thank God she couldn't hear me screaming in my head. But I'm pretty sure she could see the anger building in my eyes. I know my husband could.

She turned to the nurse and asked her to go get a dose of some sort of medicine. The nurse quickly scampered off and returned with a tiny white pill and a Dixie cup filled with water.

"Here, take this. It will help you feel better during the procedure," she explained.

"This little pill," I asked. "You've got to be kidding," I said as I just shook my head slowly.

I continued by calmly saying, "The only thing that will make me feel better is an explanation of why you need my rear end hanging out while you work on my boob."

I kept my tone nice, but I was insistent on getting an explanation on this issue. John sat silently waiting for the answer as well. He had learned years ago to just stay out of the way when I was on a roll.

"Just take the medicine. This will help take the edge off and you'll breeze through the procedure in no time," she responded.

I took the pill, but I was still waiting for the response.

"I'm going to give you a couple of minutes and then I'll be back to see how you're doing," she said. She then turned and headed down the hall.

LIFE BEYOND CANCER CONFERENCE

Relationship building

A Q&A with Samantha Watson, executive director and founder, The SAMFund for Young Adult Survivors of Cancer of Boston

What is your experience with cancer?
I was diagnosed with Ewing's Sarcoma in December of 1999 and with secondary Myelodysplastic syndrome in April of 2001. I had an allogeneic (unrelated) bone marrow transplant in August of 2001 and am fortunate to say that, 12 years later, I feel healthy and am happy and well. I am still actively involved in the cancer community through my work with an organization I created in 2003 called Surviving And Moving Forward: The SAMFund for Young Adult Survivors of Cancer.

What is your reason for attending The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer Conference?
I am proud to be involved with this conference for the second year because it's critical for those dealing with cancer to feel supported and informed so that they can move forward through their experience in the best way they can. Cancer can be a very isolating experience, no matter how many supportive friends and family you have around you. But being in a room filled with people who "get it" is incredibly liberating and empowering.

What do you expect to get out of the event? Or, what do you want attendees to get out of the event?
I expect to come away from the event surprised by something. Last year, I attended a workshop on meditation, sort of by accident. I was just supposed to give an introduction to the presenter and ended up staying to hear him speak. Through his exercises and with his guidance, I left with this amazing feeling of peace and calm, which I was not at all expecting. I hope attendees come with an open mind and a willingness to really listen, because there are some really outstanding presenters and speakers who may teach you things you didn't realize you wanted to learn.

What do you hope cancer patients and survivors will take away from The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer conference?
For some attendees, this will be the first time they become aware of the fact that a) there is a "cancer community" and b) within that community are many, many resources and support organizations designed just for them. For others, it will be a return to a community they know but maybe access to information they didn't have before. Regardless, by the end of the day I hope everyone feels a little more relaxed and a lot more empowered to take next steps towards improving their health and wellness.

What is your experience working with the Friends of Mel Foundation?
I have been on the planning committee for The Art of Living conference for two years and have such respect for the work Pauline Alighieri and her team does. They are so genuine in their desire to help people in whatever way they can. They work tirelessly to bring together hundreds of cancer survivors and family members for the sole purpose of offering them support and encouragement, and they have had a tremendous impact so far on more people than they probably even realize. I'm honored to be working with them and offering whatever help and guidance I can. But in the end, I always end up learning from them even more.

Samantha Watson is executive director and founder of The SAMFund for Young Adult Survivors of Cancer of Boston. Watson is co-running a workshop at the conference called Dating, Relationships and Self-Image: Adjusting to Your Post Cancer Body and Mind, dealing with issues and questions related to dating and relationships for those touched by cancer.

LIFE BEYOND CANCER CONFERENCE

Helping survivors deal with a 'new normal'

A Q&A with Cynthia Medeiros, psychotherapist, Atlantic Counseling and Consultation of Weymouth

What is your experience with cancer?
I have been working with people living with cancer all of my professional life. I began my career as a clinical social worker on the bone marrow transplant unit of Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore in 1975. I moved to Massachusetts in 1979 and joined the Social Work Department of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. I worked there for over 30 years as a clinician, supervisor, manager and eventually administrator of many patient and family support services. I left Dana Farber in 2008 and spent one year as executive director of the Wellness Community of the South Shore, now the Cancer Support Community. I am now a therapist at Atlantic Counseling in Weymouth, specializing in working with people living with cancer and bereavement counseling. Working with people living with cancer is a privilege and is my passion.

What is your reason for attending the The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer Conference?
I am a member of the planning committee.

What do you expect to get out of the event?
The diagnosis of cancer fundamentally changes the life of all those affected by it. As more and more people are surviving cancer, cancer has become a chronic illness. Living with the effects of cancer does not stop when treatment ends. There are very real physical, emotional and psychosocial issues that people live with. Until more recently, this was not adequately recognized by the health-care system and certainly not by the general population. People living beyond their cancer diagnosis often expect to return to life as they knew it; however "normal" no longer exists. This often leads to a sense of isolation and lack of validation. The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer conference provides the validation of the new world in which survivors and their caregivers live. It provides the opportunity for attendees to meet with other survivors, hear about and discuss the many issues that people living with cancer face and to learn strategies for dealing with this very real experience.

What do you want attendees to get out of the event?
It is the hope of the planning committee that people will leave the conference with a greater understanding of life beyond cancer treatment, a renewed sense of hope, a validation of the "new normal" and a connection to a community of other survivors and family members.

What is your experience working with the Friends of Mel Foundation?
The Friends of Mel Foundation, among other things, provides funding for many cancer-related organizations. As executive director of The Wellness Community, it was my job to secure funding for the many services and programs provided. Grants from the Friends of Mel Foundation were a much needed and appreciated source of support for the organization. Friends of Mel is committed to improving the lives of people living with cancer and beyond. Working with them has been a wonderful experience for me, as we share that same passion. Pauline Alighieri, the executive director of the Friends of Mel Foundation, is a fierce advocate of programs like The Art of Living - Life Beyond Cancer conference for survivors living on the South Shore and beyond.

Cynthia Medeiros is a psychotherapist with Atlantic Counseling and Consultation of Weymouth.

NO MORE GOODBYES

'A walking success story'

By Ruth Thompson
rthompson@wickedlocal.com

Kristina Libby-Morris was in the midst of planning her wedding when she was diagnosed with breast cancer – for the first time. She was 28 years old.

"I was devastated," she said, adding that the hardest part of being diagnosed was thinking she would never be a mom.

"My husband kept telling me to focus on the here-and-now and not about a future with no kids, but I couldn't."

Originally from Portland, Maine, Libby-Morris has been on the South Shore for 15 years and currently lives in Whitman.

"There is not one single speck of breast cancer in my family," she said.

Treatment consisted of a mastectomy with chemotherapy.

"The chemo was torture," she said. "It was the worst thing I have ever survived in my life."

There were times when she felt "horrible guilt" for making her family and loved ones worry so much about her.

"I remember one time I spiked a fever during chemo and I didn't want my husband to once again come and sit at the hospital with me, so I just left him a note on the counter that I was driving myself to the hospital. I didn't want to wake him."

A ray of sunshine came into their lives with the adoption of their first child.

"That was the greatest gift of my life," Libby-Morris said. "It was worth every single chemo treatment. My son is one of the many silver linings in my life."

When her son was 2, Libby-Morris said she and her husband decided to try fertility treatments.

"After five rounds of IVF that failed, we gave up and were grateful to have one child," she said. "The next month I became pregnant on my own."

The family welcomed a daughter, and then three months later, Libby-Morris said she became pregnant again, and another daughter was added to the family.

Yet despite the joy her children brought, Libby-Morris said each pregnancy was "terrible" and that she struggled to breathe the entire time.

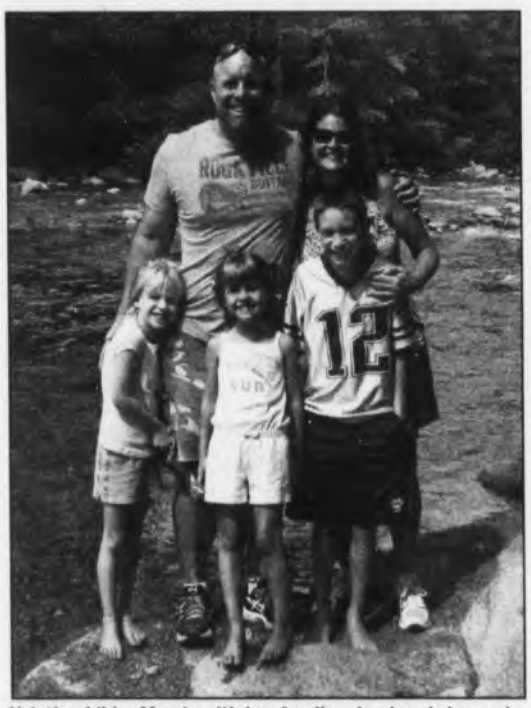
"I knew something was wrong with me, something badly was wrong, but the doctors found nothing," she said.

When her youngest daughter was three months old, Libby-Morris learned her cancer had returned. She was 35 years old.

"I had a three-month-old, a 15-month-old, and a 4-year old," she said, adding that the diagnosis put her into "fight mode that I have never been in my life. I was like a momma bear protecting my cubs and cancer was the predator."

She had a lumpectomy followed by 37 rounds of radiation. She also had her ovaries removed and several abdominal surgeries.

"Once I finally finished all of my treatment I still didn't feel good and that lingering feeling of something being wrong with me still existed," she said.



She explained her symptoms to her doctor and was given a stress test.

"They stopped the test in the middle of it and asked if I had anyone there with me," she said. "Those are words that no one ever wants to hear."

She found out that day that she had congestive heart failure and that her heart was only functioning at 30 percent.

"So for the next year I was testing drug mixes to see what was right for me," she said. "Today I can tell you that my heart has returned to its normal functioning due to medications. Life is so good for me."

Libby-Morris, now age 40, said her cancer is currently not showing up on PET (positron emission tomography) scans.

She said it was her husband who got her through every single step of the way.

"I honestly cannot imagine one part of the last 12 years without his love and support," she said. "We have faced more adversities in our time together than most people do in their entire lives. He is the most amazing human being that ever walked on this earth. Our relationship is rock solid because of our battle to survive. We went through this entire thing together. He still comes to all of my appointments – we are a team."

No More Goodbyes

Libby-Morris explained that team No More Goodbyes came about in 2010.

"My friend Denise and I had been diagnosed with our second bout of breast cancer at the same time," she said. "She was also a mom and we shared intimate details about our hopes and fears in life."

Denise lost her battle, however, and had to say goodbye to her young daughter.

"I was devastated and extremely angry that breast cancer took another mother away from their child," Libby-Morris said. "I didn't know what to do. I couldn't find a place in my heart for the anger I felt. Then I saw a commercial for the Susan G. Komen 3-Day for the Cure and a light bulb went off."

She signed up for the walk alone.

But by the time the walk started in July she had a team of 13 men and women who were also sick of breast cancer taking their loved one's away from them.

Each year her team walks in a different city.

"My team this year is nine women and one man (73 years old)," she said. "Our team has the greatest time ever. It is three days filled with laughter and lifetime memories. I look forward to this event each year."

She said that by the time her team takes their first steps in Arizona this November they will have raised almost $200,000.

"That is a huge milestone considering our group is not that big," she said. "My girlfriend and I make hair bows and head bands and we sell them at craft fairs throughout the year. We donate all of our proceeds toward our walk. It is a ton of work and very time consuming, but it is better than asking friends and family for money each year."

Money raised from the walk goes to the Susan G. Komen For the Cure.

"I am involved because I am living proof that the Komen research is making huge steps toward treatment in breast cancer," Libby-Morris said. "I want to live to retire with my husband down south and drive a golf cart around our neighborhood."

Libby-Morris said 75 percent of the proceeds fund research and 25 percent stays in the city of origin to assist patients with co-payments, parking fees, and various other fees.

"I was helped by these services," she said. "Most importantly I am on medications that have been funded by the money that I have helped raise with the Komen. That is very important to me and to my future. I think the team that I have has been so dedicated to the cause because they see me – a walking success story – and they want to keep that moving forward."

Looking ahead

"Breast cancer has made me very aware of the blessings in my life," Libby-Morris said. "I live life much differently than most people. I know what can be taken away from me and how quickly it can happen."

The day Libby-Morris was diagnosed with breast cancer she had just started an accelerated master's program in social work at UMASS Boston.

"I had to drop out to fight the cancer," she said. "I never really knew what I wanted to be when I 'grew up' but I knew I wanted to help people and try to save the world. Today I am back in school. This time in nursing school to be an oncology nurse. Having cancer showed me the light to my future."

Libby-Morris said her words to newly diagnosed women are, "Arm yourself with as much knowledge of your disease and treatments as you possibly can, get second and even third opinions, don't ever be afraid to ask for help – people are dying to help but just don't know how to."

She also said to "get that second opinion and ask a ton of questions."

"If I had listened to my first doctor all those years ago I would not be here telling my story," she said. "Doctors are humans and humans make errors. Know your cancer!"

Paying it forward is also important, she said.

"And tell the next person to pay it forward. And be your own advocate."

She said she would also tell women newly diagnosed with cancer not to feel like they were weak if they have a complete "crybaby break down.

"Everyone always says to be strong and good things will happen, I hate that expression," she said. "It is OK to have weak moments. You are only human, fight like you have never fought before and know that the yucky awful feelings you are experiencing from the treatments will at some point end, it will not be forever."

SURVIVOR'S STORY

'The wall of love' provides inspiration

By Lisa Cooney

This story is about love, support, patience, friendship, awareness, unselfishness and most importantly... survivorship. Six years ago at the age of 51, I was diagnosed with stage 2, invasive lobular breast cancer. My life changed forever instantly. After giving my husband this shocking unexpected news my next thoughts were, how do we tell our daughters and am I going to live? Fast forward six years later and here I am writing this story. Breast cancer doesn't discriminate yet I thought it would never happen to me. How brazen of me to think I would be the exception.

After grueling tests, doctor's appointments, meetings, decisions, etc., I had a right mastectomy, reconstruction surgery, four months of chemo, six weeks of radiation therapy and one year of PT. It was two years before I could wake up in the morning and feel semi normal. It is a life altering experience. Keep in mind that I had my annual mammograms religiously, but a small percentage of women are diagnosed with this cancer, which doesn't show up till it forms a mass unlike other breast cancers. Most importantly, my unfortunate news prompted several friends to book their mammograms, which they had put off for some time.

But here's the good part. Because of the love and support from my wonderful husband, daughters, family, friends, neighbors and co-workers, I wasn't traveling the journey alone. Every day we received cards, flowers (pink roses my favorite), beautiful thoughtful gifts, homemade soups and meals, emails, phone calls, visitors looking to cook, clean or fold laundry or just check in on us. Every card I received was taped to my living room wall called "the wall of love."

Anytime I felt down I would read those cards over and over again to give me strength. One card that always comes to mind is the musical card "I Will Survive" from my boss Greg. I was treated like royalty. You actually experience this incredible uplifting feeling from all the positive energy around you, which helps you bulldoze forward.

Since 2007, I have been trying to figure out a way to express my thanks for all the unselfish acts of kindness and here is my opportunity.

I am forever grateful for my husband's never ending faith and love, who told me every day we would get through this, to my beautiful daughters who showered me with affection and hope, that found a way to seamlessly make everything happen without Mom, to our families, neighbors, friends and co-workers for making quilts, sewing point shoes, home made dinners, helping with household chores, weekly dinners from the food chain, rides to appointments, games and dance classes, cleaning, planting pink flowers in our front yard and to my favorite "wig lady" Patricia Queeney, for guiding me through the reinvention of the new me!

Most of all...THANKS to everyone for all the prayers that allowed me to receive the miracle of life the second time around.

WIRE MAPPING

I looked at my husband, tears in my eyes, and just shook my head. He held my hand and we waited for the good doctor's return.

She was back in a few minutes and asked how I was feeling.

"No different at all," I responded. "I'm still waiting for an explanation for the naked rear end situation. Look at me for Pete's sake! I'm not built like you. I have been married for 18 years, have had 2 C-Sections and I don't prance around naked in front of my husband. Why would you think I would do that here?"

She turned to the nurse that was with her, and very calmly said, "We're going to need another pill."

I just shook my head.

It was like watching the movie "Jaws." You know the scene. The poor terrified police chief is chumming for sharks off the back of the fishing boat they've chartered to catch the killer shark. The shark appears out of nowhere and almost takes off his hand. He scurries to the captain and simply says, "We're gonna need a bigger boat!! I have just officially become the shark in this story...and the captain is sending out for reinforcements. It won't be a bigger boat, it's gonna be another pill.

"I don't think I need another pill. I'm fine. I just want an answer please."

She smiled and simply said, "Susie, this is how the procedure is done. Just focus on the fact that at the end of the day, you will be cancer free."

With that, they insisted I take a second pill. I did. Then they asked if I was ready to go get wire mapped.

I explained I just needed a minute. Then, I quietly said this prayer in my head.

Dear God. Thank you for giving me the strength so far, to deal with this cancer situation. You know I haven't abandoned my faith, despite this diagnosis. I've even explained to you that despite the problems I've had over the last year...uncontrolled bleeding, gum recession and disease, a blown out knee and subsequent surgery, a dog that seems to poop on the floor whenever I turn my back... and now breast cancer...I'm staying with you and keeping my faith stronger than ever. I know not to ask for more than I really need. So I'm not asking for this cancer to have all been a big mistake. I'm not expecting to wake up and this all be a bad dream. I m in your hands and I'll go where you lead me. But for today, please, could I ask for one or two things? Since apparently they really are not going to change their position on this naked thing, could the people in the room, soon to be subjected to my fat fanny, please be chubbier than me? And, if that's not doable, if it's not too much trouble, could someone at least have a large pair of surgical pants handy that I could wear to cover my rear end? Thanks. In your name I pray now and forever. Amen.

I know what you're thinking...you're probably not going to see that prayer pop up on a daily devotional calendar. But it's all I had at the moment. Let's face it. I'd been drugged, not once, but twice!

I looked up at the nurse and said, "OK. Let's get this over with."

I looked at John and smiled weakly and said "I'll see you in a few minutes."

He gave a gentle smile back and I knew he felt just awful for me.

I took a deep breath, got up off the gurney and headed down the hallway with the nurse as my guide. We approached the doorway to the room where the "mappers" were waiting for me. I paused, looked down taking in another deep breath and quickly psyched myself into the mindset I hoped would help me endure whatever was about to happen.

A chipper female voice called out to me, "Hi honey. How are you doing this morning?"

I looked into the room and just smiled. Holding up my right index finger I said, "Just a minute please..."

I gazed up toward heaven and said "THANK YOU JESUS" in a very firm tone and then responded to the woman, "I'm doing just fine."

Standing before me were two, full figured, smiling nurses holding an extra-large pair of surgical pants. They were all the most beautiful things I had ever seen in my life.

Yes, God does hear our prayers. He really does.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 4, 2013

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You unearthed some surprising facts. Now you need to consider how to use them to your advantage. Meanwhile, it might be best to keep what you've learned secret for now.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your energy levels begin to rise by midweek. This allows you to catch up with your heavy workload and still have plenty of get-up-and-go to go out on the town this weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're probably roaring your head off about a perceived slight from a longtime critic. Ignore it. That person might just be trying to goad you into doing something you might later regret.

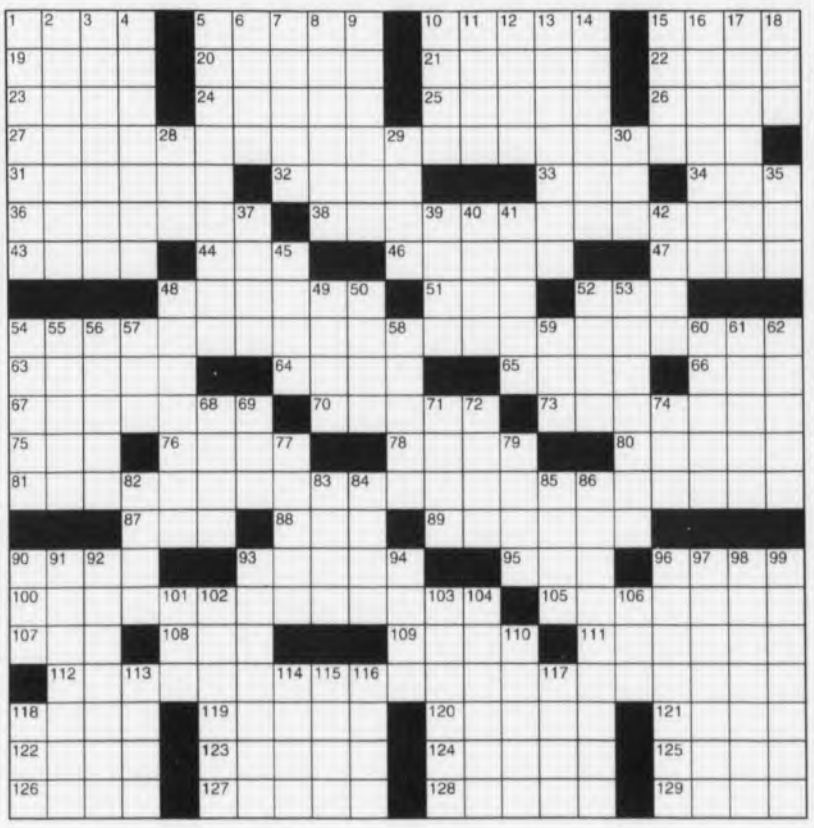
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The early part of the week is open to spontaneity. Then it's time to settle into your usual routine to get all your tasks done. A personal situation could require more attention from you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A meeting of the minds on a workplace project might well develop into something more personal for Librans looking for romance. Aspects are also favorable for platonic relationships.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A more-positive mood might be difficult to assume in light of a recent problem involving the health of someone special. But by week's end, your emotional barometer should start to rise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Look for a changed attitude from a former adversary once he or she realizes you have your colleagues' full support. Now you can refocus your energies on that workplace project.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This time, a difference of opinion might not be resolved in your favor. But be patient. It ultimately could all work out to your advantage, as new information begins to develop.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A tug of war develops between the artistic Aquarian's creative aspect and his or her practical side. Best advice: Prioritize your schedule so you can give appropriate time to both.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You could be entering a career phase awash with job-related demands. But avoid being swamped by the overflow and, instead, keep treading water as you deal with demands one by one.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Rotary delivers dictionaries

The objective of the Cohasset Rotary Dictionary Project is to give every student a personal dictionary of their very own that will serve them at least through elementary and middle school.

Many teachers see this as a key to better reading, speech, and writing. These skills will improve student performance in other subjects as well.

Receiving the dictionaries from Rotary Club members is also beneficial to students. Rotary Club President Ken Roth said the young people meet successful adults in their community who care enough about them to purchase these dictionaries and come to their school to present them personally.

The brief explanation of Rotary service in the community and around the world also gives students a lasting positive impression of Rotary and the ideal of service, Roth said.

Worlds apart

Library and museum squabbling over space

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen has been asked to step in on a neighborly dispute — between the library and a children's museum.

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library trustees have butted heads with the staff of Our World, the children's museum that rents the back of the library from the town.

The conflict between the two organizations is nothing new. Last summer, the selectmen held a joint meeting between the two entities to negotiate a lease both could agree on when it comes to sharing the space.

Now, it seems that both parties are still having trouble sharing.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski asked the selectmen to intervene, citing a recent incident involving an Our World item breaking when the library staff was setting up for one of their Sunday Author Talks, which are held in the museum space. The library trustees indicate that there are liability issues regarding what they can touch on the Our World side; however, the trustees attest that the Our World staff has not been cleaning the space in time for library events, thereby not holding up its end of the bargain.

The Children's Global Discovery Museum, Inc. was formally organized in 2001 as a non-profit organization to create educational awareness. The Oct. 2000 Special Town Meeting approved leasing the wing to the discovery center. The agreement was for the town to lease the building to Our World for $1 per year until the museum became financially stable. Through private fundraising, the space was renovated and turned into Our World to the tune of $90,000.

Our World utilizes the rear of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 100 Sohier Street, a wing in the former location of the Joseph Osgood elementary school, and has done so for the past 10 years. The 10-year lease with the town for $1 per year expired in September 2012 and was renewed.

Library trustees have made it no secret that, due to growth in programs and library usage over the years, they would like to see the library expand — and that

Selectmen close the warrant

New citizen's petition misses the mark

Selectman Karen Quigley said she was concerned about last-minute warrant articles that the board knew nothing about.

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The warrant has been approved, and the fall Special Town Meeting is on its way — scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 23 starting at 9 a.m.

The STM warrant includes several "housekeeping" articles concerning financial matters, such as unpaid bills, as well as the citizen's petition that forced the selectmen's hand when it came to holding a STM or not. The petition called for a STM to vote on how to utilize surplus monies from the state this fiscal year, including $1.3 million in free cash.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously (5-0) Tuesday night to accept and close the warrant, which includes eight articles, after some discussion on water and sewer articles concerning unpaid bills and capital expenditures.

The selectmen were nervous that the article descriptions in the draft warrant did not include any numbers, saying only "a sum to be expended" for the unpaid bills.

Selectman Karen Quigley said she was concerned about last-minute warrant articles that the board knew nothing about.

"I don't like putting articles on the warrant that don't have numbers," said Quigley. "These are issues better left to the annual [town meeting]... I feel like they're just being slipped in at the last minute because all of a sudden there's a special town meeting... It seems to me it's more convenience than need."

Selectman Steve Gaumer said he shared Quigley's concern.

"I'm not in favor of placeholder items on the warrant. It's not fair to the voters," said Gaumer.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby agreed. "I'm very leery of putting stuff on the warrant when I have no idea what it is."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained that departments scrambled to come up with warrant articles after learning just last week that there was going to be a STM this fall, and the warrant had to be closed within seven days of calling the STM. A majority of the selectmen seemed intent on skipping the STM this year, since the town is in the midst of a search for a permanent town manager.

The town manager interviews will take place the same week as the STM, on Tuesday, Nov. 19 and Wed., Nov. 20.

A citizen's petition with 398 signatures called for a STM; only 100 certified signatures are needed for a petition to be considered valid.

Gaumer said that he was

CERT gets special municipal employee status

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The training covers basic first aid skills that are important to know in a disaster when emergency services are not available.

Those who are volunteer members of the town's Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) are now considered to be special municipal employees so they can be covered under the town's insurance plan.

CERT training is designed to help citizens prepare themselves in the event of a disaster, since public safety personnel are not always available to help everyone immediately. The training covers basic first aid skills that are important to know in a disaster when emergency services are not available.

Each CERT member wears a lime-green shirt and reflective vest and is equipped with a supplies bag that includes first aid kits, flashlights, caution tape, gloves, goggles, cutting tools and more.

Following Mass. Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) guidelines, the Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday to allow CERT members – including emergency management director, Glenn Pratt – to become special municipal employees.

According to the Mass. Municipal Association (MMA), a special municipal employee is someone who holds an unpaid position in town, someone who holds a part-time position "that allows him or her to work at another job during normal working hours," or someone who "was not paid by the town for more than 800 working hours (approximately 20 weeks full-time) during the preceding 365 days."

State law makes it clear that it is the position that is designated as having "special" status, not the person holding the position.

In Cohasset, special municipal employees include members of the Advisory Committee. According to Pratt, MEMA asked for CERT members to be designated as "special" so they can be covered under the town's insurance.

Pratt said that Cohasset has 30 CERT volunteers, "an incredible amount of people" given the town's small size. The city of Brookline has the largest CERT in the state with over 100 volunteers, added Pratt. Given Cohasset's population, "We're not far behind."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said she has heard nothing but good things from friends who have joined Cohasset's CERT.

"I have a bunch of friends who are CERT team members," said Kennedy. "The [training] process they went through is amazing. Now we have 30 Cohasset people trained and ready to roll."

The selectmen voted unanimously to give CERT members "special" status.

Box of Hula-hoops missing

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

About $200 in Hula-hoops made by Wham-O went missing on Tuesday (Oct. 21) from the rear of Buttonwood Books at Shaw's Plaza. The proprietor notified police and said she was cleaning out the storeroom and placed the box of Hula-hoops that were slated for sale temporarily behind the store. The incident was investigated and it is possible that the box was mistaken for trash in that the box was near the Dumpster, police said.

Drinks

The front desk clerk at the Red Lion Inn called the police last Monday (Oct. 21) around 12:10 a.m. about two guests who were leaving a wedding at the inn with their drinks. They were told they could not leave the building with alcohol and the officer gave the two women a ride to the Harbor Inn where they were staying.

Gas leak

Police were alerted to an outside odor of gas along Atlantic Avenue on Monday (Oct. 21) around 1:23 p.m. A contractor for the gas company had been working in the area and severed a gas line. Gas was shut down to the area and the line was repaired within about 35 minutes, police said. No evacuations were necessary.

Gas odor

The smell of gas was evident again at the Ripley Road and Sohier Street intersection on Monday afternoon (Oct. 21) where major gas leak had occurred in August. This time the repair was minor and was quickly taken care of, police said.

Parking lot

A 36-year-old Cohasset woman, operating a 2013 Ford Explorer, drove to the police station on Sunday (Oct. 27) around 11:30 a.m. to report she had tapped another vehicle in the parking lot at St. Anthony's that morning. The woman left a note on the 2000 Chevrolet Impala, which is registered to an 83-year-old Scituate woman, police said. The Cohasset woman was pulling out of the parking space when she apparently cut the corner too closely and scraped the Impala, which was unoccupied and parked to the right of her car.

Checks out

Police said a caller reported that a gray 2006 Ford pickup truck with a rack on top had been driving erratically along Beechwood Street. Around 3:36 p.m. that day (Monday, Oct. 21), an officer spotted the truck pull out of the Dunkin Donuts parking lot and head north on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The officer pulled it over near Pond Street.

The operator, a 37-year-old Hull man, was not impaired; he was given a verbal warning for marked lanes violation based on the report from the "named" caller (meaning the caller was not anonymous and provided his or her name to police).

Raccoon

A police officer had to put a raccoon down last week after it was spotted stumbling in the road on North Main Street near Cedar Street. A caller reported the animal that was acting strangely at about 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 21). Police said the raccoon was sick and had to be destroyed. The Animal Control Officer picked up the carcass.

Phone calls

Police advised a Jerusalem Road resident to follow-up with their telephone provider after receiving a series of harassing phone calls. The resident reported the calls on Wednesday (Oct. 23).

Credit cards

A 58-year-old man walking his dog in Wompatuck State Park near the Doane Street entrance reported finding a Chase Mastercard, City Bank Visa, American Eagle credit card, and a music CD off to the side of the trail in some dirt. Police did some checking and found out that a 22-year-old Halifax woman has lost the items while in Wompatuck State Park last June. She had cancelled the cards, police said.

Barking dogs

An officer reported leaving some ruts in a yard when he pulled the cruiser over to avoid hitting dogs that were charging at him when he was responding to a complaint about the dogs barking on Wednesday (Oct. 23) on Elm Court. The ACO talked with the dog owners who had inadvertently left their dogs out when they went to dinner, police said.

Hot water

A 46-year-old woman who works at the Dunkin Donuts on King Street (Route 3A) was transported to the hospital around 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 22) after an accident resulting in hot water being spilled on her knees and ankles.

Squirrel

The Animal Control Officer responded to a concerned call from a resident of Jerusalem Road about a squirrel that was attacking people in her yard on Thursday (Oct. 23) around 10:30 a.m. When the ACO arrived, the squirrel had taken off into the woods, police said.

Leaves

A landscaper agreed to stop blowing leaves onto a neighbor's yard and to pick up the debris and leaves that already blown over after police responded to a complaint from a Forest Avenue resident last Thursday (Oct. 24). All parties were satisfied that the matter had been handled appropriately, police said.

Deer

A 55-year-old Hull woman called her husband who called Cohasset police after a deer ran into the driver's side door of her Honda Civic on Forest Avenue at around 9:50 p.m. on Thursday (Oct. 24). The deer, which damaged the car door, ran off into the woods, police said.

Trash

The Pond Street resident who complained about the ongoing problem she has about a neighbor's dog getting into her trash was able to provide police with photos of the dog getting into the trash. The Animal Control Officer recognized the dog and will issue the owners a $25 citation for not having their dog under their control.

Car wash

An officer spoke to the adult in charge of the soccer team car wash at Deer Hill School on Sunday morning (Oct. 27) after two concerned callers reported the enthusiastic kids were running into the street. The callers were concerned that someone might get hurt.

CHS Freshmen Class Coastsweep 2013

On Oct. 25, the ninth grade class of Cohasset High School accomplished a "coast sweep" of Cohasset beaches including Bassings Beach, Black Rock Beach, Sandy Beach, and Scott's Shore. We were out of school for more than half the day cleaning the beaches, and tallying our results for the Commonwealth's annual program known as Coastsweep. They knew ahead of time that the wind chill along the coast was going to be very cold, even though it had been such a warm October. Many of the students wore two sweatshirts, two shirts, two pairs of socks, two pairs of pants, gloves, and hats; but still the cold seemed to make its way to their bodies, leaving them shivering by lunchtime at Government Island.

The goal was to clean up trash, not only larger pieces such as bottles, but also smaller bits of debris such as cigarette butts and bottle caps. All four beaches looked clean and well-kept from the road, but once the students stepped on to the beach, they realized how dirty it really was. As they started to walk they uncovered so much litter and trash that it seemed as though someone had come before them and purposefully placed it there for us to find.

Many of the things members of the class enjoyed included digging out and hauling away dozen of mangled lobster traps and large bundles of twisted and tangled rope partially buried on the shore. (One thing you don't get to do much during school is use a knife to cut thick pieces of rope!) They used teamwork and student horsepower, which greatly contributed to the group's effort. The students also enjoyed finding the weird things such as shotgun shells, and what looked like IV bags. But, there were many disgusting things, too, including condoms, syringes, a bottle of what appeared to be pee, and some dead birds.

They gathered all different types of discarded fishing supplies, balloons, foam pieces, fireworks casings, clothing, coffee k-cups, and much more. Cataloging all of the strange debris the students found made them realize the enormity of the problem. The trash affects the community... the people, animals, and environment. The experience left them wondering: if this much trash has accumulated on the coastline of our small town, how much must there be in other parts of the world.

When getting on to the warm bus after picking up trash for three hours on the cold windy October beaches, we were very excited. The weather was not the best, but the fun we had is something we will always remember.

The students finished the task knowing that they had worked together with friends and classmates helping the community and the environment.

Special thanks are extended to the Sandy Beach Association, the Cohasset Conservation Trust, the Sherbrooke family (for lending a shovel and knife), and the Cohasset Harbormaster, Lori Gibbons, for ferrying the students and the trash over to and back from Bassings Beach.

The Class of 2016 did the same thing last year, but went to Brant Rock. Last year the class tallied 2,701 pieces of debris and this year a different group working at different beaches tallied 2,558 pieces — almost identical totals.

Joe Campedelli, Cole Joslin, and William Dicroce depart Bassings Beach with some of the larger, more conspicuous "big game" items collected in the annual debris survey of Massachusetts beaches- a folding table, mangled lobster pots, and plastic hosing. COURTESY PHOTOS

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Dressing up for the holidays

By Jan Todd
special to the Mariner

For many years, generous Cohasset neighbors have been opening their doors in support of the club's many charitable endeavors. COURTESY PHOTO

Yuletide 2013 will be no different. There will be five homes dressed to celebrate and full of new, interesting approaches to the festive season.

Doors will open once again to welcome all who will share the house tour of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset on Thursday, Dec. 5, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For many years, generous Cohasset neighbors have been opening their doors in support of the club's many charitable endeavors in our town and in our South Shore communities.

The club's archives speak of a Christmas house tour in 1977 while Mrs. Robert Sturdy was the club president. Previously, there had been some activities that may have led to that first December house tour. The sale of fresh swags and wreaths was a fundraiser in 1970. There was also a 1976 house tour, Two Hundred Years of Houses by the Sea, under president Fran O'Toole, but held in the month of May. Somehow the idea of Christmas in Cohasset and that of a house tour in early December, as a fun break between Thanksgiving and when the thrust of the cooking and planning demanded attention for the holidays ahead, seemed like a perfect pairing, like a partridge in a pear tree.

The Cohasset Mariner has always been extremely generous. One can read articles of President Joan Shockman's house tour in 1984 or see president Mary Larson's gingerbread house bakers working diligently in 1986 on what must have become a fabulous centerpiece. In 1991 Colonial Home magazine highlighted that year's house tour by using it as the center of attraction for their December edition. Through pictures, the readers entered homes and were engaged by their beauty and creativity as they stood ready to celebrate the holidays.

Yuletide 2013 will be no different. There will be five homes dressed to celebrate and full of new, interesting approaches to the festive season. The ticket will include a complimentary delicious stop at St. Anthony's parish center for a hot drink, food, and the interesting Marketplace to tempt with its handmade crafts, gift items and fresh greens. Dec. 5 will be full of fun and interest to all who attend. Each ticket sold supports the club's Junior Gardeners' program, the senior citizens' Garden Therapy program at Golden Living Center, and helps to provide funds to support all of the hours the club spends tending to the gardens of Lightkeepers, the Cohasset Historical Society and Constitution Square, just to name a few of the club's Cohasset activities. By walking through these open doors, you support your community at large.

Tickets may be purchased now in Cohasset at Buttonwood Books, Countryhouse Furniture and Interiors, Darilynn's, Fleming's and the Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room for $30. Tickets purchased at St. Anthony's Center only, on the day, will cost $35. For more information, please phone 781-383-1448 or 781-383-0361, or e-mail to aeled@comcast.net or communitygardenclubofcohasset.org.

Scouts take part in food drive

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Red Sox

Hi there, Cohasset! I hope that everyone is doing well and had a great Halloween. With the amazing win from the Boston Red Sox, I bet everyone's mood on Halloween night was even happier, congratulations to the whole team! Thank you Boston Red Sox for an amazing season.

Food drive

Here is a great way for everyone to help fill up the Cohasset Food Pantry. Scouting for Food is a national campaign by the Boy Scouts of America to collect food for local food pantries. In Cohasset, Cub Scout Pack 38, Boy Scout Troop 28, and Venture Crew 18 will be participating in this program.

Over the next two weeks, scouts in all three units will collect food for the Cohasset Food Pantry. If you would like to participate, ask your favorite scout to give you a "Scouting for Food" bag, which you can fill with appropriate items for the food pantry. Your scout will collect the bag and turn it in. In addition, Troop 28 will be placing a collection box at the bottle shed at the RTF on the weekends of Nov. 2-3 and Nov. 9-10 for drop-offs. Thank you for your support of this national effort with a local impact.

St. Lawrence

Dominic S. Brennan of Cohasset is one of 12 St. Lawrence University students participating in the Adirondack Semester program of study this fall semester. Dominic graduated from Cohasset Middle High School.

Following the model of studying abroad in another culture, the Adirondack Semester offers students the opportunity to immerse themselves full-time in the natural world. Students have the chance to experience and reflect upon alternative perceptions of how to live responsibly, not just as global citizens of the human community, but as interconnected parts of the global ecosystem. The program includes extended wilderness experiences, as well as courses that examine natural history, ecology, cultural history and ethics. It is based physically and educationally in a remote camp in the Adirondacks, without cars, television or most electronic devices.

LIFE AT CHS

Early Decision college deadline passes, hurray!

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

After what has really been the first crazy week in a month or so, CHS's elder statesmen will be allowed to catch their collective breath this weekend, if only for a moment.

Finally, we have reached Nov. 1st, the cherished oasis buried in an application desert! Seniors throughout CHS can now rejoice as the deadline for their Early Decision (if a student is accepted, they are legally bound to attend the university) and Early Action (nonbinding) college applications passes by. After what has really been the first crazy week in a month or so, CHS's elder statesmen will be allowed to catch their collective breath this weekend, if only for a moment.

Before I get deeper into happenings at CHS, I would just like to amend something from my column last week. I had stated that a "Battle of The Bands" was set to occur on Nov. 15th; unfortunately, the organizers of said activity were forced to postpone this event, as tournament athletics and other complications made things difficult. I will certainly update you all when the B.O.B occurs, and will also relay any other fundraising efforts for this April's Europe Trip.

Continuing on, CHS has been humming with extracurricular activity during this past week. Production of CHS's student-run newspaper, The Spinnaker, is well underway, with the paper set to be released Friday, Nov. 16th.

"Powder Puff Fever" is the illness du jour, with both Junior and Senior girls holding practices during the past few weeks even though the game is not for another month. Other upperclassmen have brainstormed what nicknames they want on the back of their Powder Puff T-Shirts, as well. Come Thanksgiving Break, it seems that Powder Puff will undoubtedly be the talk of CHS's hallways.

Additionally, with Halloween rearing its masked head on Thursday, there was no shortage of Halloween spirit at 143 Pond St.. Student Council, with the help of Faculty Advisor Mrs. McAlarney, organized a "Scare Away Hunger" campaign, in which students were encouraged to dress up in a light costume, and, more importantly, give a small donation to the Cohasset Food Pantry. Students came to school dressed as anything from ninjas to pirates, and there was even a sighting of the Pope (which, in my opinion, wins the nonexistent Best Costume Award). Overall, it was an awesome way to show school spirit, have a little fun, and do something charitable for the community.

And before we depart for this week, I need to give a few quick sports shout outs. Every single CHS fall athletics team made their respective postseason tournament. Hats off to everyone who made it happen (including Athletic Director Mr. Ronald Ford); that's truly something to be proud of. I'll leave the details to the Sports section, but be sure to come by and support CHS athletics in the coming days. And also, I have to admit that I was extremely distracted during this article, as I watched our beloved Red Sox win their third World Series in 10 years. Shout out the boys for staying Boston Strong.

Now, I'll just have to do my best Koji Uehara impression, and close this article out. Keep it classy, Cohasset!

Matthew MacCormack is a senior at Cohasset High School; his column runs weekly during the school year.

Corky Laing to rock the C-Note, Cohasset bands open

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Corky Laing and The Perfect Child are playing at the C-Note in Hull on Thursday, Nov. 7.

Rock and roll drummer Corky Laing of Mountain fame is ready to rock the C-Note — with a little help from his (local) friends.

Corky Laing and his latest outfit, the Perfect Child, joins local rockers howieHowie and the Border Road Band at the CNote in Hull on Thursday, Nov. 7 at 8 p.m. Both of Laing's opening acts are local bands, with some members hailing from Cohasset, including Border Road's Chuck McDermott and Howie Altholtz of howieHowie.

Laing and Altholtz go way back, having worked on several musical projects together, including an album that Altholtz produced featuring Laing, Jimi Hendrix Experience bass player Noel Redding, and Eric Schenkman of the Spin Doctors.

The trio's name, "Cork," was derived from Laing's nickname; however, coincidentally, the album was recorded in Cork County, Ireland.

The two musicians were also both in attendance at Woodstock, although their paths didn't cross there. It was a friendship that was struck up later on the island of Nantucket, where Laing, who hails from Montreal, played many a gig with a local band in the sixties, before he joined Mountain. Laing wrote the genesis of Mountain's hit "Mississippi Queen" during a sweltering summer gig on Nantucket; subsequently, the band's album "Nantucket Sleighride" was also Massachusetts-inspired.

Altholtz said he was introduced to Laing by a mutual friend and fellow musician. Both Laing and Altholtz were friends with Michael Kittredge, who founded Yankee Candle.

"It was all very cool," Laing said of their meeting. Of the upcoming gig, he said, "It's a pleasure to work with Howie; he's a good man. Howie was a major playing in executive producing this record [with Cork]. We played the Boston Music Awards... Howie's been my [Boston] contact.

"He's a very unique character," Laing said of Altholtz. "He's very energetic, he loves music, and we seem to get along."

Altholtz, who is both a musician (formerly of the band Test Tube Babies) and entertainment lawyer, said that he and Laing share plenty of commonalities.

"We come from different places, but we came from the same place — loving music," said Altholtz. "I approach it from the legal and business side, but the bottom line for me is the artist side... Corky has a lifelong commitment to music."

Laing, who settled in Long Island, NY, has also harbored a longtime love for the Boston area.

"From Nantucket to Boston, there's a tremendous history," said Laing. "It's a love affair."

The rocker explained that Mountain's album "Nantucket Sleighride" was inspired by nautical New England.

"The metaphors, the symbolism is the music business," said Laing, using the "symbolism of the whaling industry and the ocean as the scary world of rock and roll."

It seems that Laing has had no trouble navigating those waters.

"Mississippi Queen" – arguably one of the most famous "cowbell" songs of all time – was a chart-topper in 1970. Laing looked back to '70s rock for inspiration for his new album as the outfit The Perfect Child, "Playing God."

"We come from different places, but we came from the same place — loving music. I approach it from the legal and business side, but the bottom line for me is the artist side... Corky has a lifelong commitment to music."
Howie Altholtz, Cohasset

The album is more than a collection of songs — it's a rock opera based on a Finnish academic book that two professors from the University of Helsinki commissioned Laing to write.

"The story deals with the ethical research of bio-genetic manipulation," said Laing. "It's about perfection and the world, especially the western world, aspiring to genetically maneuver the body so it's perfect."

Calling it "a musical approach to academia," Laing said that he's played the songs in Switzerland and Paris, and "the reaction has been unbelievable... I am just about in shock. It's not meant for radio; it's an opera, it's a story."

Still, '70s rock laid the foundation for the album's sounds.

"I chose seventies heavy metal music because the content is so involved, I wanted to keep the music simple," Laing explained. "I didn't want progressive rock.

"It was probably one of the most wonderful challenges to me to write the music," he added. "It was an opportunity to stretch out as a writer."

Laing and The Perfect Child, featuring Denny Colt and Bonny Parker, will play these songs at the C-Note, and also at Johnny D's in Somerville the night before the Hull show.

Altholtz said the bands will be warmed up from the Somerville show and raring to rock Hull the next night.

"We're both looking forward to having some fun at the C-Note with the Border Road guys."

OUR VIEW

Two things to think about

1. As a town, we need to appreciate that the current financial management team led by Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski is doing a terrific job. With all the politics buzzing around Town Hall – the major fact that Cohasset has its financial house in order should be cause for optimism. Milanoski's bosses – the Board of Selectmen – briefly acknowledged the good work at their meeting Tuesday when commenting on the special award the town received from the Government Finance Officers Association of the U.S. and Canada for outstanding financial reporting (see page 13).

Good financial management with money in the bank translates into more savings through higher bond ratings and lower interest payments. Therefore, we do not understand why a Citizens Petition calling for a Special Town Meeting to appropriate extra funds had to force the Board of Selectmen's hand – when the BOS should have trusted their award-winning financial team's advice and enthusiastically called for the Special Town Meeting themselves.

2. We may be among the few who have sat through Jeff Nutting's workshop twice. As you may recall, Nutting (who is the Town Manager in Franklin, Mass.) is the consultant who sat with selectmen for more than three hours on a Thursday night in September to give them advice on how to get along and do their job. We attended the meeting, taped it, and then spent an entire Sunday transcribing Nutting's "words of wisdom." Much of what Nutting said could be summed up in one word: commonsense.

Nutting was shocked at the length of Cohasset selectmen's meetings and made a terrific suggestion that one meeting a month be dedicated to a single topic. Probably the most important issue looming that needs to be addressed is: Human resources, including looking at hiring a part-time staffer or sharing HR services with the school department or another town. Nutting rightly pointed out that by not addressing the lack of HR – the town opens itself up to liability.

Yet, some selectmen seem reluctant to address the HR issue, OPEB, and other important matters before hiring a permanent Town Manager – stating they don't have the "bandwidth" right now.

The fact is that HR, OPEB, reining in legal costs, and Town Hall renovation – are all critical issues that the town will continue to face regardless of who is on the Board of Selectmen or who is sitting in the Town Manager's seat.

Now is the time to get with the program, put politics aside, address these critical issues and focus on the big picture.

Drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the right left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Rationing folly

I suppose each of the three selectmen who seek to prevent consideration of reappointment of our Acting Town Manager has his or her own reasons, ranging from naiveté to revenge. Or maybe "respect for process," regardless of collateral damage resulting.

"Respect for process" shouldn't prevent us from consideration of commonsense retention of such excellent public servants as Acting TM Milanoski or Acting Police Chief Quigley, and instead taking a chance on strangers with well-crafted resumes.

Savvy corporations increasingly are looking inward for talent to retain or promote, having noted how often they and other companies have been embarrassed by their well-burnished imports. Sure, "respect of process" has much merit, but it is a guide, not an absolute substitute for resort to intelligent pragmatism.

A letter published in last week's Mariner makes the ridiculous accusation that the revised Town Meeting Act was designed to ensure reappointment of our Acting TM. In fact, the Revised TMA was developed by an excellent team of well-qualified and deservedly well-respected people, and approved by a large majority of voters at Town Meeting. Unfortunately, its approval by State has been delayed by the irresponsible intervention of habitual dissidents. The revised TMA does remove some unwise limitation on who can serve, but that does not justify a claim of "blatant workaround."

COMMENTARY

Insanity reigns in Cohasset

PETER DE CAPRIO

During this last election only 23 percent of us turned out to vote. Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby want you to continue to not pay attention, not get involved, and not vote. It is the only way their agenda wins.

In a letter to the Mariner last week, a Fred Koed-supporter wrote to assure us that Mr. Koed was only interested in "good process," which is why Mr. Koed has opposed (1) the promotion of Acting Chief Bill Quigley, (2) the changes to our town manager act, and (3) the holding of a Special Town Meeting. I wonder what that supporter would say about this:

Last spring, during the selectman's campaign, Koed forwarded an email chain to his friend and former selectman Peter Pratt regarding a parking ticket issued to Acting Town Manager Mike Milanoski. Mr. Pratt relayed Mr. Koed's email to former police chief Mark DeLuca and former town manager Mike Coughlin and sought their help to use this item as a lever for an ethics complaint against Mr. Milanoski.

Coughlin sent Pratt's email to the Mariner, the Patriot Ledger, and the Boston Globe with the following: "I am forwarding these e-mails in confidence. Nevertheless all except the note from Peter Pratt are public records. Given the issues surrounding the public safety departments, the incident should be made public. It would seem that the acting town manager tried to use his position to get out from (sic) obeying the most routine of laws — a parking ticket."

The charge, of course, was completely false. There were only two reasons for Mr. Koed to send a copy of a local parking ticket to a California resident: (1) he knew he was initiating an attack on Mr. Milanoski; or (2) he was simply disseminating data on a routine parking violation to a former resident fascinated by this.

The first is so damning of an elected official it hurts to consider it. The second shows such a thorough lack of judgment it also hurts to consider it. What "process" was served by Mr. Koed here? The utter banality of his sleazy attempt to undermine Mr. Milanoski, and the unimaginable stupidity of co-opting for his dirty work two plaintiffs against the town and a proxy that lives 3,000 miles away, speaks volumes.

Let's face facts: Koed, Karen Quigley and Martha Gjesteby are some of the principal antagonists in the never-ending campaign against Mr. Milanoski. The Three Amigos lead a charge for a specific agenda that is more about the narrow interests of specific groups than the well-being of the Town of Cohasset. They just turned their attention to Acting Chief Bill Quigley, another fine public servant that stood in their way. They do not like Mr. Milanoski and are willing to overlook his record of achievement because. . . well, just because.

For the past two years, Ms. Quigley has written extensively of her ardent support of Mike Coughlin and her fierce resistance to Mr. Milanoski. In Cat Dam, Ms. Quigley was the named litigant in an action against the town. Mr. Milanoski was then a member of a Conservation Commission that denied the Quigley group its petitions (because the law was on Mr. Milanoski's side). Ms. Quigley, who lost the Cat Dam issue but won her present seat by a mere four votes, still hasn't found the time to meet with Mr. Milanoski even once to discuss town business outside of a selectman's meeting. If you haven't gotten the message, she doesn't like Mr. Milanoski much and wants him gone at all cost. What appears to be lost on Ms. Quigley is the notion that good governance is about results and not rehashing old grudges. None of us should be surprised by her actions now.

Mr. Koed is little different and is only doing what comes naturally to him — his LinkedIn profile reads like a political functionary playbook. One almost can't blame him. The fault actually lies with the rest of us. During this last election only 23 percent of us turned out to vote. Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby want you to continue to not pay attention, not get involved, and not vote. It is the only way their agenda wins.

With respect to the town manager search, Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby are big believers in a specific subset of qualifications that have been designed to exclude Mr. Milanoski. They want the kind of experience that has produced Mark Haddad (fired as town manager over sexual harassment charges from two towns including Cohasset), and Mike Coughlin (fired from three towns including Cohasset). According to them, we must fish from only one overfished pond.

In the past, we have tried their way and hired professional search firms. We have hired people with municipal government experience. And all it has gotten us are a town manager fired for sexual harassment, a police chief forced to resign over ethical lapses, and another town manager with a record of incompetence so lengthy and bizarre it might well have been written by Lewis Carroll. Einstein said that the true sign of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results.

A record of accomplishment such as Mr. Milanoski's should result in hoseannas, not acrimony. The same could be said of Acting Chief Bill Quigley. Bob Silvia, as accomplished a public servant as we have ever had, was once criticized for not having the proper experience. Koed, Gjesteby and Karen Quigley are so blinded by personal animus they can't see that all vibrant and successful organizations around the globe promote from within. Insanity indeed.

SPEAKING FROM THE HEART

Share the treasure

My husband works for Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary and I was helping him film the whales and to document how close to ships they were.

JILL COWIE

My husband, Ben, a marine biologist, told me the Rights Whales are off our coast these days as they make there way from their summer Bay of Fundy home to birth and raise their calves in the warmer waters off Northern Florida. I downloaded the free "Whale Alert" app and saw the song of one whale had lit up one buoy in the Boston Harbor Shipping Lanes. Just knowing they are there reminded me of the day I spent counting Right Whales from a four-seat plane over Cape Cod Bay. As we flew, 1,000 feet over the perfectly calm water, I was reminded of a folktale called "The Perfect Globe."

The folktale tells of how once, long ago there was this tiny globe, just a few feet in diameter, which was kept safe in a museum. It held so much mystery and beauty that people came from miles and miles just to see it. And there it was a delicate sphere in space, looking different at every angle. Sometimes you could see big pools of water in it, and smaller flows of water feeding into the big pools. There were bumps too, some big bumps, with white tops, and some smaller with gentle bumps.

I thought of this tiny globe as we gained elevation from the Plymouth airport and saw the small and big pools of water. Duxbury Bay, nearly drained at very low tide, was a vast expanse of mud flats. The coastal ponds seemed swollen in comparison, and my eye searched the malachite green for the bottom of their depths. But then, we left the land and the Cape Cod Bay, the southern portion of the Gulf of Maine stretched out before us.

It was an extraordinary day. One-fourth of our world's endangered Right whales (79 of 350) were off our coast feeding on copepods. My husband works for Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary and I was helping him film the whales and to document how close to ships they were. The Sanctuary had placed real-time whale detection buoys in the Boston shipping lane that bisect the Sanctuary, and all of them had been activated by Right Whale calls.

As we flew over this part of the bay, known for its rich diversity in marine animals and plants, the water seemed to come to life. The white sides of dolphins flashed like beacons, and their brief small blows brought the water to life like inverse rain. Finback whales methodically made their way, blowing and arching at predictable and consistent intervals. A Humpback, silhouetted under water by its white serrated baleen and the white barnacles on its body seemed suspended in the jewel green of the bay, and I felt as if I could reach down and hold it in the palm of my hand.

And we saw the Right whales, waving their tail flukes over and over as if they were answering the beckoning arm of Cape Cod. My heart seemed to pause with time as their magnificent blows shot up like geysers, suspend for a moment then disappear. The calm water they left behind after surfacing spoke to ancient times untouched by current day threats.

As we flew above this all, I felt like I was in that museum of ancient days, marveling with wonder and awe at this tiny treasure of our ocean. I joined the people in the story who felt wisdom and healing after seeing their perfect globe. The ancient story ends sadly, the tiny globe dies as people stopped coming to the museum. So I write to you to share the awe and wonder and change the ending of the story. Listen and track the whales at: listenforwhales.org. Share the treasure.

Why campaign finance rules matter

JACK KENILEY

The latest revelations of questionable political behavior on the part of town officials brings to light the role of campaign finance rules in the operation of political campaigns. What is going on and what are the laws that govern a local political campaign?

On Oct. 15th, Selectman Karen Quigley released a statement to the press in response to allegations that her political campaign had received undocumented funds from a political supporter for the 2013 Selectmen's race. Details of the transaction and the subsequent denials of wrongdoing were reported both in the Mariner and other news outlets. In her release, Selectman Quigley confirmed that she in fact had received the contribution, but she argued had not violated any campaign finance laws because she never cashed the check.

The rules guiding a candidates fundraising behavior are clear and unambiguous. They are designed to provide transparency and reduce the chance that our public officials will be unduly influenced by people looking for special consideration. To make sure political campaigns are reporting all relevant contributions, the campaign organization has to open a checking account and record every revenue and expense transaction, including the name and address of the contributor. The transactions are then filed in periodic reports submitted to the town clerk. In-kind contributions, such as holding a coffee for the candidate, must also be reported to the state.

The types of transactions, their size and the source of funds are clearly regulated. Each campaign must appoint a treasurer who is responsible for keeping accurate records and complying with all regulations. When the campaign officials register the candidate they are given an overview of their responsibilities and are directed to other resources available on the state website. Carol St Pierre, our town clerk advises everyone that a lack of knowledge of the regulations guiding campaign financing is not a legal defense.

The spring 2013 Selectmen's race was a contentious political affair.wth four candidates. Lee Jenkins, an incumbent for re-election, Russ Bonetti chair of the CPC, Steve Gaumer chair of Capital Budget and Karen.

According to the newspaper accounts, prior to the election in the first week of May, the Quigley campaign and the Bonetti campaign received an offer of financial support in the amount of $1,000 from a well known local businessman whose business is regulated by the Board of Selectman. Bonetti flatly declined the offer and documented his response in an email he made public. Quigley accepted the offer and received a check for $1,000.

In accepting the check, Quigley violated three and possibly four campaign finance laws:

- She allegedly accepted a check from a corporation. It is against the law to accept a check from a corporation, no exceptions.

- She accepted a check for $1,000. It is against the law to accept any donation, cash or in-kind donations greater than $500 and,
- If she did not record the receipt of the check, even if she subsequently returned it to the campaign contributor, her actions would constitute a campaign finance violation.
- She accepted campaign financing from a foreign national. Foreign nationals are not allowed to contribute to campaigns, nor are they allowed to vote in local elections.

After the election in which she won a selectman seat, she, according to her press release, engaged the services of town counsel to provide advice on the alleged campaign financing violations. Why? Ask yourself, if Quigley had not won the election, would town counsel have provided legal services in this matter? This is not a town-related problem. The Quigley campaign should have hired its own counsel to deal with the issue.

More importantly, if town counsel did fact provide legal services to the Quigley campaign, town counsel may be in violation of campaign finance law. If the Quigley campaign did not report the in-kind contribution of legal services, they are again in violation of campaign finance law. Finally, if the town paid the legal bills, the Quigley campaign should immediately reimburse the town for the expense.

As Selectman Quigley made clear in her press release "illegal campaign contributions are a crime punishable by fine or imprisonment or both. It is a bribe." And in her words "All are serious offenses both legally and to the integrity of Cohasset's political system." I couldn't agree more.

This is not Selectmen Quigley's first run at a public office; she ran for the selectman's job twice before spring 2012 race and has been involved in local politics for many years. She knows or should have known the rule governing campaigns and campaign financing.

So why in the world would an experienced candidate for Selectmen take a corporate check for $1,000 from a foreign national and then solicit legal advice from our town counsel for a matter that has nothing to do with town business?

COLLEGE CONNECTION

Putting your best self forward

STEPHANIE SEARS

Whether it is a job interview or a new social situation, people generally want to make a good first impression. Applying to college is no exception. While students may attempt to awe the admission staff, knowing how best to do that is often overlooked and understated. Here is what I have found working on both sides of the table, as a college admissions counselor and a college consultant/guidance counselor.

A first impression goes beyond the application itself. While the essay, application, transcript, and test scores are important, if students want to be considered as serious candidates, they should be careful about how they present themselves online, on campus, on the phone and in person. Despite all the education about leaving potentially damaging photos, tweets and other information off social media, somehow savvy admissions staff at highly selective universities still find what was supposed to be fun and seemingly anonymous and make it a part of a student's file. Remember that if students are on the Internet, information about them is considered public record and fair game by colleges.

If you made a mistake in the past, own up to it. Some of the best personal statements I have ever read have been about lessons learned the hard way. Be straightforward with your guidance counselor who will be writing a letter summarizing your high school career. Even a poor academic record in ninth grade is greeted with understanding when there has been continued growth the next three years. If something happened outside of class, you and your counselor may be asked to explain it (which should concur with each other). Be honest with yourself and the college. Admission representatives are open to hearing from you. Taking responsibility is a sign of maturity that will be seen positively.

Universities are not searching for ways to deny students. In more cases than not, they are looking for reasons to admit candidates. In an age however when things are not often what they seem, congruity and steadiness cannot be over emphasized. Recommendation letters should reflect a personal statement and extracurricular activities should focus more on quality over quantity.

Let me break it down further. When you ask a teacher to write a reference letter, he or she should be able to write about your character and work ethic, not restate your resume. As mentioned earlier, your essay should be in a voice reflecting your passions and strengths. Do not be tempted to fill in every extracurricular space. A couple of quality activities, whether they are jobs, volunteering, sports, or other interests, done over the course of time, can speak loudly about a student's drive, values and staying power.

On the subject of a resume, by all means include one. It can amplify certain activities with details not listed elsewhere. However the general rule is that no one in high school, no matter how accomplished, should have a resume longer than a page. This is good advice through your twenties and thirties as well. There is strength in concise writing, and it's more likely to be read when it's to the point.

Making contact with a prospective college is vitally important because it shows sincere interest. Often, it can be the deciding factor. If there are two students who present similar applications, it will inevitably come down to who has shown the most care and attention to their school. Colleges realize that while the Common Application has made applying more accessible, students still randomly send in applications. They want students who truly want to be on their campus!

Even though Facebook and email may be passé, they are still mediums for how colleges interact with students. Sign up for their Facebook page and Twitter feeds. Introduce yourself to the regional representative through email, and follow up with a thank you note for their time if you met them in person at a school visit, fair, or campus tour. This person will most likely be reading your application, and conversations often are entered into the student's record. The inverse is true that the more interest you show in a college, the more they will be interested in you. Obviously then, use your best grammar and spelling. Visit campuses when you can and interview if given the opportunity.

If you meet with an admissions representative, treat it like a job interview. This means dressing appropriately, even if it seems more conservative than what you would normally wear. Show your interest by researching the school and demonstrating how you might fit in. Ask good questions (something that is not listed on the website is a good place to start). Do not chew gum or leave your phone on. Arrive early. Most importantly, be yourself. Answer questions honestly instead of trying to figure out what the interviewer might want to hear. Always follow up with a thank you note (which will subsequently go into your file). These suggestions might seem obvious, but I often hear stories about fantastic students who made sloppy impressions. That being said, take care not to go overboard. Don't be a pest. Do not send gifts. When a phone call is made, it should always be from you and not your parent.

With the application itself, carefully follow directions. Some questions may not apply to you and therefore do not require an answer. If something seems unclear, ask someone who knows. Seek out a parent, teacher or counselor to proofread. Paying careful attention to details will always be worth the time you invest.

In my next article, I will be addressing the numerous questions that arise in the application process. If there's a question on your mind, please email me and I'll include it anonymously.

FOR THE RECORD

Something to sleep on Local school systems have been contemplating switching high school start times for many years. Few have actually made the move, for many reasons.

GREGORY MATHIS

Messing once again with the time this weekend is sure to have an impact – at least short term – on our biological clocks. That's especially true if you're a teenager (or the parent of a teenager!).

With Daylight Saving Time ending Sunday, Nov. 3 at 2 a.m., "falling back" one hour earlier could have an alarming effect on the 14-year-old in our house.

It's a struggle now to get him to go to bed, with all devices off and the lights out, and to sleep. As difficult as the nighttime process is, it's even more of an ordeal getting him up and out the door for high school at 6:30 a.m.

Parents have been hearing the excuses for years, but there is scientific credence to claims from teens for not being able to fall asleep at a reasonable hour or rise from deep slumber in the a.m.

There is compelling research, including studies done by the National Sleep Foundation, to support those claims.

Back in 2003, I wrote a story about this issue and spoke to Kyla Wahlstrom, who had been studying sleep patterns and how they related to classroom behavior and success. Wahlstrom, a research associate at the University of Minnesota at the time of the interview, said, "A teenager's biorhythms make them basically incapable of falling asleep before 10 p.m. And biologically, they're in sleep mode until about 8 a.m."

She talked about a school system in nearby Edina, Minn., that decided to move the high school start time to 8:30 a.m. Her research showed students were more awake and more alert in class. Test scores and grades improved dramatically, prompting the Minneapolis School System to adopt an 8:40 a.m. start time for its high schools.

Local school systems have been contemplating switching high school start times for many years. Few have actually made the move, for many reasons.

First, changing the high school time means changing other school starting times. One model recommended elementary schools starting earliest, followed by the middle school, then high school. For busing reasons, there needs to be some time between the various levels because many systems share the same buses for all schools.

There are also social and non-academic reasons working against such a drastic shift in philosophy. Older students are sometimes counted on to watch younger siblings after school. High school students might have work schedules to consider or sports commitments. In terms of the athletics side of things, it could be difficult scheduling games against schools with earlier start times.

The idea of rearranging schedules and moving start times seems to have lost some momentum in recent years, but it's a concept worth putting back on the table. We are placing increased demands on students of all ages to raise standards, but especially high school students who have a lot on their plates in the classroom, sports, extra-curricular activities, as well as greater expectations and responsibilities outside of school.

Sleep is important.

Isn't it time to give every student – high school students in particular – every opportunity to succeed?

TOWN MANAGER SEARCH

Selectmen to conduct interviews

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The selectmen officially launched the search for a permanent town manager in July. Cohasset currently has an Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, who has served in the role since March 2012 following the removal of Michael Coughlin.

If all goes according to plan, Cohasset could hire a Town Manager this month.

The Board of Selectmen set aside dates to interview candidates for the town manager job. The board plans to interview five candidates across two nights — Tuesday, Nov. 19 and Wednesday, Nov. 20.

The selectmen officially launched the search for a permanent town manager in July. Cohasset currently has an Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, who has served in the role since March 2012 following the removal of Michael Coughlin. Coughlin was fired after only six months on the job.

Milanoski's contract with the town is up on Dec. 31, 2013.

The selectmen amended the agenda during their Tuesday night meeting to discuss a memo from the UMass Collins Center, the consulting firm the selectmen hired to conduct the town manager search. The firm has been winnowing down candidates and should have five finalists to present to the board for interview.

The consultants asked the selectmen to schedule a date to meet with the board and discuss procedures and guidelines for the candidate interviews. The selectmen decided on Nov. 13 starting at 7 p.m. and will devote the entire meeting to the town manager search.

Selectman Steve Gaumer said that the nature of the center's memo said that the firm is "ready to go" to "make a presentation of the candidates."

However, Gaumer said he would like the board to meet with the consultants before the final candidates are presented.

The board discussed whether to interview the candidates on weeknights or on a Saturday in November. The interview process is an eight-hour commitment, according to the board.

Gaumer said he was concerned their minds would be "mush" after a long day of back-to-back interviews, which wouldn't be fair to candidates interviewing at the end of the day.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy mentioned that during the last town manager search, candidates were interviewed on consecutive nights.

The board discussed having the interviews on Monday, Nov. 18 and Tuesday the 19th, but Kennedy pointed out that the Community Preservation Committee has its annual public hearing scheduled for the 18th.

WARRANT

fine with the "very specific" petition asking for a STM, but thought that any other articles should have been presented to the selectmen before approving and closing the warrant.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said that much of the fault lies with the board.

"We failed by not having a substantive discussion a few months ago on what articles might be coming forward," said Kennedy. "But that ship has sailed. We do have a town meeting, like it or not. We might as well take care of administrative things."

Milanoski said that the sewer commission has not yet had a chance to meet, but that he would get the details to the selectmen. The acting town manager added that according to Town Counsel, exact dollar figures should be left out of the warrant; otherwise, "Town meeting loses the chance to adjust upward" if necessary, Milanoski explained.

Meanwhile, Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio came to the selectmen's meeting during the discussion to explain what the water department's article was about. He said that one of the items is an expenditure of $45,000 for the water plant operator to hire a new staff member to help the plant be more efficient.

"In late September, they came to us and said they were overburdening their staff," said DeCaprio, adding that the operator said having a half full-time equivalent employee would solve the problem, but necessitated amending the operator contract. "We didn't do anything because I didn't know how to fund it," said DeCaprio.

The Advisory Committee approved a reserve fund transfer to fund the expenditure, however, DeCaprio said this money would be more appropriately expended by the ratepayers, not the taxpayers.

DeCaprio explained that up till last week, the water commission had "operated under the assumption there wasn't going to be a special town meeting," and were "trying to figure out a way to get our needs addressed."

Gaumer thanked DeCaprio for the explanation.

Ultimately, the selectmen voted 5-0 to accept the articles and close the warrant, acknowledging that if details aren't fleshed out in time for the STM, articles can always be postponed indefinitely on the town meeting floor.

Petition failed to launch

Another citizen's petition for the Special Town Meeting was filed with the Town Clerk's office this week, but failed to get off the ground, falling short of the required 100 certified signatures.

John McSheffrey was the lead petitioner behind a call for the Board of Selectmen to postpone hiring a permanent town manager and police chief. He collected 108 signatures, however 12 were rejected and were not certified.

The deadline to submit a petition was Tuesday, Oct. 29, seven days after the STM warrant was opened.

The reasoning behind the request, according to McSheffrey, is that Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's contract expires in Dec. 2013, and as of the end of October, not a single candidate has been interviewed.

The selectmen set aside two dates in November – Tuesday the 19th and Wednesday the 20th – to interview final candidates for the town manager job.

The petitioners feel the board is rushing the process.

The petition states, "The well documented and highly publicized behavior of the existing Board of Selectmen limits the towns [sic] ability to attract a proper pool of candidates. Additional time is required to allow the Board to correct the issues at hand and to ensure that they do not repeat the costly mistakes associated with hasty hiring practices."

McSheffrey elaborated on this in an email, explaining that he doubts the town will attract top candidates for the town manager job.

"Just in the past few months, the Board has ignored outside expert opinions regarding the performance of Acting Police Chief Quigley, a decision that will cost the town money. The Board has opted to ignore the advice of an adviser that they hired who basically informed them that given the contentiousness of the Board the town will either get inadequate candidates or will have to overpay for a qualified candidate in the their search for a new Town Manager; all of which has or will be costing the town money."

McSheffrey said the inspiration for the petition came from two sources, one of whom stated that Milanoski has achieved great financial strides for the town and "has evolved into the best town manager this town has seen."

The second reason was that McSheffrey found himself "appalled" by recent behavior of some selectmen regarding the Cohasset Triathlon. McSheffrey said he felt the board treated Triathlon organizer and director Bill Burnett rudely.

"That made me think that it doesn't matter who the Police Chief or Town Manager is, these folks treat everyone with the same level of disrespect," said McSheffrey. "Simply put, the continued unprofessional behavior exhibited by some of our elected officials would have had them fired in the private sector a long time ago."

McSheffrey apologized that the petition failed. "This is the first time ever that I have tried something like this and I am truly sorry that I didn't know how to properly go about it. I had some really good people helping me; moms and dads who are tired of our town's reputation being dragged down. Four votes short is a tough thing to swallow and I apologize that I missed the mark because it was a sound proposal based on saving Cohasset money." would include the back portion of the building.

Mary Lou Lawrence, one of the library trustees, attended Tuesday's selectmen to discuss the incident with Our World. None of the museum staff were present at the meeting.

Lawrence explained that the library staff has had issues in setting up for their events in the Our World space.

"When the program committee goes in there to rearrange things, they're left in a way that we can't set up chairs," said Lawrence, adding that something broke during the clean-up last week, which was a "pure accident."

"There was a lot of anger because that happened," the library trustee added. "I offered to do what I can to fix it, but the problem is — can we go in there and move things? We want to be good neighbors; there's no reason we can't."

Selectman Steve Gaumer said he would need to see a copy of the lease to make a judgment call. Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said she recalled that the lease contains "some information about sharing" the space.

Lawrence said, "The lease is very clear."

Selectman Karen Quigley, who had attended a library trustee meeting and was familiar with the dispute with Our World, said, "This does not need to be something we can't work out in a neighborly manner."

Kennedy volunteered to help buffer the situation. "I've got professional experience in volunteer resources," she said. "We've got to mobilize and make something happen."

The selectmen vice-chair added that if the library needed a couple of teenagers to help move chairs on Sunday, she could help with that.

Milanoski said he would like the selectmen to schedule a meeting and have both the library trustees and Our World staff in to discuss the issues, and "see if there's a resolution you as the landlord can come up with."

Selectmen chair Fred Koed wondered if the board should step in just yet, asking Milanoski to help the two sides reach a solution.

Milanoski said that there comes a point, "when items can't be resolved on the lower level, the board of selectmen should get involved."

However, he said he would try to work with the parties to ensure that this Sunday's Author Talk event goes off without a hitch.

"I'm confident we can make this weekend work. I will take the initiative," said Milanoski.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local senators on two roll calls from the week of October 21-25. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

15-DAY LEAVE FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE VICTIMS (S 1892)

Senate approved 35-0, and sent to the House a bill that would require employers with 50 or more employees to allow workers who are victims of domestic violence, stalking or sexual assault to take a paid or unpaid annual 15-day leave of absence to address court, housing, health and other issues arising from the incident. Another key provision would prohibit the use of an "accord and satisfaction" agreement in domestic violence cases. These agreements allow the courts to dismiss a domestic violence charge over the prosecutor's objection, if the victim acknowledges in writing that he or she has signed an out-of-court private agreement with the offender.

Supporters said it is time to ensure that victims don't have to choose between dealing with problems from their assault and losing their jobs because of excess absences. They noted that Massachusetts is the only state that still allows "accord and satisfaction" agreements and argued banning these would protect victims from being victimized again by being coerced into signing one.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

MAKE MATERNITY LEAVE GENDER NEUTRAL (S 685)

Senate 35-0, approved and sent to the House a bill that would change the state's female-only maternity leave law to a gender-neutral one. The law gives parents of a newborn or adopted child eight weeks off, with or without pay at the discretion of the employer, and the right to return to their job after that period.

Supporters said this would bring this law into the current century. They noted it is outrageous that coverage is currently reserved for women.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

POSSIBLE BAY STATE HOSTING OF 2024 OLYMPICS (S 1840) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick a measure creating an 11-member commission to study the feasibility of Massachusetts hosting the Summer Olympic Games in 2024. Supporters say this is a great opportunity that should be explored because it would shine a spotlight on Massachusetts and pump hundreds of million of dollars into the economy. Opponents say this is a misguided effort that will result in a gigantic boondoggle costing taxpayers millions of dollars.

REGULATE INTERPRETERS (S 163) - The Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure Committee held a hearing on a bill requiring all persons providing interpreting or oral transliterating services for the deaf be licensed by Massachusetts Commission for the Deaf & Hard of Hearing. Supporters say this important service is currently unregulated and argued the bill will help ensure that interpreters are qualified.

DONATE LEFTOVER FOOD (H 1504) - A bill allowing restaurants to donate their edible leftover cooked food and nonperishable food to local food pantries and shelters was on the Judiciary Committee's agenda. The measure gives the restaurant a tax credit or deduction for the donation and also protects it from liability if a person is harmed by eating the food. Supporters say that many restaurants want to donate the food but are discouraged by the threat of possible lawsuits if a person gets sick.

PARENTS LIABLE FOR BULLYING BY THEIR CHILDREN (S 635) - The Judiciary Committee's agenda included a bill that would make parents of a minor over seven but under 18 year of age civilly liable for paying up to $5,000 for damages resulting from their child's bullying of someone.

ADS ON SCHOOL BUSES (H 506) - The Education Committee is considering a proposal that would create a commission to study the feasibility of permitting private sector advertising on city and town school buses and state websites to generate revenue.

Cohasset recognized for great financial reporting

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The town of Cohasset recently received accolades from the Government Finance Officers Association of the U.S. and Canada (GFOA) for its comprehensive annual financial report (CAFR).

According to a GFOA press release, "The Certificate of Achievement for Excellence in Financial Reporting is the highest form of recognition in governmental accounting and financial reporting and its attainment represents a significant accomplishment of a government and its management."

GFOA is a non-profit professional association serving approximately 17,500 government finance professionals with offices in Chicago and Washington, D.C.

According to GFOA, Cohasset's CAFR was judged by an impartial panel "to meet the high standards of the program including demonstrating a constructive 'spirit of disclosure' to clearly communicate its financial story and motivate potential users and user groups to read the CAFR."

"This award is the capstone of Cohasset's financial turnaround as the fourth independent expert to recognize Cohasset's financial team's transformation of its finances over the last 20 months," Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained in an email. This includes financial service company Standard & Poors upgrading the town's bond rating to AA+ with positive outlook, firm Powers and Sullivan's recent audit, and the state Department of Revenue's Management Review of Cohasset.

"It's just another milestone in our economic and our financial transformation of Cohasset finances following the policies Town Meeting voted for," Milanoski said during a phone call.

The acting town manager is proud of the town's earning this achievement, particularly in regards to the town's finance department.

"What I'm most proud of is our dedicated professional finance team we assembled to help grab the tiller of this ship and steer Cohasset into financially stable waters," said Milanoski, citing the direct assistance of Finance Director/Town Accountant Mary Gallagher, former Treasurer Collector Jane Lepardo, and the new Treasurer Collector, Paula Linhares, along with support staff in each department.

While Milanoski acknowledged that, "much has been accomplished" in terms of Cohasset's finances, "there is more work to do to meet Town Meeting's Financial Objectives."

Finance Director Mary Gallagher said that receiving the GFOA award is "a big achievement."

"We finally got it done," said Gallagher. "It helps with the bond rating and shows you take the finances seriously."

The town's CAFR is "a nice thing to have," the finance director added. "It's great for the taxpayers and anyone who wants to read it."

Cohasset's CAFR for Fiscal Year 2012 is available to read online on the town's website (www.cohassetmass.org), accessible by selecting "town government," then the town manager's home page under "department forms and documents."

While the CAFR contains "a lot of numbers," said Gallagher, there is also a narrative.

Alcohol enforcement agents

Town appointed police officers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When there's a noise complaint or a liquor license violation, an alcohol enforcement agent will likely be on the scene.

Cohasset's ranking police officers are also enforcement agents for the liquor licenses held by establishments in town.

The agents are allowed "to conduct announced and unannounced inspections as well as educate business owners," said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Last week the Board of Selectmen voted to authorize Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon to investigate a recent noise complaint at the Red Lion Inn, designating him an enforcement agent during their Tuesday, Oct. 22 meeting.

However, this week Milanoski said this vote was unnecessary. The town already has licensing agents — all of the police department's ranking officers (the sergeants, detectives and lieutenants).

Agents investigate liquor license violations and report to the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, according to Town Counsel Paul DeRensis.

DeRensis urged the board to appoint an agent following an Oct. 3 noise complaint against the Red Lion Inn by Michael and Rowena Karp, who live near the establishment. The Karps said that the Inn hosted a noisy outdoor function, which was in violation of its entertainment license with the town. Per the license, any noise from events is supposed to be "inaudible." The Inn is also prohibited from serving alcohol outside.

The Board of Selectmen wanted clarity from Town Counsel on whether a noise violation was in the same classification as a liquor violation, wondering if the entertainment and liquor licenses are separate.

DeRensis explained that an agent would investigate any type of complaint and file a report. An agent must also be proactive.

"The role of the agent is not to sit around at his desk and wait for a complaint to come in," said DeRensis. "He should be making random checks on his own."

"If there are grounds to go forward" with a complaint, the selectmen can vote to hold a public hearing, and then send the report with the notice of the hearing to the establishment that committed the violation, said DeRensis. The owners would be asked to participate in the hearing and answer questions.

DeRensis told the selectmen what their role in the hearing is. "You sit as judges, not witnesses," he explained, "and you make a decision — was the license violated or not? If so, you decide on what sanction or penalty" should be enacted.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed suggested the board take this under advisement. Milanoski suggested they appoint Detective Lennon as the enforcement agent and have him investigate the complaint. The acting town manager further suggested that the board appoint several more enforcement agents at a future meeting.

However, Milanoski said this week that he learned after Tuesday night's meeting – and the vote – that all of the ranking police officers are already considered enforcement agents.

"I found out the town had already voted three or four years ago [in 2009] to have all the sergeants, lieutenants and detectives named as the licensing agents," the acting town manager said. "They are already there," meaning that Lennon is "already appointed permanently."

In May 2009, the selectmen voted unanimously to designate the police lieutenants, sergeants and detectives as "agents of the licensing board," as recommended by then Police Chief James Hussey and the town manager at the time, Bill Griffin.

As far as checking up on local establishments' licenses, "They have been doing it," Milanoski said, adding that given recent complaints, more frequent checks are likely in order. "Certainly from the complaints coming in, they will have to step up."

Red Lion Inn response

Gerd Ordelheide, owner of the Red Lion Inn, wrote a letter in response to the Oct. 3 complaint that neighbors Michael and Rowena Karp submitted to the Board of Selectmen.

Ordelheide said in his letter that this has been an ongoing complaint "since I built the property in 1998."

Ordelheide defended himself against the noise complaint in particular, saying that he hired Image Acoustics of Cohasset to install noise monitoring devices along the property line, which reportedly revealed the inn's noise level "to be no more than normal traffic noise on Main Street," the owner said.

Ordelheide added that he has accommodated the neighbors in other ways by planting trees along the property line at their request, and also hiring police detail during functions.

The owner further defended the value of his business.

"When I acquired the Red Lion the downtown was virtually dead. A revitalization committee was created. I then spend [sic] close to 10 million to revitalize the Red Lion and with it the downtown area. Today business owners in town are asking me how many weddings we have because it helps them as well," said Ordelheide.

The Karps could not be reached for comment by press time.

BRIEFLY

OPEB is on the 'radar'

Cohasset has a committee dedicated to identifying issues and brainstorming solutions to tackle the town's outstanding liability to fund Other Post-Employee Benefits (OPEB) for municipal employees, including retiree medical benefits plans.

Cohasset is on the hook to fund $38 million in OPEB, a number that increases each year.

The committee convened Monday, Oct. 28 and Selectman Steve Gaumer attended. Gaumer reported to his fellow selectmen Tuesday night that he found the meeting "extraordinarily helpful," and asked chairman Fred Koed to put the OPEB committee on a future selectmen agenda.

Gaumer asked that this matter be discussed before the end of the year.

"It needs to be dealt with in this budget cycle," said Gaumer, adding that the OPEB committee has "done yeoman's work" studying the issue.

Koed agreed, saying, "It's definitely on our radar."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski asked last week to have the OPEB committee placed on the Tues., Oct. 29 agenda but the item was absent.

The boys soccer team will take the field right after the football game with a 6 p.m. start against Nantucket, while the No. 17 seeded girls take to the road to face No. 16 seeded Joseph Case today at 3 p.m. Case is at 70 School Street in Swansea.

The No. 4 seeded field hockey team (13-3-2) opened yesterday at home against No. 13 Dedham.

On the cross country trails, congratulations go to Julien Geyer and Vivien Littlejohn for strong finishes at the South Shore League Championships at Mashpee.

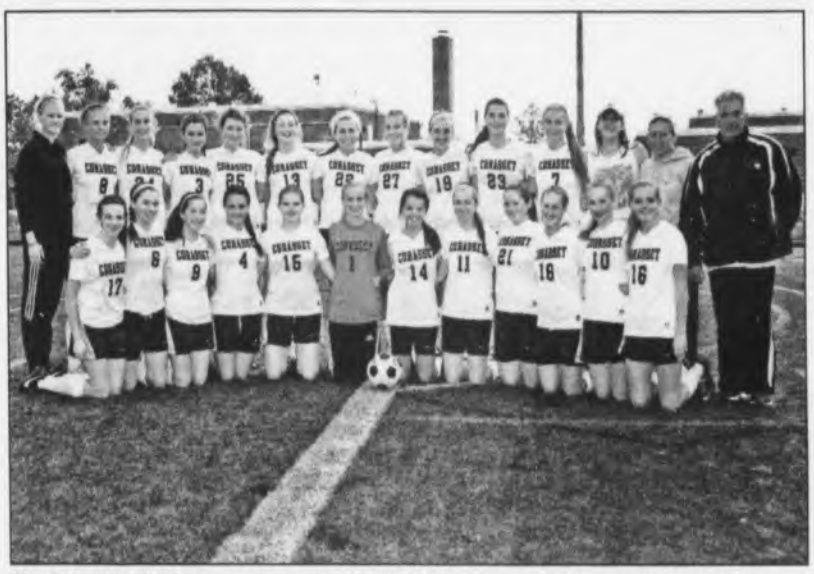
GIRLS SOCCER

Exciting times



Girls qualify on last day

The Cohasset Mariner

The last few weeks of the regular season have been to say the least, exciting for the Cohasset girls soccer team as they chased an invitation to the MIAA Division 4 South Sectional Tournament.

"So the last couple weeks have been very exciting in "girls soccer world", said longtime Cohasset coach Deb Beal. "With four games remaining and an overall record of 4-7-3 we needed to win three and tie one in order to qualify for post season. We faced Rockland first. We had lost to them the first time around in the last

League champions

Skippers steamroll Mashpee

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

So far this season, the Cohasset football team has been running roughshod over most opponents, with the one exception of a loss to a powerful Abington squad.

Still, when Mashpee came to town last Friday night for a winner-take-all South Shore League showdown, the intensity and atmosphere of a League Championship were evident.

Then the Skippers went to work to claim the title and a home playoff game Saturday at 3 p.m. against Nantucket with a convincing 42-0 victory that was as close as the score indicated.

Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said he knew his team had every chance to win.

"We weren't surprised that we won, but we were very pleased that we won so convincingly," he said. "The defense was awesome."

Afanasiw pointed out some of the keys to the win and the dominance of his team's defense.

Through 3 1/2 quarters, Mashpee had three first downs, one of which was a

Ready to win

Boys host Archies

Cohasset boys soccer coach Jim Willis knows the postseason is a time when anything can happen and usually does.

With that in mind, Willis is preparing his team for their MIAA Div/ 4 South Sectional opener against Archbishop Williams at home, Saturday at 6 p.m.

"It's a rematch of a game that ended 0-0 a couple of weeks ago," Willis said about the opener. "

In that game, Cohasset was battling the after-effects of a huge and emotional 2-1 win over Carver the day before and were admittedly running on fumes.

This time, the No. 5 seeded Skippers (13-4-2) should be well rested, but Willis knows his team will be in a battle that can go to either side.

"Archie's has struggled in their last couple of games," Willis said. "The last week a number of teams jumped them (in the standings for seeds). They lost to Cardinal Spellman and Nantucket. They're a very good team that plays in a very good league."

Willis doesn't mind the

* Anthony Inferrera was a great pitcher especially when he came in cold to finish an inning in each of the playoff games.

* Justin Appleby also had a great season as a pitcher with only 2 walks and as a key catcher for the team.

* Cam Albanese was a solid pitcher and hit .609 with 14 hits.

tough early draw.

"We would have to play someone like them eventually," he said.

If Cohasset wins, they will face either Carver or Holbrook.

Carver would be on the road, while Holbrook would be a home game.

In the final weeks of the regular season, Cohasset played well.

"We beat Monomoy 5-0 at Monomoy," Willis said. Then we beat Mashpee 6-0.

Before that, we beat Rockland 3-0.

Willis has an interesting memory to take into the opener.

"We're playing a year to the day that we went PK with Monomoy last year," Willis said.

Before the playoffs started, Cohasset's Teddy Craven, Par Federle, Ryan McKeon and Joe Buckley were named South Shore League All-Stars. Buckley and Federle were also named to the All-Eastern Mass. team.

That team picks the top players in leagues around the state. For the South Shore League, the top 7 players in the South Shore League.

Willis is excited.

"Tournament time is always a fun time of year," he said. "Everyone around the school is feeling good. The kids are pumped."

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week 8: Teams end regular season with a bang

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

What a season! It's hard to believe it's come to a close, the regular season that is. For all 12 teams in the rankings this week, as well as a handful on the bubble, their seasons continue with the upcoming South Sectional tournament. Any team, from 1-6 on either side, has a legitimate chance at winning a Sectional and even state title, but the frontrunners without a doubt are the Silver Lake boys and Duxbury girls, both ranked No. 1 again this week.

The rankings for week 8 see a few changes on both sides. One boys' teams drops back down to the bubble, opening up the door for an Inside the 6 returnee. There were a few changes in the boys' rankings. For the girls, the top two remain the same, but there was some big movement from there on out, and one team makes its Inside the 6 debut.

Here are the rankings based on games played from Oct. 21-27.

Boys

1. Silver Lake – Need anymore proof that Silver Lake, in my opinion, is the best team in the state? Look at the 5-1 win over Catholic Conference champs St. John's Prep, a team that lost only once to that point and scored 52 goals in 16 games. The Lakers then followed it up with 2-0 wins over both Pembroke and Marshfield, two tournament-bound teams, to finish 17-0-1.

2. Hingham – The Harbormen fell, 2-0, to B.C. High, one of the best teams in the state, but came right back to return to the win column, scoring a 3-1 win at Atlantic Coast League giants Sandwich. Hingham finished the regular season at 13-3-2 and could easily go deep into the playoffs.

3. Norwell – The Clippers climb to their highest ranking this season after winning their 13th game in a row, including a South Shore League title clinching victory over East Bridgewater. They've only allowed five goals during their current streak. Last week also produced a 5-0 win over Monomoy and 2-1 victory against Abington. The 15-2-1 Clippers closed out the regular season Monday at Hull.

4. Duxbury – The Dragons were only held to one goal or less four times coming into their match against Marshfield, and that included games against Silver Lake (twice) and Hingham, but the Rams managed to contain the Dragons in a 1-1 draw. Duxbury did, however, start the week with a 2-0 win vs. Plymouth North and came into the week at 11-5-1 with a game Monday at Falmouth.

5. Weymouth – Talk about a turnaround. Weymouth's abysmal start seems like ancient history now. The Wildcats drew, 0-0, with first-place Needham, got edged by a strong Brookline side, but beat B.C. High, 1-0, handing the Eagles just their third loss of the season. Weymouth improved to 7-4-5, quite possibly the most dangerous seven-win team in the region.

6. Braintree – The 9-8-2 Wamps return to the top six after quite a performance last week. Before falling, 4-0, to top-of-the-table Needham, the Wamps beat a dangerous Framingham team, 2-1, a team that had only three losses up to that point.

On the bubble: Marshfield, Pembroke, Cohasset

Week 7 rankings: 1. Silver Lake; 2. Hingham; 3. Duxbury; 4. Norwell; 5. Pembroke; 6. Weymouth

Girls

1. Duxbury – The Dragons keep on keeping on. They extended their unbeaten streak to 11 with a 3-2 win over Plymouth North and 1-0 victory at Plymouth South. The Dragons had Carver at home Monday, and came into that match with a 13-1-3 record. This team is dangerous, with an attacking presence and stingy back line and should play well into November.

2. Scituate – The Sailors had a light week, but made the most of it, picking up a convincing win over rivals Hingham. The 7-3 thumping sent Scituate's record to 15-1-2, further cementing this team as one of the best in school history. Expect a long tournament run from the Sailors.

3. Norwell – The Clippers had the busiest week of them all, and despite four games in five days, they came away with three wins and a tough loss to Marshfield, a team they beat 5-2 earlier this season. The Clippers did, however, score a massive, 1-0, win over East Bridgewater, the South Shore League leaders. It's a team Norwell hasn't beat in some time. They also shut out Monomoy and Abington and had a 13-5-1 record coming into this week.

4. Marshfield – What can you say about the Rams? This team is on an absolute tear, going 5-0-2 in their last seven and outscoring their opponents, 12-1, in the process. A 4-0 win over Dennis-Yarmouth last week sealed the Atlantic Coast League title (9-0-3 league record). The Rams also avenged an early season loss to Norwell, beating the Clippers, 1-0. They also beat Silver Lake, 4-0, and had an 11-4-4 record coming into their season finale Monday vs. Whitman-Hanson.

5. Silver Lake – A peculiar drop from No. 3 to No. 5 you say? Well, it's by no fault of the Lakers, who came back to draw with Plymouth North, lost to Marshfield, and beat B-R last week. The reason for the fall: Norwell and Marshfield had better weeks. The Lakers, who finished 8-3-6, will certainly make some noise in the playoffs. Never count this team out.

6. Pembroke - A debut in the top six may seem like a head-scratcher to some, seeing that the Titans went 0-5 to start the season. But these girls are on a tear, going 3-1-3 in their last seven, the only loss coming to Scituate during that stretch, one that saw the Titans draw with a solid Plymouth South side and beat Fontbonne, 3-1, to end the regular season. The Titans qualified for postseason play by finishing second in the Patriot League Fisher Division and have a 6-9-5 overall record.

On the bubble: Hingham, Plymouth South, Plymouth North

Week 7 rankings: 1. Duxbury; 2. Scituate; 3. Silver Lake; 4. Norwell; 5. Marshfield; 6. Hingham

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. GIRLS SOCCER minute of the game. Last Monday we played a tough game against them and came home with our only allotted tie."

That left Cohasset needing to run the table.

"Next three we had to win," Beal said. "We hosted Monomoy who we beat 4-0, then a non league with Martha's Vineyard who we beat 4-0 and finally we traveled to Mashpee where we rallied back from an early Mashpee goal and won 2-1. With that streak we qualified for the first time since 2010.

Cohasset open the playoffs today at 3 p.m. at Joseph Case in Swansea.

"The girls are very excited and I'm so proud of them for taking this so seriously and really investing in it. As you know it takes every team member working towards a common goal to achieve it. These girls should proud of their hard work and dedication."

Beal said she and her staff had to make some changes to make things work.

"To get to where we are has taken quite a bit of rearranging and juggling of players," she said. "Where we struggled most of the season was with scoring. As the season drew closer to the end and the stakes rose higher to qualify we had to change some things to improve our chances."

Four freshman were called up to varsity, Nikki Federle, Sophie Matthews, Dulaney Bernstein and Audrey Hart to hopefully help Cohasset find the back of the net.

"It was a move that has made all the difference," Beal said. "Nikki Federle has two goals, Sophie Matthews has two goals and because of their skills up front it's allowing our midfielders to become a little more aggressive and has led to numerous goals by Emmy McGoldrick, Shea Kearney and Kerry Dunn."

Beal likes the way the team looks for the future and the present.

"This is a very talented team, we have all the right pieces in the program and now we can take the time to sort them out and create the best team we can," she said. "I have been impressed with the girls and their work ethic. They have a lot fun but they work hard."

Beal also credits her staff for the team's fortunes.

"My coaching staff has been great, all four of us working to make each kid aware of their role and keeping them all working hard," she said. "Sue Seem coaches the Junior Varsity team and often helps out with the varsity kids. George Cabozzi works primarily with the goalkeepers who are playing great and former CHS player Torey Hart has joined us and has brought in many fresh ideas and drills."

In the end, the girls have brought something special to the table.

"There's excitement among the girls and now we just take each day as it comes and we play hard," Beal said. "We've got nothing to lose."

penalty until the younger kids got it.

Mashpee amassed negative yards for their first four possessions.

Danny Tangherlini had a huge interception return for a touchdown late in the second quarter that opened up the floodgates.

Afanasiw said the keys to the win were simple.

"The kids had a great week of preparation," he said. "Our scout teams do a great job running the opposing teams offenses and defenses, and at times they give us better looks than we'll face on game day. They (Cohasset as a team) really wanted to lock up a League Title. They were in eighth grade the last time it happened."

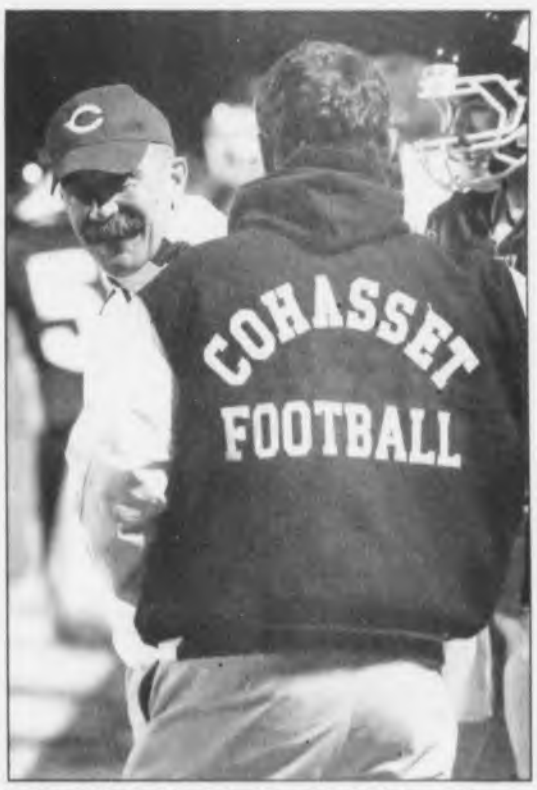
As for Nantucket, Afanasiw mentioned several things his team will face.

"They are HUGE. Six kids over 300 lbs, 17 kids 6' tall or more," he said. "I am not sure what they feed them on the island, but it's working."

Heading into Saturday's game, Afanasiw is pleased with the way the team has been working.

"We have had a good couple of days practice and are still working on some things," he said. "Nantucket throws a lot of different formations at a team, so recognition and alignment will be vital to being in position to make plays."

Afanasiw also has to plan for playing the big line.



"We've got to try and move those big bodies," he said "Hopefully our team speed will win the day.

The Skippers are fired up.

"The kids are quite excited about the opportunity staring them in the face, but at the same time they are very poised and focused," he said. "It really is a great group, and I've had some wonderful ones in my short tenure here. They are a pleasure to work with."

Boeing, Boeing...

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is performing 2008 Tony Award-winning farce "Boeing Boeing" from Friday, Nov. 1 through Sunday, Nov. 10 at the Town Hall Theater.

The play features a cast of both CDC veterans and newcomers.

"Boeing Boeing" is a classic farce penned by French playwright Mark Camoletti. It was first staged in London in 1962, where it ran for seven years. The show is set in the '60s in the flat of a swinging American bachelor. The show is suggested for audience members age 13 and up.

"Boeing Boeing" is directed by Bill Gardiner and features an ensemble cast that includes Jessica Corey, Sinclair Dean, Jonathan Markella, Allison Porter, Lisa Pratt, and Mike Whalen. Ella Baumgarten is the production stage manager.

Performances take place Fridays and Saturdays, Nov. 1, 2, 8, and 9 at 7:30 p.m. and Sundays Nov. 3 and 10 at 2 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Ave. Tickets are $20 and can be purchased at Paperscapes and Buttonwood Books, or reserve via 617-922-0280. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior at the box office.

Variety show performers provide a preview of all the fun expected in Cabaret 2013. PHOTOS BY K.A. MACDONALD

Cohasset Cabaret 2013 presents 'Curtain's Up'

The seventh production of the Cohasset Cabaret will take place on Friday, Nov. 8, Saturday, Nov. 9 and a matinee on Sunday, Nov. 10 at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 129 South Main St. While most of the performers are over 21, the audience will be amazed at the talents of the two 10-year olds when they perform "Boy Meets Girl." Mike and Miranda will steal the show.

The performances will provide two hours of solid entertainment, musical hits from Broadway, Off Broadway, and popular songs from not so long ago. If the evening hours are not for you, go to the matinee.

Try your luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "Cabaret Style". There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks. Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry.

The performances will provide two hours of solid entertainment, musical hits from Broadway, Off Broadway, and popular songs from not so long ago. If the evening hours are not for you, go to the matinee.

The matinee performance will start at 1:30 p.m. and soft drinks and water will be served. Matinee tickets will cost $20.

Tickets are on sale now and the cost is $25. Tickets can be purchased at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office, 129 S. Main St. and the CEA office at the South Shore Community Center, 3 North Main St. or call 781-413-7540 for further information.

Alleged cocaine trafficker arrested

On Thursday (Oct. 24) Cohasset police detectives assigned to the Criminal Investigation Division (CID), members of the Boston Police Fugitive Apprehension Unit and members of the US Marshals Service arrested Enrique Camilo at an address in Hyde Park, pursuant to an arrest warrant issued from Suffolk Superior Court on March 29, 2013 for trafficking in cocaine over 200 grams.

Camilo was identified as the leader of a cocaine trafficking organization operating in Cohasset and across the South Shore and became the target of an extensive criminal investigation conducted by Cohasset Police CID, the Weymouth Police Drug Enforcement Unit, the Boston Police Special Investigations Unit and the US Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA).

On Oct. 18, 2012, following the issuance of a search warrant based on an affidavit submitted by Cohasset Police Det. Lt. Gregory Lennon, Cohasset police detectives working with members of the Weymouth Police, Boston Police and DEA, executed the search warrant at Camilo's residence in Roslindale during which 414 grams of cocaine and other evidence of drug distribution was seized.

On Oct. 23, 2012, a West Roxbury District Court arrest warrant was issued for Enrique Camilo for trafficking in cocaine over 200 grams.

On Oct. 28, 2012, Camilo was arrested at Logan International Airport pursuant to the arrest warrant as he was trying to flee the country to avoid prosecution.

On Nov. 6, 2012, Camilo was released from the Nashua Street Jail after one of his "business associates" posted $50,000 in cash bail.

On March 29, 2013, following an investigation by Cohasset police detectives and members of the Boston Police Drug Control Unit and DEA, the $50,000 cash bail posted for Camilo was seized as drug proceeds and a forfeiture action was initiated in Superior Court. The courts concurred with police in that the $50,000 cash was derived from drug proceeds and it was seized and distributed amongst the law enforcement agencies investigating Camilo.

In April 2013, Camilo defaulted at his next scheduled court appearance and became a fugitive. Police have been actively tracking him both inside and outside of the United States since April.

Now, following Camilo's arrest last week by Cohasset, Boston, and Federal Officers, he is being held on $1,000,000 cash bail. Cohasset Police Chief William Quigley praised the hard work by Detective Lieutenant Greg Lennon and others, saying, "this is a win-win, Mr. Camilo is back behind bars, we have his $50,000 bucks, three cars, and over 400 grams of cocaine. It doesn't get much better than that."

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 11, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Keep your feelings to yourself as you work through an awkward circumstance. Complaining is useless, and also unwise since your words could come back to haunt you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A sudden flash of Bovine practicality shows you how you might be able to turn your artistic pursuits into a profitable venture. A spouse or partner offers some sage advice.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be prepared with several "Plan Bs" that you might have to use as backups just in case you encounter some troublesome complications with your carefully constructed schedule.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might think you'll never have a free moment again with the demands of the workplace piling on. Cheer up. The pressure eases as holiday time nears. An old friend brings good news.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Leonine pride might make it difficult to offer an apology to a co-worker you unintentionally offended. But a quick and sincere "I'm sorry" could prevent problems down the line.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to tackle those backed-up chores that have kept you from moving into other and potentially more worthwhile projects. A personal matter needs your attention.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You usually have no problem rushing to the defense of someone you perceive as being treated unjustly. But perceptions could be deceiving this week. Check the facts before you act.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before you point fingers at who might be to blame for the unexpected change in your plans, take a few moments to reflect on how this turn of events might be a blessing in disguise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You seek out advice in the first part of the week. But be careful not to let counsel from others overshadow your own sense of perception. Things become clearer by the week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The trusted colleagues you relied on earlier continue to offer support with your project. But you take more control, and by the week's end, you should be in full command.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Rely on your practical side while exploring investment possibilities. Caution is still your watchword in these matters. Your social life takes a gratifying turn by the week's end.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An already confusing situation appears to grow murkier during the first part of the week. But it all starts to clear by the week's end. Plan to spend the weekend with someone special.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a passion for life that inspires others to follow your example. You could be a motivational speaker.

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Robert Merton designs line inspired by wife, sons

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The story of how a local fashion line was born begins in an unusual place — a hospital delivery room.

Robert Merton was on a decidedly non-fashionable path. Living in New York City, working in finance, he and his wife planned for things to stay that way until their first son, Archer, was born prematurely via an emergency c-section in 2004.

The couple decided that the city was not the ideal place to care for their son. Both left their jobs and relocated to a New York suburb before settling in Cohasset. It was during this hiatus from the finance world that Merton started painting, eventually turning his work into wearable art.

"I had always painted; it was a hobby," Merton revealed during an interview in his workshop — his dining room. "I did it because I enjoyed it."

The artist and designer said he used to just give his paintings away. When someone spotted one of his works hanging in a colleague's office, Merton was approached about selling his art. His colleague's client came to Merton's home and bought some

Candidates to be revealed next week

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Next week, candidates for the town manager position will be brought forward — but the Board of Selectmen interviewing them have yet to agree on an interview process.

The selectmen will interview five finalists between Monday, Nov. 18 and Wednesday, Nov. 20. The finalists are being selected by consultants from the UMass Collins Center that the board hired for $12,500 to $14,000 to conduct the town manager search.

Cohasset has had an acting town manager, resident Michael Milanoski, since March 2012. Milanoski replaced former town manager Michael Coughlin, who was removed from office after six months on the job. Coughlin is currently in litigation against the town citing wrongful termination.

It is as of yet unknown if Milanoski is among the finalists for the permanent position, although he has applied for the job.

During the Tuesday, Nov. 5 selectmen meeting, Selectman Steve Gaumer proposed a four week-long interview and selection process to his fellow board members that was met with some skepticism and reluctance by a few who thought he was trying to stall the process.

Gaumer suggested that in addition to interviews with the selectmen, which would occur in the first week of the process, the candidates would then interview with various town department groups and stakeholders, including public safety, finance, social services, the schools and advisory committee and capital budget chairs.

These secondary interviews would take place in weeks two and three of the process. Gaumer explained why he feels this part of the process is crucial before choosing who will be at the helm of Cohasset.

"I think we all agree that a successful town manager will need to develop working relationships with these groups in order to be an effective leader," Gaumer wrote in his proposal. "This phase of the evaluation process is intended to offer an opportunity to the other leaders in the community to... identify those candidates which may have the greatest likelihood prospering with the staff."

In week four, Gaumer proposed the selectmen

COMEDY CENTRAL:

CHS presents one-act plays

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As the song from "Singin' in the Rain" puts it, in show biz, you've got to "Make 'Em Laugh." That's exactly what the Cohasset High School drama club – recently renamed the Cohasset Theatre Company – intends to do in this month's production.

"LOL" (short for "laugh out loud"), a collection of five one-act plays, runs on Saturday, Nov. 23 and Sunday, Nov. 24 in the CHS auditorium (see sidebar for details), featuring many of the school's top performers, student directors and crew.

Senior Maggie Littlejohn, 17, who plays "Milton" in the short "Words, Words, Words," said that putting on a comedy is a happy departure from recent productions. "We used to do dark stuff, dramatic plays; now we're doing comedies. It's interesting because you get to try different things."

Sophomore Meghan Considine, 15, who plays as "Dawn" in "The Universal Language," said if you come to the show, "Expect to laugh. It's really unique, unlike anything I've seen before."

The production blends classic comedies by Anton Chekov with contemporary one-acts by David Ives that recently appeared on Broadway.

Drama club director Nicole Afanasiw said she chose these five funny shorts because she and Fine Arts Chair Stephanie

UMass Boston Graduate Showcase: Nov. 13

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

Of UMass Boston's more than 16,000 students, approximately one-fourth are enrolled in graduate programs, obtaining their doctoral degrees, master's degrees, or graduate certificates. Our graduate programs help students earn more money, find better jobs, prepare for their careers, deepen their studies, and enrich their understanding and experience.

UMass Boston's graduate programs are growing in recognition and funding: Recently, we received a five-year, $3.1 million Integrative Graduate Education and Research Traineeship (IGERT) grant from the National Science Foundation. This funding will allow eight doctoral candidates studying in a range of disciplines to collaborate on a transnational approach to solving global environmental issues. And early next year, UMass Boston will begin welcoming its inaugural class of students into the School for Global Inclusion and Social Development, the first graduate school in the world to focus on wellness and economic development from an international perspective. Graduates of this school will be qualified to lead nonprofits and work to create public policy for traditionally excluded populations, such as people with disabilities.

UMass Boston has a lot to offer prospective graduate students: 19 doctoral programs, with nine more forthcoming; 44 master's degree programs; and more than 40 graduate certificate programs. Our graduate students attend small seminars and lectures, conduct research with real-world applications, and work closely with some of the most recognizable names in their fields as advisors and instructors.

To learn more about the advantages of a UMass Boston graduate education, I invite prospective students and their guests to join us on campus on Wednesday, November 13, for our Graduate Studies Showcase, from 4 to 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Ballroom.

The Graduate Studies Showcase is a wonderful opportunity to meet faculty, students, staff, and financial aid representatives, and to find answers for any questions you may have about our offerings. To register, please visit www.umb.edu/gradshowcase, email bos.gadm@umb.edu, or call Enrollment Services at 617.287.6000.

Holiday Stroll is Dec. 14

Christmastime in Cohasset means it's time for the Chamber of Commerce's annual Holiday Stroll.

This year's stroll through Cohasset Village takes place on Saturday, Dec. 14 from 4 to 7 p.m.

Support local businesses and shop the Holiday Stroll.

MV ACCIDENT

Cohasset Police Sergeant Jeff Treanor inspects the 2009 Isuzu truck that was involved in the crash on Monday.

Cargo box ripped off truck

Late Monday afternoon (Nov. 4), Cohasset police responded to a reported single vehicle crash near the intersection of Route 3A and Pond Street. Arriving officers located a 2009 Isuzu box truck on the west side of Pond Street, about 100 yards from 3A and Pond Street, with the entire passenger side of the cargo box ripped off.

Officers spoke to a stunned driver, who was identified as Joseph Petisce, 30, from Riverside, Rhode Island. Petisce stated that he was operating the box truck, which is owned by Keystone Automotive Inc., from Sparks, Maryland. He stated that he took a wrong turn off of Route 3A and the top of his box truck was torn off by a tree hanging over the roadway in front of 220 Pond St.

A heavy-duty wrecker had to be called to the scene to dismantle parts of the truck box to make it safe for towing. The driver was uninjured and no citations were issued. The truck was listed at 12 feet 6 inches in height and the tree was hanging at about 10 feet from the roadway.

Cohasset Tree and Park Department was notified to check the tree, to determine if it needed to be cut back. The west side of Pond Street was closed to traffic for approximately 1 hour.

A wrecker operator from Express Towing uses a heavy duty saw to remove jagged metal from the side of the truck. COURTESY PHOTOS

POLICE BEAT

Ran out of cash at gas pump

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Pumped gas

A 63-year-old Hull man has to pay about $40 to the Mobil Mart for gasoline he pumped into his vehicle on Monday afternoon (Oct. 28) or face a larceny charge. Police said the attendant called after the man pumped $70 into his vehicle but only had $31 on him. The man told police he had tried to program the pump to automatically shut off at $30 but became distracted and by the time he realized it, $70 in gasoline had gone into his gas tank.

The man was identified and agreed to settle up with the Mobil Mart within 10 days or face being summonsed to court.

Leaf-blowers

Cohasset police detectives are investigating the apparent theft of four leaf-blowers valued at $400 each from a landscaping business in Cohasset near the Scituate line.

The 41-year-old Hingham man who owns the business reported on Monday (Oct. 28) finding that two landscaping trailers had been broken into and the leaf-blowers were gone, police said.

Police responded and found the trailer locks were forced open.

Pig loose

A Nichols Road resident reported a large white-and-black pig had wandered into their yard on Monday (Oct. 28). Police were able to contact the owner of the pig who has kept it as a pet for years and they were reunited.

MVC

A 27-year-old Fall River woman in a 2008 Chevrolet Cobalt was exiting the driveway at the Golden Living Center off Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) to head north toward Hingham when she pulled out in front of a 2011 Land Rover that was headed south on 3A. A 47-year-old Hingham woman was operating the Land Rover. The accident occurred on Monday (Oct. 28) around 7 p.m.

There were no injuries but the Cobalt had to be towed. The Fall River woman was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Investigation

Police are investigating a town hall employee's allegation of criminal harassment by a Cohasset resident. The employee reported the allegation to police on Thursday morning (Oct. 31). Since the matter is under investigation, no further details were provided.

Halloween

Police reported few problems on Halloween with the exception of a smashed mailbox on Church Street and an ornament stolen on Elm Street.

The call about the mailbox came in a 9:44 p.m. (Oct. 31) reporting a car had hit the mailbox in front of the house and left. The victim was unable to provide a description of the car, police said.

A 44-year-old Elm Street resident went to the station on Nov. 2 to report that someone had stolen the witch's metal, black hat which is about 4-feet tall and valued at $100 from her yard. She had not noticed it was missing until Saturday morning.

Doorbell

Police advised the father of a six-month-old baby to call police and let them handle it if area kids continue to ring the doorbell and take off. The father chased the kids down the street the evening of Friday (Nov. 1).

OUI arrest

A 49-year-old Scituate woman was charged with drunken driving following a single-car accident on Saturday (Nov. 2) around 1:45 a.m. on N. Main Street.

A resident called police thinking a car had hit her house. Police said the car, a Volvo sedan, had been driven through the fence and into the yard at 130 N. Main St. There was heavy damage to the front, driver's side and passenger side of the Volvo. The woman in the driver's seat, identified as Anna M. Ilariucci, 49, of 16 Cherry Lane, Scituate, said she was not injured.

Police said she displayed signs of heavy intoxication and did not seem to know what had happened. She told police she was coming from an establishment in Scituate Harbor and was on her way home.

After a series of field sobriety tests she was placed under arrest. Ilariucci was charged with OUI (second offense); operating to endanger; marked lanes violation; wanton destruction of property; and operating without a license in her possession. After she was brought to the station, she complained of not feeling well and was transported to South Shore Hospital for evaluation, police said.

Jewelry taken

A Hull Street resident is conducting an inventory to determine what items of jewelry were taken in a break-in, police said. On Friday (Nov. 1), the resident reported that his house appeared to have been broken into while they were away. Police were able to determine that entry may have been gained through a window in the back of the house where a screen had been removed. The break-in is under investigation.

Car into woods

Police tracked down the owner of a 2005 Toyota Scion that had been driven off North Main Street near Cedar Street into the woods. A caller reported seeing the car in the woods around 11:05 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 3). There was severe damage to the front end and passenger side of the car, along with evidence of white paint from the cement posts the car had struck on the side of the road.

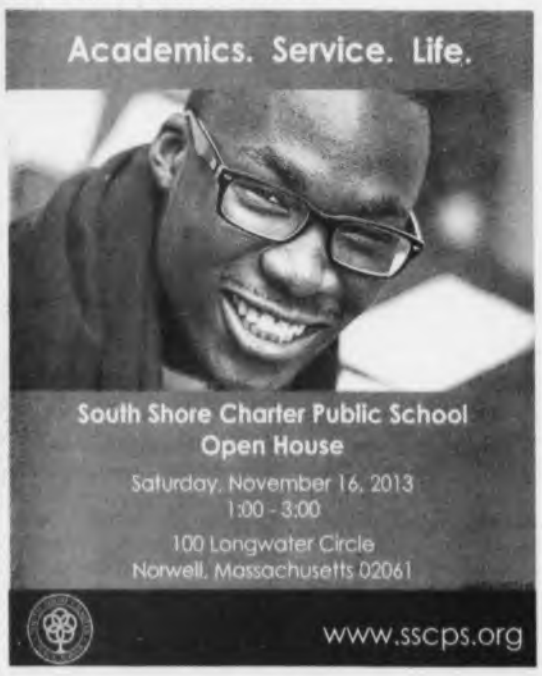
Police ran the plate and went to the registered owner's house on Forest Avenue where the 44-year-old resident told the officers that he had fallen asleep and driven off the road. His cell phone was dead so he had walked home to call police.

He is being summonsed to court to face the charges of negligent operation of a motor vehicle and marked lanes violation, police said.

Capsized

Police responded to a report from a caller at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday (Nov. 2) about a canoe that had capsized under Cunningham Bridge. The unoccupied boat floated out to sea and was later recovered by the harbormaster. Police searched the area to see if anyone had seen anything or knew if anyone was missing to no avail. The boat did have a frayed bowline attached so it is possible that the boat broke loose in the high winds. The Coast Guard was also notified initially and later told the canoe had been recovered.

Rolex missing

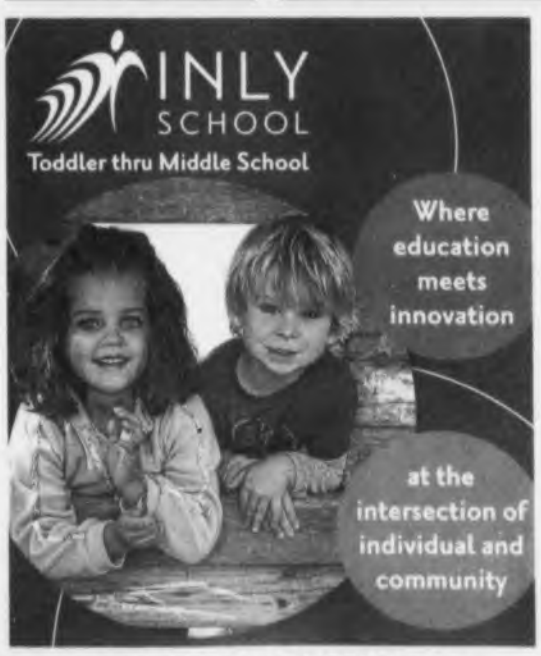


A 63-year-old Wellesley man filed a police report on Saturday (Nov. 2) about a Rolex watch he said he lost while staying at the Harbor Inn last June.

House keys

A homeowner on Hull Street asked for extra patrols after their house keys were stolen from their car that was broken into in the parking lot at Nantasket Beach, police said.

Parking lot



The owner of a 2014 Audi reported that a pickup truck backed into the Audi in the Deer Hill School parking lot on Sunday (Nov. 3) and took off. The pickup was described as an older model and maroon in color. There was minor damage to the rear bumper of the Audi, police said.

Selectmen hear HR presentation

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"So far we've identified the problems, gaps, and shortcomings with the town's existing HR policies."
Brian Magner, Deutsch Williams

Attorney Brian Magner, who works for Town Counsel firm Deutsch-Williams specializing in labor and employment law, gave a presentation on human resource policies to the Board of Selectmen during their Tuesday, Nov. 5 meeting.

Magner came equipped with several large binders for each of the selectmen to sift through. While they were welcome to take the binders home to read, they were told they could leave their copies at Town Hall as well.

Magner summed up several updates that need to be made to the town's HR policies and procedures, many of which have not reviewed since the 1980s and '90s.

"So far we've identified the problems, gaps, and shortcomings with the town's existing HR policies," said Magner, adding that the next step is determining how these issues should be addressed.

Magner explained that while some of the policies could be updated by town counsel, the ones that have corresponding bylaws would have to be voted on by Town Meeting. Some issues, such as maternity leave, must also be negotiated with town labor unions.

The bottom line is getting the town up to date and compliant with state and federal laws.

Magner also suggested updating employee job descriptions.

While the selectmen thanked him for undertaking this "mountain of work," as selectman Steve Gaumer put it, Magner said this was just a start and recommended the town hire an internal HR professional to work with the town and school departments. "It's a win-win for everyone," Magner said.

interview their top two candidates, allowing a chance for a more "in depth" interview.

The goal, said Gaumer, "should be to narrow the choices and find the best available fit for Cohasset in a town manager."

The board should also be open to the possibility that none of the current candidates are suitable for the role, Gaumer explained, adding that these things cannot be determined in a single interview.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy agreed that the board should not feel rushed through the process. She quoted Collins Center consultant Richard Kobayashi, who is overseeing the search, who told the selectmen, "Don't be afraid of time; do this right."

Kennedy also stated that she would not be in favor of an interview process that did not include stakeholders.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby, however, accused Gaumer of trying to drag out the interview process.

"I don't think we should have the candidates interview with everybody in town; that's ridiculous," said Gjesteby. "It looks like you're trying to delay the process."

Gaumer was rattled by this comment. "I don't appreciate the accusation," he said, asking incredulously, "I spent four hours of my work day doing this because I want to delay something?"

He further challenged, "If you don't agree with that approach, I suggest you put together your own process."

Gaumer urged the board to include department heads and key committee members in the hiring process, noting that the main issue with the former town manager was due to "a great deal of internal strife with town committees and department heads. It's clear there was not a fit."

During the last hiring process in 2011, Cohasset had a screening committee comprised of department heads and board members. The selectmen decided when they launched the search that they would not have a search committee this time around in order to keep politics out of the process.

Selectman Karen Quigley said, "When we discussed whether to have a screening committee or not the board voted as a whole" not to have one "because of the climate today" and to "remove politics from the process.

"The negativity and divisiveness exists very strongly," Quigley continued. "We would not want to introduce that into the process."

"I think we all agree that a successful town manager will need to develop working relationships with these groups in order to be an effective leader."
Selectman Steve Gaumer

Kennedy countered that the reason the board decided against a screening committee was because they would not all be able to agree on members for that committee.

"I submit that the politics exist at this table," Kennedy added.

Quigley suggested those who want to weigh in on the candidates could sit in on the interviews, which will be conducted publicly during the scheduled selectmen meeting, and then submit comments to the selectmen anonymously.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said he was in favor of "as much participation through observation of these interviews" as possible, adding that he liked the idea of "anonymous input."

Kennedy noted that town employees might be "hesitant to come to a meeting with a future boss."

Quigley suggested that employees, board members, and members of the public could email the selectmen with questions to ask the candidates. Milanoski said questions could be sent to the selectmen's administrative assistant.

The board agreed on this point, and would like all questions to be submitted by Tuesday, Nov. 12. Email questions to Tracey Connors at tconnors@cohassetma.org.

The selectmen have a matrix of interview questions to ask the candidates that the Collins Center prepared. They plan to consolidate these questions and any questions they receive from the public and ask the candidates two questions each.

Despite a lengthy discussion Tuesday night, it remains unclear whether the final candidates will go through a second round of interviews over the next few weeks.

The selectmen next convene on Wednesday, Nov. 13 for a meeting with the Collins Center to find out who the final candidates are, and discuss the next steps in the process.

Special Town Meeting warrant mailed

The Special Town Meeting warrant is on its way to Cohasset residents. The STM is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 23 starting at 9:30 a.m. in the High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

The warrant is comprised of seven articles, many of which have been dubbed "housekeeping" issues by officials.

The Board of Selectmen held a brief discussion on the warrant with the Acting Town Manager during their Tuesday, Nov. 5 meeting, voting to recommend four of the articles on the Town Meeting floor. The remaining three articles deal with financial matters, and the selectmen decided to wait until the Advisory Committee has reviewed and voted on those articles before making any recommendations.

Advisory is scheduled to meet on Thursday, Nov. 14 and will review and vote on the articles.

Attorney Brian Magner, who works for Town Counsel firm Deutsch-Williams specializing in labor and employment law, gave a presentation on human resource policies to the Board of Selectmen during their Tuesday, Nov. 5 meeting.

Magner came equipped with several large binders for each of the selectmen to sift through. While they were welcome to take the binders home to read, they were told they could leave their copies at Town Hall as well.

Magner summed up several updates that need to be made to the town's HR policies and procedures, many of which have not reviewed since the 1980s and '90s.

"So far we've identified the problems, gaps, and shortcomings with the town's existing HR policies," said Magner, adding that the next step is determining how these issues should be addressed.

Magner also suggested updating employee job descriptions.

While the selectmen thanked him for undertaking this "mountain of work," as selectman Steve Gaumer put it, Magner said this was just a start and recommended the town hire an internal HR professional to work with the town and school departments. "It's a win-win for everyone," Magner said.

AROUND TOWN

Spaghetti Sauce Off! Nov. 13

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hi there, Cohasset. I hope that everyone has adjusted to the change as we "fell back" in time. I always struggle at this time of year with the short days and the early darkness that happens but with each day that goes by, I just remember that it is one day closer to spring! I really do love the winter, snow and all the beauty it brings (to a degree) however, I am not a fan of the cold or the shortened afternoons. We have been blessed though with some pretty great weather overall for quite a while, let's keep it going all winter long!

I want to take a moment to honor and remember all out servicemen and women. Veterans Day is on Monday this year and for many, marks a three-day weekend that we all want to enjoy. Please take the time to honor and respect our veterans and thank those who continue to serve and protect.

On stage

We have some drama happening around town this month. A cast full of self-interest and skepticism; ripe for fun and laughs at Cohasset Dramatic Club's "Boeing Boeing" this weekend, is happening on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 8 & 9 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 10 at 2. Don't miss seeing this non-stop comedy take flight at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater. General Admission tickets are $20; by reservation at 617-922-0280 or at Paperscapes and Buttonwood Books and Toys. It will be a wonderful and funny time for all who attend.

CHS drama

The CHS Drama Club has some fun laughs coming too. "LOL" is just what audiences will do at an evening of comedic one-acts, presented by the Cohasset Theatre Company, the drama club of Cohasset High School. Tackling themes of love and human interaction, two short plays by 19th-century playwright Anton Chekhov and three short plays by contemporary playwright David Ives will leave you laughing out loud. "LOL: A Century of Comedy" will be presented on Sat, Nov. 23 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 24 at 3 p.m., in the CHS auditorium. Tickets are $5 and will be available at the door. Don't miss it!

Library

Two events are taking place at thePaul Pratt Library. Families can come to "Read to a Dog" on Tuesdays and Thursdays in November from 4 to 5 p.m. Log onto: cohassetlibrary.org to make your 15-minute family appointment and see more information on this wonderful program. Lilly and Chief will be ready and waiting.

Next, on Saturday, Nov. 16th at 11 a.m., Mr. Vinny's Lil' Puppet Puppet Show for ages 3 and up takes place and you and your children will love it! No registration or tickets are necessary. Generously funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library, this program has limited seating so arrive a few minutes early. So much fun for everyone...

Food drive

Scouting for Food is a national campaign by the Boy Scouts of America to collect food for local food pantries. In Cohasset, Cub Scout Pack 38, Boy Scout Troop 28, and Venture Crew 18 will be participating in this program. Be sure to ask your favorite scout to give you a "Scouting for Food" bag which you can fill with appropriate items for the food pantry. Your scout will collect the bag and turn it in for central collection. In addition, Troop 28 will be placing a collection box at the bottle shed at the RTF on Nov 9-10 for drop-offs of items to be donated.

Spaghetti sauce!

Join the Cohasset Elder Affairs on Wed, Nov 13, from 4 to 6 p.m. at Cohasset Lightkeepers house for a Spaghetti Sauce Off! Your vote counts. This promises to be a fun and festive event as members of the Cohasset Elder Affairs staff compete to decide who makes the best spaghetti and meatballs. Bragging rights go to the winner. Pasta, salad and dessert! There is a $5 suggested donation and reservations are required. Call 781-383-9112 to reserve your seat. Transportation available.

Smile!

Dental Hygienist Emma Lawson will be at Cohasset Elder Affairs at 11a.m. on Tuesday, Nov 12, to introduce herself to Cohasset seniors and other interested residents. Beginning in January, Emma will be available for dental cleanings, screenings and fluoride treatments at the Cohasset Elder Affairs offices, 3 North Main St. During her November visit, she will discuss the importance taking care of your teeth at any age. Come by and see if this service will be helpful to you. Emma also makes home visits upon request. Lunch, provided by a "Celebrity Chef," will be served after the presentation. Call 781-383-9112 for reservations.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Term 1 is wrapping up

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

And, just like that, we are one-quarter of the way through the 2013-2014 school year. It seems crazy that in just six short months, almost every senior will know where they will be headed for the next episode of life: whether it be school, work, or traveling. With most students getting early applications in last week (or finishing up apps due November 8th), this week acted as a bit of a respite for many.

Then there were others (this columnist among them) who experienced one of the busiest weeks of the entire school. With The Spinnaker (CHS's school newspaper) set to release November 16th, the leaders of the Spin staff worked tireless hours after school and into the nighttime to get the paper primed to print. More on Spinnaker business in the future.

Most of the school population, however, was preoccupied this week by the most omnipotent force that they know; grades. With grades closing for Term 1 on Wednesday, many students were left scrambling to combat the eleventh hour monsters: end-of-term projects and tests. Now that everything is turned in, CHSers can turn their focus to cheering on all of their classmates in what is shaping up to be one of the most exciting tournament seasons in recent memory.

I usually like to leave the sports talk to the Mariner section dedicated to athletics, but the success of the Fall Sports squads this week deserves recognition. After a fantastic season under the tutelage of head coach Ms. Guiliano, the Girl's Field Hockey team fell on Wednesday to undefeated Apponequet, 3-1, in the Division 2 South Semi-finals. Great season girls! The Boys' Soccer Team (which features a devilishly handsome outside midfielder who also happens to write this column), lead by head coach Jim "The Bald Eagle" Willis, traveled down to Bridgewater-Raynham on Thursday to battle West Bridgewater in the Division 4 South Semi-Finals. Athletic Director Ron Ford organized a "fan bus", which saw more than 50 CHS students pack onto the yellow school buses to cheer on the soccer legends. And finally, be sure to be at Alumni Field this Friday night, as the 7-1 Cohasset Football squad takes on Blue Hills Regional in the 2nd round of the Division 6 South Tournament. Also, check on 143TV, as CHS junior Cole Morrison and I will be doing play-by-play for the game (shout out to Don Roine, program director at 143TV).

But wait! What about the arts?

Glad you asked; the CHS Drama Club is preparing for its showing of their most recent production, LOL: A Century of Comedy, which will debut the weekend of November 22nd. Hope to see you there.

I hope you all have enjoyed reading my column for the first half of the year; I certainly have had an awesome time writing and exploring the field of journalism. As always, have a great weekend, and keep it classy Cohasset!

Matthew MacCormack is a senior at Cohasset High; his column runs monthly during the school year.

DRAMA

Moriarty, along with CHS principal Carolyn Connolly, decided that the players should kick off the new school year with a comedic performance.

"The consensus was that we wanted to start the year with a comedy," said Afanasiw, "and to find a piece that's challenging, relevant, and offers a lot of opportunities to get as many actors involved as possible."

This is why the director selected the one-act play format. "Each one has its own cast that is part of the larger cast as well," she explained.

According to the director, the chosen plays are about love and relationships, embodying the themes of "human interaction, human attraction and human communication."

This is Afanasiw's first year as the CHS drama club director, although she is no stranger to Cohasset. Her husband teaches and coaches sports at the high school, and last year she volunteered to help with the fall musical, "The Drowsy Chaperone." She is also directing the upcoming Middle School play, "The Trial of Goldilocks," which debuts in January.

Afanasiw previously worked for 13 years in the Silver Lake district as the high school theater director, English teacher and English Language Arts coordinator.

The Cohasset Theatre Company has around 40 members, of which most are involved in the production as either cast or crew. So far, the students are singing their new director's praises.

Faith Porter, 17, a senior playing "Swift" in "Words, Words, Words," said of Afanasiw (aka "Mrs. A"), "She's the sweetest person ever."

Madison Pratt, a 16-year-old sophomore playing "Natasha" in "The Proposal" who is also a student director, agreed. "She's the nicest person and wants to give everybody a chance." The aspiring actress added of Mrs. A, "She knows her stuff."

Pratt continued, "She gets really in depth into character — who you're supposed to be, your past, where you're going."

Luke Norton, 15, a sophomore and member of the lights and sound crew, said that Mrs. A is also "helpful with the technical aspect" of the show. "She tells us what she wants, but we have some input."

"She'll ask all of us our opinions and suggestions," said Pratt. "It's cool to be involved in every single show."

"It's really student-driven," Considine said of the production.

Considine added that she has learned a lot under Afanasiw's direction. "At the end of every rehearsal, she gives us things to work on next week and gives us an idea of how to frame what we're learning."

Afanasiw said that her students have been game to roll with the punches.

"They've really been working really hard," she said, giving a specific example. "One of the plays is written in a nonsense language... [The students] have to perform an entire play in a language not their own, so the challenge of character and memorization is ramped up even more."

Some of the players were fretting about their first off-book rehearsal this week, but were still willing to go for it, ready or not.

"I feel like this happens with every show," said Porter. "No one feels ready, but once you get started, you realize, 'I know this like the back of my hand.'"

Porter, whose play involves monkeys trying to produce a Shakespeare show, added that her lines are particularly "hard to remember and hard to say."

There may be some challenges, but there's no doubt the "LOL" cast and crew has had a lot of fun working on this show.

"I love going to rehearsal," said Norton, adding that on non-rehearsal nights, "I'm doing my homework and getting real sad.

"Everyone's so nice, it's so fun to be there," Norton continued. "Even when you're working, it's fun."

It seems the drama club has become a fun haven for students from all walks.

"Most of my cast comes right off the playing field," said Afanasiw. "We really do have to do the rehearsals around the athletic schedule."

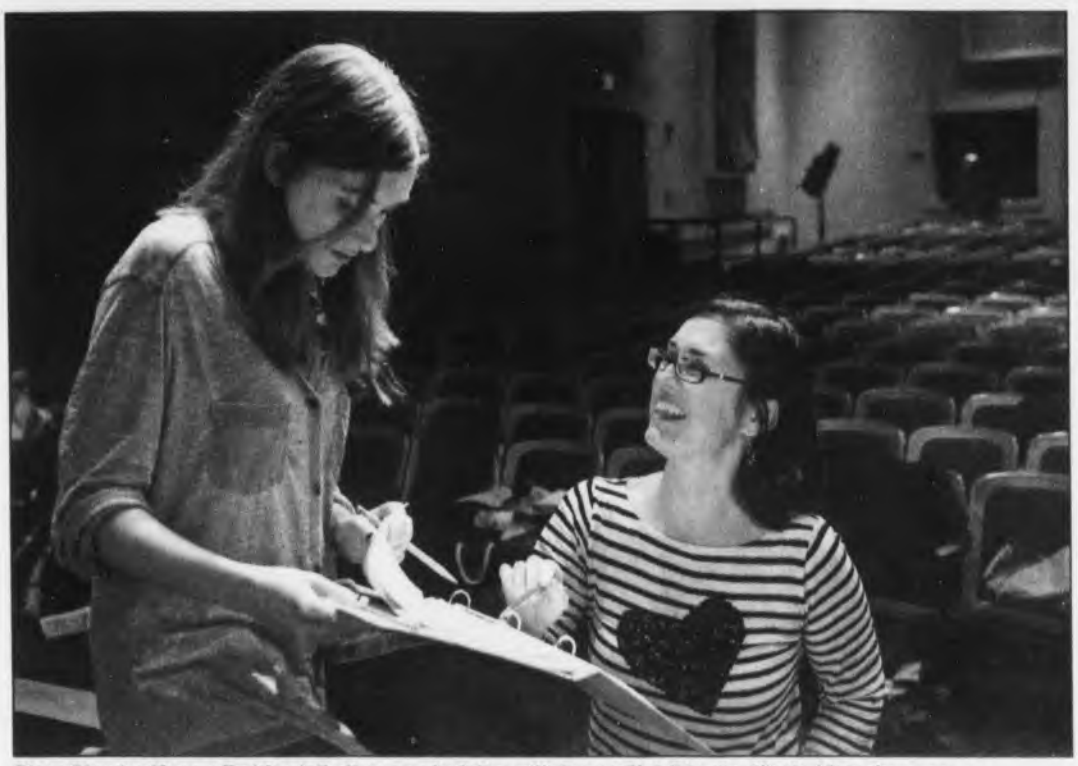
It's something unique about Cohasset students that the drama director has noticed.

"It is different," she said. "What impresses me is how they balance so much; they have difficult academic course loads. There's really no member of the cast and crew for whom drama is their only thing."

Considine noted that the drama club is "accessible for kids who play sports, too. There's a balance."

Pratt said that everyone in drama club gets along famously. "Everyone is so talented, and we all get along so well. We all click."

Even if they come from different, well, cliques?



"You're friends with people you wouldn't expect to be friends with," said Considine.

"We are friends!" Pratt emphasized.

Porter said the club is comprised of "a range of grades and friends groups. We all grew up with different friends... We shouldn't click this well, but we do."

And when they're not hard at work on rehearsal night?

"There have been many dance parties," said Porter.

FASHION

paintings, then put him in touch with galleries. This soon led to showings in New York, Washington, D.C. and Miami.

"All of a sudden I was a gallery artist, painting and traveling. It just kind of happened," he said.

Inspired by the paintings of Monet and Jackson Pollock, Merton decided to experiment with textiles. He designed a range of women's silk scarves that seemed a "relatively easy way to start" toe-dipping into fashion.

Merton created his company, Alistair Archer, named after his two sons. He started off small.

"I started selling one [scarf] at a time to friends and people I knew. It took a little while, but the company grew."

The aspiring designer wanted to see how his abstract designs would translate to a dress. "What if I make a dress out of part of a painting?" he wondered, envisioning an entire head-to-toe look – scarf, shoes and handbag – that would together comprise "a whole deconstructed painting."

Merton turned to his wife to be his first fit model. He designed a dress for her to wear to a Museum of Fine Arts fundraiser, working with a local seamstress.

"It turned out beyond my wildest dreams," he shared.

The designer then began turning out bespoke dresses, custom-made for his clientele. He started with experimental, avant-garde pieces, but quickly learned that he needed to focus on creating a basic template — letting the prints take center stage.

"I was focused on really complicated designs," Merton explained. "I realized I needed to let the prints speak for themselves, simplifying the silhouettes to make the clothes more wearable. I try to create things that are more classic; not cutting edge, but also not too old or matronly."

This move was necessary to elevate the line from one-off designs for individual clients to a ready-to-wear line that could be sold as a collection to department stores and boutiques.

Could Alistair Archer soon be on the racks next to Roberto Cavalli or Zac Posen? If all goes according to plan, Merton will eventually helm a global lifestyle brand. His business model is Tory Burch, who worked in fashion as a magazine editor but eventually traded that title for business owner and designer.

Merton showed his Spring 2014 line at this fall's StyleWeek Northeast in Providence to rave reviews by local publications, including the Providence Journal. Alistair Archer has already been featured in South Shore Living and the Boston Globe.

"It was exciting to have a runway show," the designer said. "It's the first time it was out there. It was a supportive environment to launch the collection."

Merton expects to start selling his line in stores next March. In the meantime, he's already hard at work on Fall 2014, which he plans to show at StyleWeek in January.

Menswear

While Alistair Archer currently focuses on women's ready-to-wear, including dresses, tops, bottoms and, of course, scarves, Merton plans to expand to menswear with shirts and ties. The dress shirts will be solid colors with print designs splashed on the inside collars and cuffs, while the casual shirts will allow the wearer to show off his wild side with all-over prints.

Naturally, each shirt will also have a set of coordinating ties.

Another important element of Alistair Archer is eco-conscious — keeping the brand's carbon footprint low. The line is designed and manufactured in the United States using organic materials and non-toxic dyes. Merton said a goal for him, not only as a designer but as a business owner, is to minimize his environmental impact. To make his prints, he utilizes digital technology that allows him to print only small quantities of textiles rather than large batches of samples.

If it sounds complicated, it's because it is — and the technology is fairly new. "What I do couldn't have been done 10 years ago," said Merton.

As the business expands, Merton hopes to continue producing a line that is both socially- and environmentally-conscious. One guarantee: it will always be all about art.

"I think fashion is the ultimate public art for all of us," said Merton. "The way every morning we get dressed and express ourselves is how we want the world to see us."

As evidenced from canvases displayed all over the dining room and living room – and many more stashed in the basement – Merton is constantly creating new abstract art. While he plans to incorporate new prints each season, the designer will also repeat prints from previous seasons.

Gasp — a fashion faux pax? Not so fast, said Merton. There's a method to the madness.

"All of the pieces will fit together, but all are completely unique. As you have these pieces, you can mix and match... This creates value for a customer."

With this strategy, an Alistair Archer print will never go out of style.

It sounds like something famous "fashion recyclers" like Michelle Obama and Kate Middleton – who dare to repeat outfits publicly, and often – would gravitate toward. Alistair Archer's global prints could also be seen on trendsetter (and former Cohasseter) Kate Bosworth, who could breezily sport one of the brightly colored, bohemian mini-dresses at music festival Coachella.

It seems that any fashion-loving lady would be comfortable donning the edgy, yet classic, designs. Which begs the question — who, exactly, is the Alistair Archer girl?

"My brand is about a woman who is self-confident, bold, and wants to express herself, and wears art not to impress other people, but because she enjoys it," said Merton. "She is someone for whom it's more important to look in the mirror and like her clothes than it is to get attention from strangers. My clients love what they're wearing and expressing how they see themselves."

It's obvious Merton is an artist, and now a full-fledged fashion designer. But there's one more title to add to this multi-hyphenate: entrepreneur.

This is "the most exciting" phase of the business, he said.

"I'm making the transition from a start-up business to a business that is expanding. The first three years, I was a one-person operation," said Merton. "I built a strong foundation; now, it's about growing the company. It's no longer just an idea — it's real now."

Bloomfield made Cohasset his home

MIT professor passed away on Oct. 30

Dr. Lincoln Bloomfield made Cohasset his home for more than half a century, living in the family's 1850s Dutch colonial house at 37 Beach St. overlooking scenic Little Harbor. Dr. Bloomfield, who died at the age of 93 on Oct. 30 of respiratory failure while in short-term rehabilitation at Linden Ponds in Hingham, had moved a year earlier with his wife Iri to Sunrise Senior Living on King Street in Cohasset.

A Professor Emeritus of Political Science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Bloomfield used to commute to Boston by train in the late 1950s and early 1960s until train service was discontinued. Decades later, he became an ardent supporter of reviving the MBTA rail service to Greenbush, and lived to see it happen.

Bloomfield, who was known as Linc, and wife Iri, who had been a New Zealand diplomat when they met in Washington in the late 1940s, raised three children in Cohasset: Pamela, Lincoln Jr., and Diana, all of whom graduated from the Cohasset public schools. They, along with his grandchildren Nicholas Bloomfield Culver, Adrian Bloomfield Culver and Alison Noelle Bloomfield, will return to Cohasset to join Iri for a memorial service celebrating his long and fulfilling life at the First Parish in Cohasset on Saturday, Nov. 16, at 11 a.m.

Bloomfield, a 1941 Harvard graduate, served in the Navy on the USS Ranger in WWII, and stayed on in China and Burma after the war as part of the new Office of Strategic Services (OSS), the predecessor to the CIA. He worked for 11 years at the US State Department in Washington, where his wife Iri had served as a diplomat at the New Zealand Embassy. Bloomfield returned to the area in 1952 to study for his Master of Public Administration degree at Harvard and finally moved up to Massachusetts for good in 1956, receiving his Ph.D. from Harvard and joining the MIT faculty.

Bloomfield, who was known as Linc, and wife Iri, who had been a New Zealand diplomat when they met in Washington in the late 1940s, raised three children in Cohasset.

While Bloomfield traveled often to Washington, DC, and overseas, Cohasset held many attractions for him: he was an avid tennis player and in more recent years a golfer at the Cohasset Golf Club; he loved to sail a small boat around Little Harbor when not working in his home office; and above all, he remained very committed to the First Parish in Cohasset, where he volunteered for various organizing duties, and sang in the church choir and the annual spring cabaret.

Bloomfield authored 14 books on international security and foreign policy. Because he believed that conflicts should be mediated and resolved before risking potential escalation involving the nuclear superpowers, his writings helped to shape the international role of the United Nations; innovations such as conflict-avoidance exercises ("wargames" to stop or prevent war); and an award-winning IBM software planning tool called CASCON containing detailed information on all of the world's modern armed conflicts. Bloomfield returned to government in 1979, spending a year in Washington working for President Carter in the White House as Director of Global Issues on the National Security Council staff.

After his return home to Cohasset, Bloomfield became a consultant to HBO and helped them produce a made-for-television movie in which he also appeared, "Countdown to Looking Glass," about a crisis that leads to the use of nuclear weapons. For five years he hosted an award-winning daily television show, "Fifty Years Ago Today" on the Monitor Channel.

He continued to lecture locally in recent years. Bloomfield's last trip to Washington was in 2010, to attend a gala event at the Embassy of Canada hosted by the Stimson Center in a tribute to his friend and colleague, former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, next to whom he was seated at the dinner. Even while facing health problems in recent years, Bloomfield posted foreign policy essays on the web under his own site known as "Linc's Blog" (http://linc37.blogspot.com/).

When not working on his writings or giving career advice to young Cohasset friends, Bloomfield could be found sailing in Little Harbor, up at the Golf Club, singing occasional solos in the choir, standing up to debate a local land use provision at a Town Hall meeting, enjoying a latte and a croissant at French Memories, or seeking out the fresh lobster rolls at the annual summer fairs on Cohasset common. He loved living by the sea and treasured the view from his porch of the sunsets over Little Harbor. Above all, he appreciated all his Cohasset friends, many from the First Parish, who never stopped visiting him and enriching his life.

OUR VIEW

Salute to veterans

The 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, 1918.

The Allied nations and Germany ceased hostilities bringing an end to World War I and laying the foundation for what is now Veterans Day.

Unfortunately World War I did not live up to its billing as the "war to end all wars" when the Treaty of Versailles was signed on June 28, 1919, officially ending the war. Its legacy, and that of the signing of the treaty, however, have lived on in providing a lasting recognition to those who have fought for our country.

Originally known as Armistice Day, Veterans Day was primarily a day set aside to honor veterans of World War I. Congress made it a legal holiday in 1938, but in 1954 after the United States' involvement in World War II and Korea, Congress amended the Act of 1938 by striking out the word "Armistice" and inserting in its place the word "Veterans."

With the approval of this legislation on June 1, 1954, Nov. 11th became a day to honor American veterans of all wars.

The original concept for the celebration was for a day observed with parades and public meetings and a brief suspension of business beginning at 11 a.m.

While many federal holidays, including Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day and Columbus Day are celebrated on Mondays to insure three-day weekends, Veterans Day is one of the few holidays celebrated on its original date. In 1968, however, Congress passed a law including Veterans Day with the three holidays mentioned above to fall on a Monday to encourage travel, recreational activities and stimulate economic growth by creating long weekends.

Many states, however, did not go along with the decision and continued to celebrate the holidays on their original dates, creating so much confusion that President Gerald R. Ford signed a law on Sept. 20, 1975 returning the annual observance of Veterans Day to its original date of Nov. 11, beginning in 1978.

To this day, Veterans Day continues to be observed on Nov. 11, regardless of what day of the week it falls. The restoration of the observance of Veterans Day to Nov. 11 not only preserves the historical significance of the date, but helps focus attention on the important purpose of Veterans Day: A celebration to honor America's veterans for their patriotism, love of country, and willingness to serve and sacrifice for the common good.

So on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, 2013, let us continue the tradition of not only saluting the veterans who have so dutifully completed their service to our great country, but to those who continue to do so today all across the world.

Cohasset's Veterans Day observances include

- Friday, Nov. 8: Friday night meat raffle starting at 5:30 p.m. at the Legion Hall.
- Sunday, Nov. 10: USMC birthday celebration; ham dinner to be served and cake-cutting ceremony at 6 p.m. at the Legion Hall.
- Monday, Nov. 11: Veterans Day ceremony starting at 11a.m. at Veterans Memorial park on Cohasset Harbor. The main speaker is Cohasset's VSO, Vincent Fountaine, along with Deer Hill essay contest winners.

No Greenbush trains for Red Sox

There he was again – an MBTA police officer on TV, pleading with the public to leave their cars at home and take the train to the Red Sox rolling rally. By most estimates, 2 million visitors were predicted to invade the city to get a peek at their heroes. That was good advice, except for one minor issue: Our trains would be rusting away – as they have been on weekends and holidays since July 7, 2012 – on the Kingston/Plymouth and Greenbush lines.

These are new, state-of-the-art commuter lines, which cost over a billion dollars to build. Eight train sets – each with a capacity of 1,000 passengers – sat silent in their respective terminals abutting two of the biggest parking lots in the MBTA system. In less than one hour, the trains could have transported Red Sox fans to South Station, only about a 10-minute walk from Boylston Street. Even on the clinching sixth game of the World Series – a Wednesday – the T socked it to the South Shore. According to the T website, virtually all of its lines from Providence to Rockport scheduled a train leaving Boston "45 minutes after the last out" to accommodate ticket holders and Kenmore Square revelers. Everywhere, that is, except on the Old Colony and Greenbush lines, where they departed between 10 p.m. and 10:40 p.m., somewhere around the sixth inning.

As it turned out, the crowd estimates for the rolling rally were correct. Both the Braintree and Quincy Adams T stations were full at 8:30 a.m. At that point, fans had two choices: Try to find parking on town streets or keep on driving. Most chose the latter.

It's hard to figure the mindset of the T. At the least, you would think they'd seize the moment to replenish the petty-cash drawer with trains guaranteed to be packed. At the risk of sounding mildly cynical, could it be they're punishing the South Shore for voting largely Republican, or do they just think we're closet Yankee fans? Whatever their warped methodology, the T's brain trust passed up a golden opportunity to introduce thousands of families to the ease and convenience of riding the train in a region where the car culture has had several generations to become firmly engrained.

Richard S. Prone, 606 Mayflower St., Duxbury.

Editor's note: The writer served on the MBTA Old Colony and Greenbush Citizens Advisory Committees, the MBTA Advisory Board, and is a retired 40-year Amtrak and MBCR locomotive engineer.

Public bullying needs to stop

Enough already! We get it. Obviously Selectmen Gaumer, Kennedy and their vociferous entourage are not fond of Selectmen Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby.

Week, after week, after week, after week the Cohasset Mariner is used as a vehicle by political adversaries to publicly bully Selectmen Koed, Quigley and Gjesteby (dedicated public servants).

This political vendetta is not only juvenile, but frankly quite boring. When will the Cohasset Mariner go back to being a newspaper of exceptional journalistic substance, objectivity and integrity?

I used to look forward to reading the Mariner. Sadly, that is no longer the case.

Mindy Evans, 36 Sohier St.

COMMENTARY

Best practices in TM search

PATTY SMITH

The current selectman debate regarding Town Manager candidate interviews has drawn much attention. It has been proposed that the selectmen interview the five candidates, individually, over a period of two evenings, where each candidate is interviewed for 75 minutes. No further action was discussed after the initial interviews. Presumably, the board would then be expected to make a final selection.

In my experience as an Executive Search Professional, I would not feel comfortable making a hiring decision for a senior position such as a town manager based on one 75-minute interview.

Selectman Gaumer had presented an alternative framework for conducting the interviews that makes more sense to me. The proposal divided the interview process into three parts:

- A group interview, by the selectmen, with each of the five candidates,
- A round of interviews with selected department heads and committee chairs including the school superintendent and school board chair, and
- Final selectmen interviews with the finalists, leading to the chosen candidate.

Gaumer called the proposed process a "360 degree interview" because it includes the full spectrum of relevant interaction for the town manager, including both subordinates and superiors.

...the selectmen must find a way to evaluate if the candidates have the interpersonal and communications skills to be effective.

More organizations appear to be using this type of technique to determine whether a candidate is a "good fit" and would integrate well into the existing environment which increases the likelihood of them becoming an effective addition to the team.

In this hire, it is critical that the selectmen identify the candidate who can manage the requirements of the job while fitting within the existing framework. More specifically, the selectmen must find a way to evaluate if the candidates have the interpersonal and communications skills to be effective.

One would hope, that our elected officials will be willing to use proven and best practices to produce the greatest likelihood of a positive outcome in the Town Manager search, and this 360-degree interview process could be a very good start.

THE POLITICAL PERCH

On beauty and civic service

These are the heroic folks who have voluntarily entered the arena of public service and these good friends and neighbors voluntarily work many long and very hard hours indeed.

KEVIN R. MCCARTHY

Commenting on the ideal citizen in a Republic, Theodore Roosevelt once stated: "It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, who comes short again and again, because there is no effort without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the deeds ...'

Cohasset, past and present, has been blessed with many women and men who clearly meet the standard of Theodore Roosevelt's ideal citizen. These good folks are best exemplified by those who have given of their talents, time and service to our community by entering the arena of our civic life and serving on the many volunteer committees and boards which play an essential role in actually keeping Cohasset running.

These doers of very good deeds serve in the civic government in Cohasset and, despite the sometimes turbulent hither and thither of Cohasset political life, more often than not provide invaluable management and oversight to such essential town functions as housing, water, schools, library, health, planning, recreation, sewer, town moderator, governance, cable TV, historical society, conservation, selectman, capital budget, advisory, zoning, elder affairs, bylaws overview, computer, preservation, and the list goes on and on. These are the heroic folks who have voluntarily entered the arena of public service and these good friends and neighbors voluntarily work many long and very hard hours indeed. They have accomplished and continue to accomplish a great deal in service of their fellow citizens and the Town of Cohasset, sustaining our civic life and more than occasionally transforming potential chaos into beauty.

I am of the view that somewhere between our reason and our passions resides beauty. And beauty may be the best we can do when left to our own devices. Somewhere between our ideal of a perfect hamlet-by-the- sea and our everyday community needs for basic services and infrastructure resides the beautiful town we know as Cohasset. And Cohasset has been made more beautiful by the talented services and sacrifices made by our seemingly endless supply of fantastic citizens who largely stay out of the limelight and quietly go about the business of making our community as pleasant as it is in so many ways. They close the gap between what we wish we were and what we must be. Often they make right our feet of clay.

In this time of thanksgiving I offer a great big thank you to all those volunteer board and committee members who continue to give so much of their valuable time, talent and passionate commitment to making the Cohasset as good and beautiful as it can be.

Shopping for Groceries:

Route 3A or 129 S. Main St.?

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

As the number of leaves on the ground start to outnumber those still left on the trees we can be rest assured that the holidays are rapidly approaching. From now until New Year's it'll be holiday party central which means the grocery stores will be bustling and one thing is for sure, there are an abundance of grocery stores along Route 3A.

If the stretch of Route 1 from Dedham to Walpole is considered the 'Auto-mile' then perhaps the stretch of Route 3A from the Hingham Shipyard to Cohasset's Beechwood Street could be called the 'grocery-mile.' In this short stretch there's a new Trader Joe's, the Fresh Market, the Fruit Center, not one but two Stop & Shops and a Star Market (you may call it Shaw's but in honor of Kay McCarthy who passed away last year, I'm still holding onto Star Market). Bill Parcells who left the Patriots because he wanted to 'shop for his own groceries' would have a field day here.

Prior to moving to the South Shore, we lived in Needham, a town four times larger than Cohasset but limited to two undersized and overcrowded grocery stores. Trust me when I say we are made in the shade here. Of all the places along 3A, the Fruit Center is by far my favorite. I love everything about the Fruit Center, from the excellent produce to the team working the deli counter; it's a great place to shop.

Despite Route 3A being food shoppers euphoria, there are a few in town that opt for none of the above when it comes to getting their weekly groceries. These people, our neighbors and friends, quietly shop for their groceries in the basement tucked around back of the St. Anthony's Rectory at 129 South Main St.; it's called the Cohasset Food Pantry.

The selections are nowhere as good, the isles are nonexistent, the frozen food section is but a few refrigerators and there are no points of purchase displays or any background music. You won't find a deli counter, the darker musty ambiance is in stark contrast to the other stores and unfortunately it's the only option too many families.

The Cohasset Food Pantry and similar food pantries in neighboring towns are the lifelines for so many who have quietly fallen upon hard times and are on the verge of going hungry. The nice couple up the street, some of the children on the school bus, the kind woman in the community group, the father who isn't on the train anymore, your friend's grandparents and the good kid on the ball team may all be examples of members of our community who for whatever reason need a warm smile and some assistance in feeding themselves and their families.

The Cohasset Food Pantry is a labor of love for a small-dedicated group who consistently need outside assistance and who deeply and warmly appreciate those who are able to help. While their efforts are to be both warmly applauded and valued shouldn't the Food Pantry be the labor of love for all of us especially our younger generation?

Not to go all 'Maybury' on y'all but one of the blessings of living in a small community is the ability to help and care for each other. The Food Panty could provide us an opportunity to teach and empower the kids on how to give and to show them the positive impact of their actions.

Think for a moment if the youth sports programs had a day where teams asked their players to not only collect food during some games but afterwards delivered the food to the pantry. The experience of the kids seeing the importance of their actions and the realities that many face day-to-day would be wonderful life lesson. I've had preliminary discussions with some about this idea and hope that it can become a reality.

Over the past few years, I've had the privilege of working with a bunch of kids collecting and unloading goods at the Food Pantry and it's truly an eye opening experience. The positive impact from directly getting involved is wonderful for everyone. Much like the experience of Camp Bourndale, working to help the Food Pantry could be a positive rite of passage for the kids in town.

Long-term visions aside, Thanksgiving is coming up and it's the busiest and most stressful time of the year for the Cohasset Food Pantry. They could really use your help. From volunteers, to food and money; any and all assistance is both needed and appreciated.

Right now, they are looking for volunteers to help out with baking; the perfect family activity. The Pantry will be open on Sunday, Nov. 24 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Monday, Nov. 25, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and will be accepting fresh baked desserts like pies, brownies and cookies along with rolls and breads.

Just for the record, beef stew, chicken broth, soups, healthy cereals, tuna, peanut butter, juice boxes (school size) toiletries, detergents, coffee, tea, hot chocolate and pancake mix are some of the basics that the Pantry is in need of. Tax-deductible donations can be sent to: Cohasset Food Pantry, PO Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. Above and beyond this, wouldn't be amazing if we could formulate an ongoing program to benefit the Food Pantry while educating the kids around town – I'm willing to help if someone has an idea.

As always, thank you for reading and the next time you're food shopping along Rt. 3A take a moment to think about those who food shop at 129 South Main Street.

FOR THE RECORD

Readers rate our newspapers

GREGORY MATHIS

Three newspapers in our group did quite well in a recent newspaper competition, including Newspaper of the Year and Distinguished Newspaper in the same weekly circulation class of 3,001 to 8,000.

As nice as it was to receive the recognition from the regional media association, it was even more rewarding because the contest was judged by regular newspaper readers. Most often fellow journalists from the New England region or other parts of the country are involved with deciding the outcome of other trade contests, so it's nice to be appreciated by our ultimate audience – the reader.

Another difference with this contest is we receive a detailed scorecard of what the judges (readers) liked and didn't like about the papers.

The feedback provided in the summaries – positive and negative – will help us improve the quality of all of our newspapers moving forward.

While the majority of comments were positive given the awards won, particular attention was paid to the concerns or complaints. If one reader feels a certain way about our content, chances are many share the same opinion. So this was an opportunity to learn something about ourselves.

A more "inclusive" index came up on more than one occasion in the readers' ratings. That's something that can be easily addressed, especially for our bigger papers.

The use of color was seen as good, but the clarity was viewed as mediocre, referring to photos and how they print. One judge noted a lack of color. If it was up to us as editors, we'd certainly have color throughout the newspaper. That's one area out of our control.

Some of the other feedback was a little confusing and contradicting, and also areas outside of our control. One comment noted the paper's pages were too big. I imagine that's a reference to the broadsheet format. One of the papers we entered is tabloid-sized and a judge said they were "not a fan of the small, folded format." I guess the size of the paper is more of a personal preference.

A couple of judges mentioned wanting to see more letters to the editor. I agree. Local letters have long been a measure of how well connected the newspaper is to the community. A robust and vibrant letters sections means we're doing a good job. We understand there are many towns in which we could be doing better.

In comments summarizing the Newspaper of the Year's strengths, judges said, "The paper was well laid out, with emphasis on the local community events, people and news. Local readers want to read about and see themselves and their neighbors and this newspaper and its editors held that same view and fulfilled it."

From the local beginnings of all of our newspapers through the multiple owners we've had over the years, our mission has always been to provide a newspaper that's a true reflection of the community. It's great to see the judges recognize that as a strength of our newspapers and we'll continue to make that a primary focus. And we'll continue to improve in other areas.

Please feel free to share your feedback as well, as readers are our most valuable resource in this area.

ON THE HARBOR

Approval granted for Lobster Trap Tree

On Tuesday, Oct. 29, Selectmen approved a request from long-time resident, John Covell and others, to construct a lobster trap Christmas tree on Government Island off Border Street.

Covell originally approached Selectmen after seeing a similar tree in Hull this time last year. He then went on to research lobster trap Christmas trees on line and found that they were becoming traditions in many seafaring communities.

"The 'Grand-Daddy' is in Gloucester, which built their first tree in 2001," Covell said. "It has become a tradition ever since." Gloucester has made the construction of the tree and its lighting an annual event and Covell hopes to do the same in Cohasset. "We appreciate the Selectmen's support of our efforts. We think this will be a fun and unifying experience for our town."

Covell has also credited commercial lobsterman Ricky Barrows and others from the Cohasset lobster fleet for lending their traps to build the tree. "They have been super enthusiastic and we could not even think of doing this without their support."

Covell has approached Cohasset High School Principal Carolyn Connolly to have her math students develop a plan for the tree. "It is really a geometry project," said Covell. "We want the tree to be about 30 feet high with a 4-foot star on top." One would think that the folks working on this project could approach towns that have built lobster trap Christmas tree made of similar size traps and borrow their plans. "Not so," says Covell, "A rivalry has developed between the towns who build these trees and the creators hold their plans as highly kept secrets. We are on our own."

The group would like the 4-foot star on top of the tree to flash 1-4-3 in a 30 second sequence similar to Minot's Light. They hope that someone in town can find a way to do that.

The group would like the 4-foot star on top of the tree to flash 1-4-3 in a 30 second sequence similar to Minot's Light. They hope that someone in town can find a way to do that.

The tree will be decorated with lobster buoy "ornaments" from local commercial and private lobster fishers. They will also welcome buoy ornaments made by merchants, groups and individuals who choose to make one and decorate it. All traps and buoys can be retrieved by their owners when the tree is taken down after New Year's Day.

Assuming that a plan can be developed on time, the hope is to start the construction of the tree beginning on the Saturday after Thanksgiving, Nov. 30. The lighting ceremony is to be on the following Saturday evening Dec. 7, at 5 p.m.

"This will be a non-profit, all volunteer effort," said Covell. "We will have some one time, first year expenses for the star, all white lights, timers, electrical power and more that we expect to be around $1,000."

Anyone wishing to help with those expenses is asked to make a donation, no matter how small to: Cohasset Lobster Trap Tree, 83 Elm St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Parking crunch in town lot

Local dentist sends email with concerns

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager are trying to tackle parking issues in the town lot.

Local dentist Robert Thompson sent an email with several observations on increased use of the parking lot behind Main Street.

"The overflow situation in the town parking lot is creating some serious problems for individuals, particularly senior citizens and handicapped patients who need to use the medical clinics in the village," Thompson wrote. "Many of my own patients have limited mobility and have had serious issues with this."

Thompson said that he's noticed commuters "car pooling" to the train station on Route 3A, "leaving their cars in the lot essentially all day."

The dentist also asserted that he believed some commercial vehicles not belonging to local businesses are parking in the lot long-term, "taking up spaces for transient users." Also, according to Thompson, residents seem to park their cars in the lot during snowstorms so their driveways can be plowed. He is also concerned that parking limits are not enforced.

One of the remedies Thompson suggested is issuing windshield stickers to village residents, business owners and employees.

The selectmen took the issue up on Tuesday night, and Selectman Martha Gjesteby also suggested having a town parking sticker joined with the dump and beach sticker. Selectmen chair Fred Koed noted that, however, this would limit the parking lot to residents and other locals. However, he said that a time restriction is probably a good idea.

Selectman Steve Gaumer said that while it seems the use of the parking lot has risen, "The question is whether or not there's much nefarious use so much as constant use."

Koed said the board should address the "low-hanging fruit" of the issue, which seemed to be commuters.

Gaumer added that before the board "jumps to the supposition" that commuters are carpooling, "we need to observe that."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that he had the police department study the parking issue and said that at the time, "less than a handful" of commuters were "hopping out of their cars" and leaving them in the town lot all day. He said he would have the acting police chief reinvestigate the matter.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy suggested that the matter be added to an upcoming meeting agenda so it can be discussed more thoroughly. Koed said he would "flag" the issue.

It is unclear if the overflow parking problems in the Town Lot could be related to increased parking enforcement and ticketing around the Town Common on Highland Avenue, Jason and Long roads where parking is restricted except for Sundays.

The fine for a parking ticket is $25; the fine doubles to $50 for parking in front of a fire hydrant and doubles again to $100 for parking in a handicapped space.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Ticket totals:

- In 2012 police wrote a total of $28,575 in parking tickets.
- In 2013 through Oct. 17, police have written $34,875 in parking tickets.

VETERANS DAY

Vets Summit big success

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset made it clear that the town is committed to providing veterans' services with a special summit this past Saturday.

The veteran's benefits forum was held in St. Anthony's Parish Center (100 Summer St.) from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 2.

The summit was the second in what town officials hope to continue offering year after year. Last year's event attracted over 100 veterans; this year garnered approximately 175.

This year's summit also saw more regional participation; eight other local towns – Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Plymouth and Scituate – took part in the event.

Cohasset Veterans Service Officer (VSO) Vincent Fountaine said that the eventual goal is to have the event rotate among the participating towns. "We're going to move the event around to different towns each year," he told the Board of Selectmen last week. "Everybody's on board...other veterans service officers are calling. I think it's going to be really good event."

Elder Affairs Director Coral Grande, who helped coordinate the forum with Fountaine, said she was pleased by the event's success.

"The energy that was generated, both between the veterans and the representatives of the organizations and also among the organizations themselves, was contagious. It was great to listen to the interaction of each of the groups. Listening to veterans swap stories or meet buddies once again after many years was nothing less than inspiring. I was both awestruck and humbled at the same time.

"The support for this event was incredible," Grande continued. "The tenacious work by each of the VSOs in each of the nine towns, the generous outpouring of food donated by the local restaurants, and the ease of St. Anthony's in hosting this event — everything came together in a positive, worthwhile, and hopefully long lasting way."

Grande said it was an honor to be associated with the groups that put on the summit who work together to "try to connect veterans and their families to organizations that can assist them."

Grande explained that the purpose of offering the summit is to honor a past promise Cohasset as a community made to veterans.

"In 2011, several of you [officials] participated in Cohasset's military covenant," Grande shared at a recent selectmen's meeting. "It was a promise, a public promise to support veterans and their families, making any possible resources available to them."

The promise meant more than just a signature, said Grande. "It'd be easy if this was [just] a document, but we didn't want that to happen... We used it as a springboard to launch other events."

Saturday's summit included eight breakout work sessions led by various organizations for veterans and their families on housing, employment, education, loans, women veterans' issues, Department of Veterans services, VA health care, and veterans centers. There were 34 participating organizations.

Also on hand was the Brockton Vet Center mobile van for confidential psychological assessment, along with the Lions Club van for hearing and visual exams.

A highlight of the day was a huge destroyer replica on display in the St. Anthony's parking lot, adding a little family fun to the event.

The day also included sessions by UMass Boston and Upward Bound on educational opportunities and benefits, and changes brought about by the state senate's Valor Act I and II. Act II is an extension of Act I, which was written by Senator Mike Rush, an Afghanistan War Veteran, that helps solidify the state's place "on the cutting edge in providing benefits to military servicemen and women and their families," Grande explained.

The Elder Affairs director's daughter, Cynthia Lewis, who is a legislative aide to Sen. Bruce Tarr, presented three sessions on Valor Acts I and II. Act II was passed unanimously by the senate and house over the past week and is expected to be signed by Gov. Deval Patrick by Veterans' Day, according to Grande.

Cohasset's veterans' summit started small last year and has already "grown into a South Shore regional event," said Grande.

The event even attracted a special guest – Boston Marathon hero and peace activist Carlos Arredondo – who unfortunately had to cancel at the last minute. After the Red Sox won the World Series last week, Arredondo was invited to be part of the team's Duck Boat parade in Boston on Saturday.

Still, it seems the summit was a success. Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said she attended on Saturday and was quite impressed.

"It was really well done and well attended," Kennedy shared with the rest of her board during Tuesday's selectmen meeting. "There were all kinds of tables where people could learn about benefits... It was a great day for Cohasset to host such a wonderful event."

The summit sought to offer veterans guidance with some serious issues.

"One in seven veterans are homeless and 30 percent are without jobs," said Grande. "This is a national statistic; it's not a Cohasset statistic, but it could be."

Grande said that as Elder Affairs director, her function is to offer assistance to older veterans; but there are plenty of young veterans with struggles. This is where having a VSO in Cohasset, Fountaine, who works alongside Hingham VSO Keith Jermyn, is essential, she said.

Grande told the selectmen, "The best thing you ever did was hire Vinnie. He's great to work with in helping veterans and families. Elder Affairs couldn't ask for a better partner.

"Having Cohasset's own VSO working closely with Keith Jermyn out of Hingham changes the face of veterans services," Grande continued. "Vinnie works directly with veterans, tackling healthcare," and also works "hand in hand" with the elders department, she said. "It's a wonderful partnership. Everybody benefits from this."

Last Saturday's summit kicked off nearly a week's worth of veterans-related events (see sidebar).

For more information on veterans' services, contact VSO Vincent Fountaine at 781-635-4407 or email vfountaine@cohassetma.org. For more on elder affairs, contact Director Coral Grande at 781-383-9112 or email cgrande@cohassetma.org.

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

What makes a home historic?

Cohasset house tour is slated for Dec. 5

In the Northeast, we enjoy homes from the 17th century and a generous number from the 18th and 19th centuries. Cohasset's historic buildings are a part of our every day experience.

By Jan Todd
Special to the Mariner

Having gathered a few people, who know Cohasset extremely well, around my kitchen table one autumn afternoon recently, with the promised payoff of a hot cup of tea, one hoped for 20 minutes of descent discussion on the topic "What do historic homes offer to a community?" The conversation was animated, however, and approaching one and a half hours, before I put the kettle on to boil. There were differences of opinion for sure: there were those who recognized and admitted a special love for very old homes and would do whatever it took to protect them and to keep them in their original state. On the other end of the spectrum was the opinion that an owner of an antique home has a responsibility to the community to preserve the outside look of an earlier period but should just do whatever is desired to the interior and have fun with it.

Cards on the table: Yuletide 2013, the house tour of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, will open five Cohasset homes, beautifully decorated for the holidays, on Thursday, Dec. 5. This will be a special house tour since 80 percent of those homes are historic homes or a part of an estate with a long Cohasset history. America's historic homes are so often the center of attention. In many a small town with only one post: 1800 home — a home may become the historical center and heart of the town. In some states there are "historical villages," of buildings, carried into that center from hundreds of miles around, to create a sense of history in an area, such as the Southwest, where humidity is high and insects are hungry. Not many of their wooden homes have survived. In the Northeast, we enjoy homes from the 17th century and a generous number from the 18th and 19th centuries. Cohasset's historic buildings are a part of our every day experience.

What is "historic"? How old does a building have to be to be considered historic? This question was given consideration by those sitting around the table. They were: Kathy O'Malley, President of the Cohasset Historical Society, who can as easily suggest the name of a preservation architect as she can vehemently support the need for an organized historical presence in a community — but always in the nicest possible way and with a twinkle in her eye; Phil Smith, who has had decades of work in interior design in both Boston and Cohasset, with hundreds of historical homes under his belt; Janice Crowley, real estate agent, who has served on Cohasset's Historic District Commission for 10 years and specializes in historic homes; and Lynne DeGiacomo, an attorney by training, who has owned and lived in an 1835 Cohasset home for the past 15 years and is also the Executive Director of the Cohasset Historical Society. "Historic" can be a subjective definition or there are the rules of institutions. For example, Kathy said that any home, 50 years or older, can be on the National Register of Historic Places if the building is seriously associated with an important person, event, or represents a particular architectural style. The consensus, however, seemed to be that we were mainly talking about homes built not later than World War I. Most of Cohasset's older homes were built by people connected to its port, shipbuilding, farmers, or by the wealthy Victorians who graced Cohasset with their large summer homes.

Lynne felt passionately that if one bought a historic home that one should be committed to a historical restoration. "I don't mean that one has to restore using horsehair plaster but one should keep as close to the original home as possible." That may mean that the home does not easily fit into a modern family's life. The rooms may be small. There may not be an equivalent to a family room. Then why would one want to live in a historic home? "I may be crazy," suggested Lynne, "but if so, there are thousands of crazy homeowners who also love and restore their historic homes." Recently the Globe Magazine highlighted various types of older homes. One owner said of her 1686 home, "It is definitely easier and cheaper to build new," but she said she wanted to protect the home from further damage since a 1686 home is so rare. "It is extraordinary that someone could own one," she said. Essentially our group concurred that people who do historic restoration and protect America's architectural heritage act as stewards by keeping homes as authentic as possible for generations to come. Owners appreciate the character of their homes. They usually have unique features and have been built well with superior materials. There is pride in ownership. "It is a pain in the neck that I feel so strongly about this," said Lynne. "It is an expensive choice." Specialists are hard to find. One must repair and repair again, always trying to save original plaster, etc. "Save the windows!" Lynne's determination was echoed in the Globe article: "Never, never, never throw away old windows....(They) are made of clean wood and glass, and once rebuilt are good for another 200 years." Most people who do a historical restoration, even those with the firmest commitment to historic elements, do want modern amenities but without damaging the historic fabric. Adding a modern family kitchen, a good heating system, and attractive bathrooms takes much thought.

Phil said that for many home owners a historical restoration "was a wealthy man's hobby and a poor man's aggravation." He felt that if one purchased a period house that the exterior should be kept within its period, but that renovation, not restoration, was in keeping with the wishes of the majority of people with whom he dealt. By renovating, the look of the home is saved by the purchaser. The part that is private is what is changed. He said that the existence of historic homes was a part of the reason why people find Cohasset charming. "Of course it is not only the architecture. It is the trees, the plantings, the rocky coast which all work together here." Phil suggested that it was good to fix the essentials such as electricity, plumbing, etc. and then live in the house for a year. By that time you will understand how the light hits the home and know if and what you want to change. "Then do it! Have fun with your house!" Of course some people purchase old homes which are in terrible condition and plan to tear them down immediately. Thus, it is reasonable to have a demolition delay law to allow time to explore options. There is also a Historic Building Inspectors Association, which might be of help in thinking about dealing with a historic home. All agreed that the Cohasset Common Historical District, a District of the National Register of Historic Places, was a town treasure.

One looks from the outside but does not often have the opportunity to enter historic homes. On Dec. 5, two houses will be a part of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's house tour, one built in 1793 and another built in 1850. In addition, in another part of town, one of the wonderfully huge Victorians will be included. According to Cohasset's historical records, the fourth home began its life as a stable, morphed into a garage, then shingle style cape, and on into the fabulous building it is today as it absorbs the light of Little Harbor. Only our fifth home stands as the symbol of contemporary design. Tickets are now on sale for $30 in many spots around town: Buttonwood Books, Countryhouse Furniture and Interiors, Darilynn's, Fleming's of Cohasset Village, and Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room. On the day, Thursday, December 5, tickets will cost $35 and be available only at St. Anthony's Center. Come and explore!

FOOTBALL PLAYOFFS

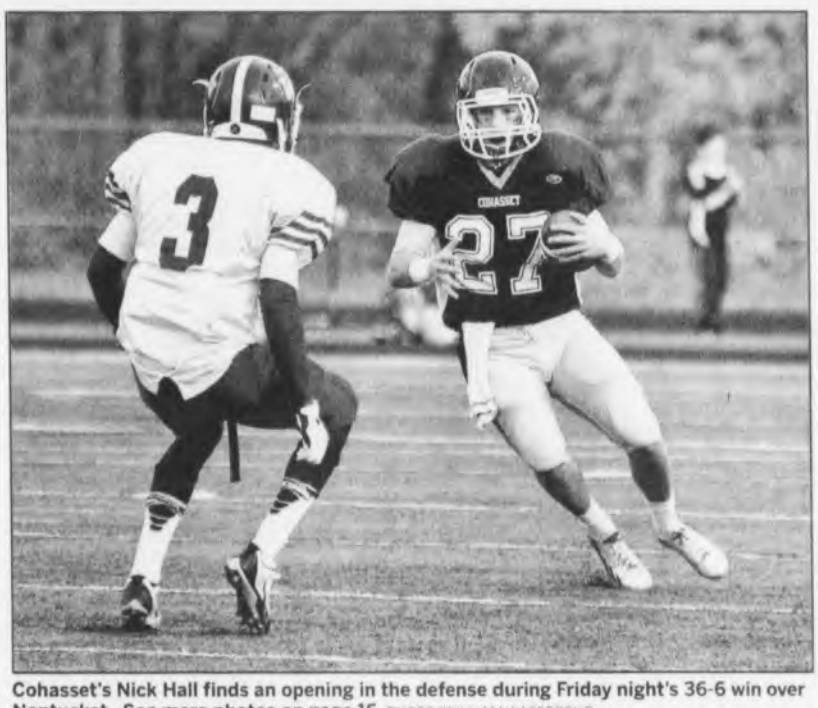
Skippers seeing Blue

Playoff victory brings Blue Hills to town

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset and Blue Hills football teams each won playoff games Saturday to advance to a semifinal showdown in the Division 6 South Sectional tournament.

Top-seeded Cohasset (7-1) will host No. 4 Blue Hills (6-2) tonight at 7 p.m.



No. 2 Diman (7-1) plays No. 3 Millis/Hopedale (6-2) in the other semifinal.

Cohasset, making its first playoff appearance since 2009, routed No. 8 Nantucket, 35-6, behind a pair of 5-yard rushing touchdowns from Cole Kissick (19 carries for 134 yards). Ryan Gillis added 120 yards and a TD on 16 carries. Rocco Laugelle chipped in a 14-yard TD run, and Chris Haggerty threw an 18-yard scoring pass to Jack Donohue.

Cohasset did not allow a touchdown as Nantucket (4-4) managed only a pair of field goals.

Blue Hills trailed Bristol-Plymouth, 16-8, after three quarters but rallied for a 24-14 win as Dimitri Revolus rushed for a pair of fourth-quarter TDs. Revolus finished with three scores.

Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw was pleased with his team's play, with the exception of one aspect – penalties. He hopes his team will play a similar game against Blue Hills.

"For the most part we played well enough to win, even though the first half was pretty plagued by penalties," Afanasiw said "From Blue Hills, we are expecting a power running game, that has three explosive backs and a very athletic offensive line.

Defensively, Blue Hills is an aggressive blitzing style team, that tries to disrupt plays with penetration. We will need to improve in our execution in all aspects of the game, in order to compete Friday night."

Afanasiw said the win added to their confidence and motivation.

"The boys have worked hard, and are really looking forward to playing Friday night," he said. "The first playoff victory was quite special to be a part of, but this group is well grounded and really has remained focused all season long. They will be ready to go at 7 p.m. on Friday."

FIELD HOCKEY

Amazing run

Girls get to semifinals

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Heading into the season, the Cohasset field hockey team set a few goals for itself and hit the turf hoping to accomplish them.

Mission accomplished.

Despite Wednesday afternoon's 3-1 loss at No. 1 seeded Apponoquet in the Div. 2 South semifinal, the season was a definite success.

"They're undefeated," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "I thought it was doable, but they are a powerful team."

Giuliano felt her team was in the running the entire game.

"In the first half we dominated," she said. "We just couldn't put it in the net. Toward the end of the season we had some trouble scoring. You can't win if you don't score."

Giuliano said Apponoquet had a couple of talented scorers. When they get control, they scored. A couple of times they broke away and scored."

No matter the outcome in the semifinals – this was definitely a good season.

A special run

Boys head to semifinals

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset boys soccer coach Jim Willis has a soft spot in his heart for Penalty Kick shootouts when it involves his squad.

He has good reason.

After Monday night's 2-1 PK (4-3) win, Willis' teams improved to 5-0 in games that came down to the wire.

"It's my fifth straight PK shootout win," Willis said Monday night after the win that sends Cohasset into Thursday's semifinal against West Bridgewater. "Since I've been here (Cohasset) we're 5-0."

Willis said his team enjoys the PK because of trust in goaltender Pat Federle and a team with confidence shooting in the shootouts.

"Our guys seem to have a knack for getting it on net," he said. "They know the key is to keep it simple.

"Our goalie (Federle) has a reputation. He's a big kid and he forces opponents to get cute. Carver hit one off the post and one over the goal."

The star in the shootout was Ben Buckley, who didn't get on the field in regulation or overtime.

"Ben wasn't in the game, but he scored," Willis said. "We hit our first four kicks. Our kids don't miss."

Joe Buckley, Cole Morrison and Teddy Craven also scored in the shootout."

In the first half, Cohasset took the lead with a goal by Adam Benson, but Carver came out strong in the second half and had Cohasset reeling a bit.

"They had us on our heels," Willis said. "We were trying to protect a lead."

South Shore League MVP Tyler Johnson had other ideas however, scoring the tying goal in the second half.

During the regular season, the teams split, each winning on their home fields.

In the playoff opener for Cohasset, Friday afternoon, the Skippers beat Archbishop Williams 2-1 in regulation.

Matt Legge and Joe Buckley scored the goals for the Skippers.

In the Archbishop Williams game, the game got a bit physical early, and Willis had to keep his squad focused on the game, rather than arguing with officials over legitimate non-calls.

"It's important that we know the refs are the refs," Willis said, supporting the officials. "They're not going to change calls. This time of year, some of the kids know this could be their last game. The kids get hyped up."

Willis appreciates what his team accomplished regardless of last night's game against West Bridgewater (results were unavailable at press time).

"We've had two really difficult games," he said. "Both times we took the early lead and had to dig deep and hang on."

As for the shootouts, Willis was comfortable.

"I knew we'd pull it off," he said. "We have kids who can make those kicks every time."

CROSS COUNTRY

Cross country starts new tradition

Scituate cross country hosting new race as fundraiser

On Saturday Nov. 30, the Scituate Cross Country team will be co-sponsoring a new race, Scituate Reunion Run.

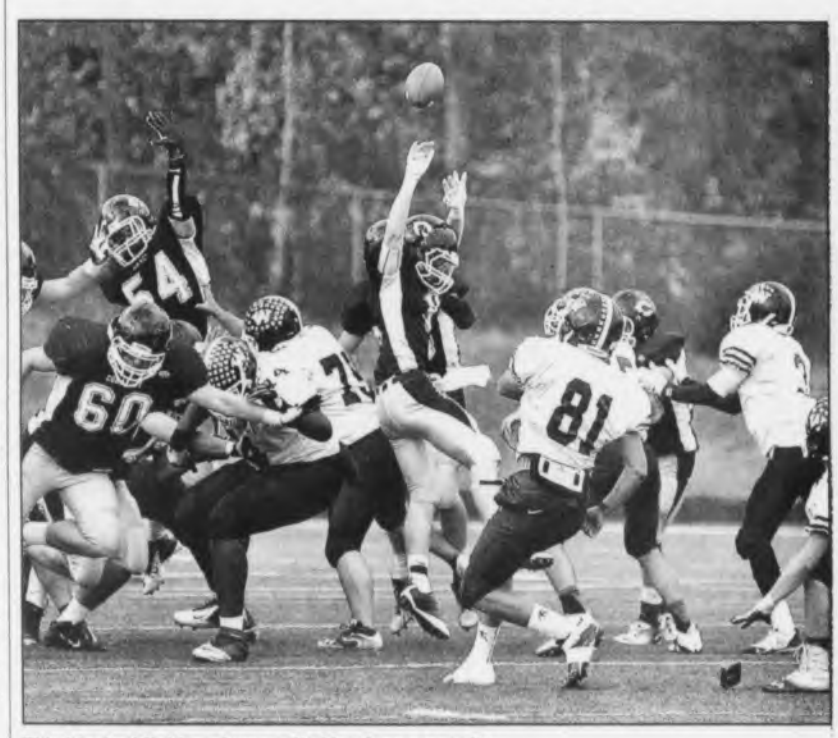
Simply, it is the exact route that the Cross Country team runs for their home meets, 2.8 miles and it is open to anyone.

The idea came from former team member and graduate, Mike Jacobs, who thought it would be nice to have a race the weekend people visit town for Thanksgiving and return to Scituate for class reunions. It isn't limited to Scituate High alumni, it is open to anyone that wishes to participate. The proceeds will benefit Scituate High Cross Country and the American Heart Association in memory of Roger Jacobs.

"We are trying to be a little different, not your typical road race. The high school team works hard to accomplish success on this course, and they wanted to share it with the public." The course starts at the high school, briefly goes into the adjoining neighborhood, and through a path back to the high school which makes it very spectator friendly for families to enjoy the fun.

"We wanted to make it a good learning experience for the student athletes so we created a Board of Directors consisting of athletes from cross country and track. They have been working hard to put it all together, learning the ins and outs of what makes a race happen." The Board of Directors includes: Brian Stewart, Jake Reynolds, Jamie Kelleher, Shannan Callanan, Aaron O'Connell, Trent Linker and Maria Garman.

Race Details: Saturday Nov. 30



Mens race: 9:00am, Womens race: 9:45am

Registration is limited to 100 in each race so register early

Cost: $20.00 if registered by Nov. 24, $25.00 day of race.

"We've had a great season and a great team," Giuliano said. "We have a very dedicated talented group of young women. They support each other and work together."

As for the goals the team set, Giuliano explains.

"One of our goals was to win the South Shore League Championship, they are," she said. "Another was to play well in the tournament. I'm really, really proud of them."

Giuliano had praise for several players.

"Mcackenzie Axelson is a senior," Giuliani said. "She played heroically. We knew them a little bit from last year. They had a diagonal pass across the field. Mackenzie saw it and came up with the ball more than not. Kathryn Dunn has also played very well. She'll be missed."

Another big-time player is Caty Gilman, who will return next year.

"She really stirs things up on the forward line," Giuliano said. "She gets multiple breakaways. Today she couldn't convert, but she's done a great job. What she does is enormous. It's exhausting to watch her."

Giuliani said she'll lose a number of seniors, but many of her key players and younger.

"We'll start filling some spots," she said. "We have some very good younger players. We have a substantial core coming back.

WORLD SERIES

Tale of two cities

Wicked Local photographer experiences World Series as a fan

By Mark Gardner
The Hanover Mariner

There was a moment, in the relative calm of the second inning on Wednesday night at Fenway Park, when time seemed to stand still, if just for a moment. I was keenly aware of the cold air hanging around the storied ballpark. It seemed to desaturate the colors to the point where they seemed muted, reminding me of old 16mm film stock from yesteryear.

My mind wandered back across the timeline of the past six months. Back to the afternoon of April 15, when I received a text from my wife who was in a store close to the finish line of the marathon the day all of our lives were changed forever. I had scrambled to find out what had happened, to find out if anyone was hurt, my colleagues and I gathered around computer screens in shock at the scenes we were witnessing.

So much has happened over the course of these past six months, but many of the images and memories came flooding back as I stared out, down the third base line, towards home plate, still trying to comprehend how we had arrived at this point, Game 6 of the World Series at Fenway Park, our home away from home.

If Boston is my adopted home, then St Louis is my ancestral home. My father, and his father before him, grew up there, having moved from Tennessee towards the turn of the previous century.

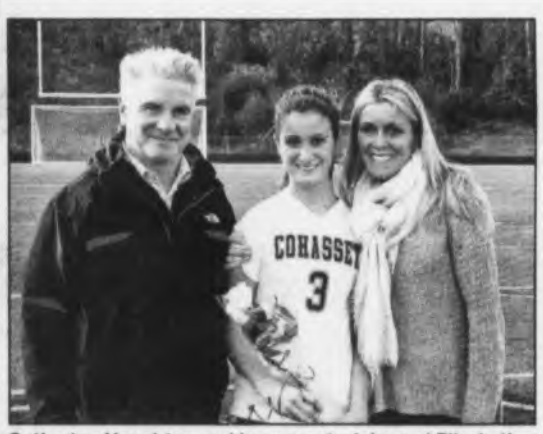
My grandfather owned a car company in the 1920's. He test drove the finished cars around the St Louis docks with my father on his lap. Dad used to reminisce with me about Cardinals baseball, how as a kid he would go to see the "Gashouse Gang" of the '30's tear it up, and later how he would drink in local bars with some of the old Cardinal greats, like Musial, and Lanier, and Slaughter.

Players were more accessible in those days, when agents and entourages were in short supply. They were working class stiffs just like everyone else. I remember going to a game at the old Busch Stadium back in 1982, and watching aghast as Ozzie Smith defied the laws of physics, turning mind-blowing double play after mind-blowing double play. I haven't been back to St Louis in over 20 years, and although progress has brought new buildings to the area, and a new beautiful ballpark, some things haven't changed at all.

It was a sun drenched Sunday morning as I strode from the gate to baggage claim at Lambert Field Airport in St Louis, anxious to meet up with my wife, Deirdre, and our gracious guests who had invited us to Game 4. I was greeted by a sign welcoming all Red Sox fans to St Louis. From that point on I entered a twilight zone of kindness. And not the fake kind. Midwesterners are sincere, and their kindness is heartfelt. Everywhere we went, folks wore T-shirts, hats, and jackets creating a sea of Cardinal red. And though my wife and I wore our Red Sox gear, initially in defiance of the red tide, we were greeted with nothing but smiles and back slaps, and handshakes from everyone around us.

Several TV stations wanted to interview us, after all we were exotic to them. They pressed us about the obstruction call from the previous night, expecting perhaps a tirade of expletives and dropped 'r's, but by then we, too, had adopted that rising tide of gentility, and simply spoke in reverent tones about seeing the new ballpark, and the statues of greats from the past out front.

Game 4 seemed almost secondary to the atmosphere inside Busch Stadium. I say that because you had the feeling the Cardinals fans would continue smiling, win or lose. There wouldn't be any cars overturned or fires started. It's just not their way. The large screens scattered around the park exhorted their fans to make more noise, to shout "charge," to wave their towels, and they dutifully obliged. When Red Sox closer Koji Uehara picked off Kolten Wong at first to end another wildly fluctuating game, the few Sox fans that were there exchanged high fives in celebration. Then the Cardinals fans turned to us and shook our hands, gracious and gentle as ever in defeat.



I moved to Boston almost 14 years ago from London, but I've been a Red Sox fan since college, and have enjoyed each and every visit to Fenway Park, which by now numbers in the hundreds. My favorite game, until this past week, was the last game of the 2006 season when Devern Hansack took a perfect game into the 6th inning of a rain-soaked Sunday afternoon match-up against Baltimore, only to have the game rained out.

Deirdre and I make a point of going to the last game of every season, whether it's relevant of not. We stayed for 4 hours and waited, with about 500 other fans, to see if play might restart. It didn't, and the perfect game remained, well, sort of intact. It wasn't an important game in the scheme of things. Nothing was at stake, certainly not a World Series, but we stayed, and explored the heart of Fenway Park. We sat in seven different areas around the ballpark.

I say it was the most memorable game I'd ever attended, because last week we had the incredible good fortune to get tickets to Game 6 of the World Series. Yes, that game. The clinching game at Fenway Park. We stood for most of the game, with almost 40,000 of our red-socked brothers and sisters in arms, absorbing every moment, every pitch, every foul ball, every RBI. Nothing was missed by anyone on Wednesday night. I'm quite sure plenty of beer was consumed, and plenty of hot dogs were eaten that night, but I hardly remember any one leaving their seats. Nobody wanted to miss a second of this game. It meant too much to all of us.

There were so many memorable moments from the game itself, more than I have space for here, but watching The Dropkick Murphy's tearing it up, witnessing Lackey's first pitch (a strike) being greeted by a deafening roar from the crowd that foreshadowed what was to come later, and of course seeing Shane Victorino's triple clang off the Green Monster to the left of us putting the Sox ahead for good moments after the crowd chanted their very own version of Bob Marley's "Three Little Birds", were all unforgettable.

As closer Koji Uehara stood on the mound, steeling himself to make what would be the last pitch of the 2013 season, I turned to my wife, hugged and kissed her. As the final pitch hit David Ross' glove, and the crowd roared as one, just for a moment, all the troubles and worries of the past 6 months were swept away. We were all in our favorite place to be in the world, our home away from home.

Where the Mayflower really started

By Chris Evans
Special to the Mariner

English comedian Eddie Izzard has a line that goes: "The Pilgrim Fathers set sail from Plymouth and landed in Plymouth – How lucky is that?"

Very lucky, actually, because Plymouth was never on the itinerary; the true origin of the Mayflower's voyage to the new world lies 200 miles further east in a part of London called Rotherhithe.

Rotherhithe hugs the south bank of the River Thames just downstream from the Tower of London. It is an ancient area steeped in maritime history. Christopher Jones, the master and part-owner of the Mayflower, lived locally.

In July 1620, he set off from Rotherhithe for America with about 65 passengers on board. The Mayflower stopped in Southampton to meet The Speedwell, a sister ship coming from the Netherlands with religious separatists who had been squeezed out of England by the Anglican Church under King James I. These individuals were known as non-conformists, dissenters or independents. Today we call them Congregationalists.

In Southampton the ships would take on provisions and proceed directly across the Atlantic. But The Speedwell kept springing leaks. Finally, 300 miles into the Atlantic, they were forced to turn back to the nearest suitable port – which happened to be Plymouth. The Speedwell was left in Plymouth for repairs, while many of its company jammed into the Mayflower for the voyage to New England. But for this happenstance, the Plymouth colony would have had a different name – maybe Rotherhithe, or Redriffe as it was known in the 17th century.

The Rotherhithe wharf from which the Mayflower departed is behind a pub, then known as The Shippe. Today it is called The Mayflower, the oldest pub on the River Thames. It is well worth a visit from the more adventurous visitor eager to explore beyond the usual tourist sites of London. The pub is a bit hard to find, its seclusion aided by the narrow surrounding streets, too small for tour buses. But it is well worth a visit if you want enjoy a beer (picture) while you stand at the spot where the Mayflower started its voyage to the new world.

The pub is adjacent to St Mary's church where Christopher Jones is buried and his children were Christened. A plaque on the tower of the church commemorates the sailing of the Mayflower (see picture). St. Mary's has been said to contain timbers from the Mayflower, but this is impossible to verify, especially as the fate of the ship after it returned from America is largely unknown.

If you're looking for somewhere different to spend Thanksgiving this year, consider popping over to Rotherhithe where, for £24.95 (about $40), the Mayflower provides a three-course Thanksgiving dinner that starts with chowder, progresses to turkey and ends with pumpkin pie. Just like at home, but a bit closer to the origins of the United States of America.

The author is the Maurice Müller Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery at Harvard Medical School. He grew up not far from the Mayflower pub, but now lives at 36, Sohier St.

GIMME SHELTER

Sara wants a forever home for her birthday

Oh where do we even begin with Sara? One look and you see her beautiful face, lit up with bright green eyes, alert and curious, longing for love and affection. And guess what? Next week is Sara's first birthday! Nov. 11, 2013. How special it would be for her to receive the best present of all, a loving and affectionate forever home where she can be a kitten again herself.

Sara has a story. One that a little girl shouldn't have to tell. It all began with a much needed rescue since living under a deck is no life for any young kitten, especially one as beautiful and sweet as Sara. Even more remarkable is the fact that she had delivered a litter kittens! Pregnant at 6 months? A mom by 8 months? How unfair. Well, once rescued, many lives were saved and oh my, it was a rush for us at the shelter to provide her an immediate foster placement. Fortunately, Sara was taken in and treated to warmth, security and love along with her eight, yes, you read it right, eight babies. It's been a trying time but she is a beautiful survivor. Take a look at her photo again. It's hard to believe what she has been through and how she did it all at such a tender age.

Now that Sara has weaned her little ones, she is going to have her procedure and be ready to return to the life of a kitten, with everyone fawning over her, loving her, playing with her and making her world a joy filled delight forever. Being such a youngster, she is really enjoying exploring, watching activity outside the window in her room, and rubbing up against your leg. Spending some time on your lap, she will walk about and circle and then settle in for a while letting you know she appreciates your attention, communicating with delightful, deep purrs.

With gorgeous Tortie fur and a snow-white bib, Sara is positively stunning. And to make things even better, her unique features include front double paws! Tipped with little white mittens, her left is black and the right is chestnut in color. Truly, this is one very special and adorable young kitty.

Is your loving home ready for a super special, spunky and sweet feline family member? Sara deserves the best of all worlds, and hopefully, she will find the right home very soon and begin living the life of a princess, which she certainly has earned.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Sara. She deserves a Happy Birthday and loving forever home so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for their best match and home by visiting HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events.

One request, and really, it is not too much to ask. If you have a male cat who is not yet altered, please, please bring him on in to HSAR during spay day. There are too many scoundrels out there preying on the youngest female felines who need to enjoy life without delivering kittens at 10 months old! That is just not right. And had Sara been spayed by 4 months old, things would be different, but here we are. Preventing babies from having babies is not just a human situation.

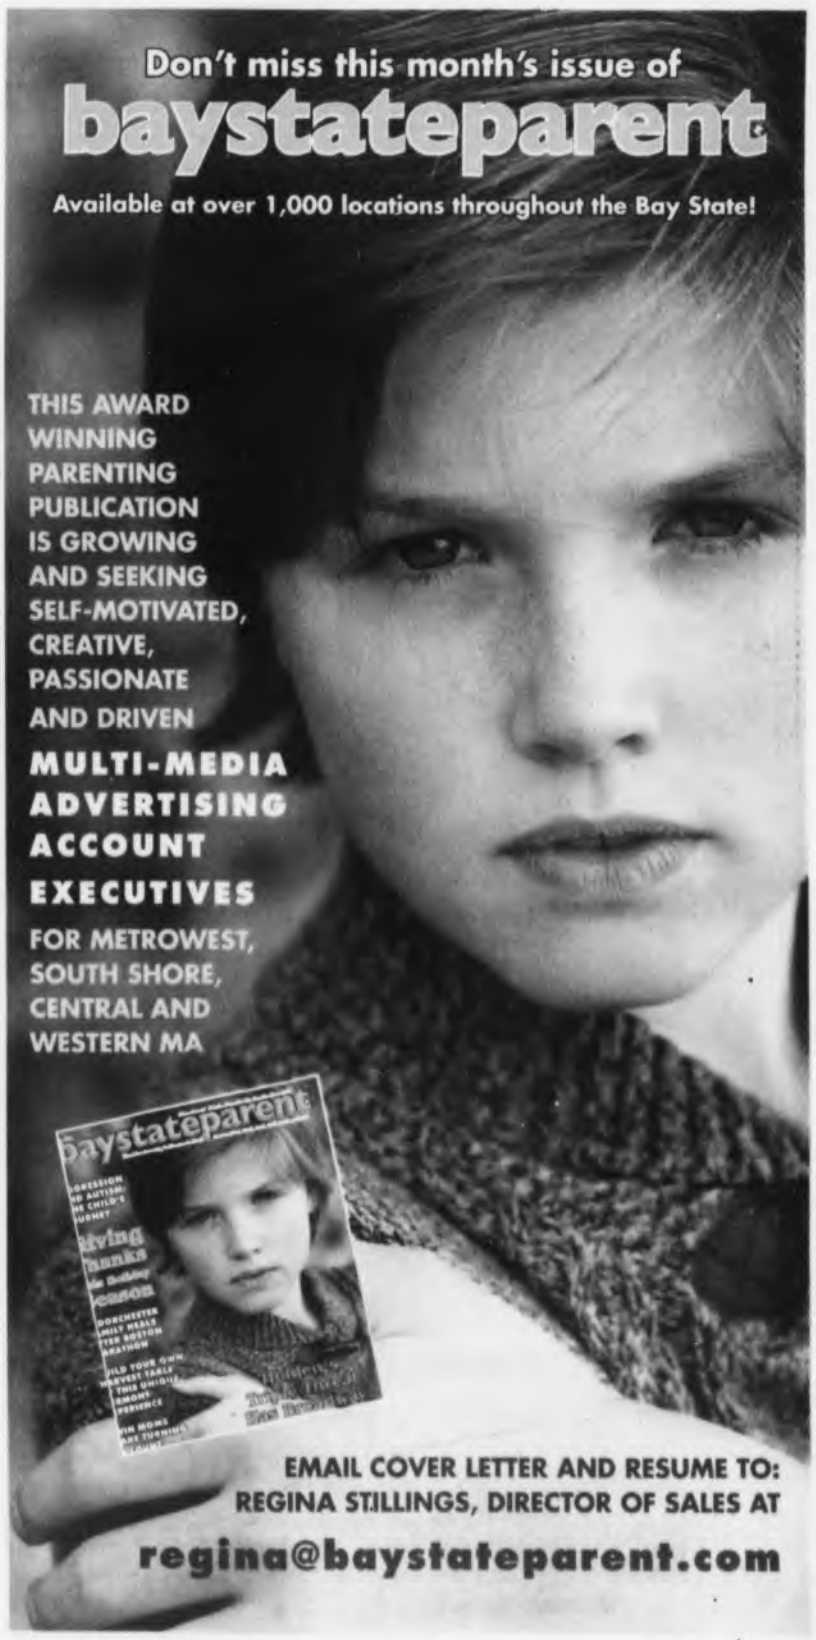
The Animal Rescue League Spay Waggin will be back at Hull Seaside on Nov. 19th. Please call 781-925-3121 for appointment and registration information. Each month HSAR partners with the ARL for affordable spay and neuter procedures so if you can't make it this month, check back in for the next date, but please, have your cats and kittens altered. Preventing unwanted litters is one of our missions and we are happy to have so many people making use of this service. It is the only way to save innocent babies from being abandoned and left alone trying to survive. Visit our website at hsar.org for updated information on upcoming spay days and events.

As always, volunteers are our lifeline and we are thrilled to have new members joining us! To all new volunteers we welcome you gratefully. The kittens and cats lives are made so much better with dedicated and dependable people who show them love and care that they need and deserve.

Thank you to those who came to the shelter last weekend with gifts of food and supplies for our residents. Bags filled with Fancy Feast and other canned foods were a welcome sight and we thank you all. Our wish list is on our website at hsar.org, but we are especially thankful for laundry supplies, canned food and dye free dry cat food. With the shelter at capacity, we use up all that is donated and appreciate your help.

Soft bedding is needed for our kittens who are awaiting their forever homes, and yes, as you can see, we still have litters coming in. It has been an unbelievably long kitten season! Sara's eight babies will be in the shelter soon and we want to make them as comfortable as possible.

If you would like to donate your bottles and cans to a wonderful cause, please come by 50 L St. or use our marked bins at A St. Liquors and Tedeschi's, across from the fire station, and at Nantasket Paint and Hardware in the Kenberma shopping center. We are so grateful to the businesses who have provided space for our bins. It is very important for the shelter. Thank you to everyone who makes this effort so successful for Hull Seaside, especially our tireless volunteers, Will and Bob, who collect and transport bags of donated recyclables for the shelter every week.



Just a reminder. Please spay and neuter...please.

HAPPENING NOV. 17

Cellist at First Parish Cohasset

The Third Sunday Series at First Parish Cohasset will host cellist Guy Fishman for a concert of Bach solo cello suites. Fishman will play a Baroque cello, different from the modern ones most are more familiar with, that will cast the Bach cello suites in a completely new light. This concert will be part of the Third Sunday Series at First Parish Cohasset at 3 p.m., on Sunday, Nov. 17. First Parish is on the green at North Main Street, Cohasset. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children. Children younger than 12 admitted for free.

Israeli-born cellist Guy Fishman is active as a concerto soloist, recitalist, chamber musician and orchestral player. He was recently appointed principal cellist of Boston's Handel & Haydn Society, with which he made his Symphony Hall solo debut in 2005. Fishman is in demand as an early music specialist in the United States and Europe, performing in recital and with Boston Baroque, Apollo's Fire, Emmanuel Music, the Boston Museum Trio, Arcadia Players and El Mundo. He performs on standard cello with the Orchestra of St. Luke's, The Mark Morris Dance Group, the Albany Symphony Orchestra, the Colorado Music Festival and the Springfield Symphony, where he has been guest principal cellist. He has performed in recital with Dawn Upshaw, Gilbert Kalish, Eliot Fisk, Daniel Stepner, Lara St. John, Richard Egarr and Mark Peskanov, and has toured and recorded with pop artist Natalie Merchant.

Fishman started playing the cello at age 12, and at 16 began his baccalaureate studies with David Soyer at the Manhattan School of Music. He subsequently worked with Peter Wiley, Julia Lichten and Laurence Lesser, with whom he completed doctoral studies at the New England Conservatory of Music. In addition, Fishman is a Fulbright Fellow, and spent his fellowship year in Amsterdam studying with Dutch cellist Anner Bylsma. Fishman has recorded for the Centaur, Telarc, Titanic and Newport Classics labels.

For more information about the concert or about a subscription to the concert series, call Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461. Tickets will only be sold at the door, not in advance.

St. Stephen's Concert Series presents the Seraphim Singers

The St. Stephen's Church Concert Series announces that the first concert of the 2013 – 2014 season will be held on Sunday, Nov. 10 at 4 p.m. The concert will be performed by the Seraphim Singers, directed by Jennifer Lester, and feature works for choir and organ by Benjamin Britten and Francis Poulenc.

Benjamin Britten was a prolific and accomplished composer. He was born almost exactly 100 years ago, on Nov. 22, 1913. He is perhaps most famous for creating works that are noted for their effective settings of the English language. The War Requiem and the Spring Symphony are two well known pieces that spring to mind that demonstrate how well he could use the natural rhythmic patters of speech and use them to inspire the music he created. The program on November 10 will include a performance of Britten's Hymn to St. Cecilia. St. Cecilia was the patron saint of music and musicians, and the music honors this saint as well as those who make, and listen, to music.

Also included on the program will be the Mass in G by Francis Poulenc. Poulenc was born in Paris in 1899 and created piano music, art song, oratorios, symphonic pieces, opera, ballet, and chamber music. At the turn of the 20th century the musical world was exploring new musical forms, including the highly rhythmic patters of jazz. Though Poulenc's music is not specifically jazzy, he does have a freedom of rhythmic expression that evokes the feeling of the day, and it enlivens his music and makes it fun to perform, and to listen to.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 18, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although your energy level is high, be careful not to commit to too many projects at this time. You'll do better focusing on just a few tasks rather than spreading yourself too thin.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your heart might be leading you in one direction, but pay attention to your keen Bovine intellect. I'm cautioning you to think things through before making any commitments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your "serious" Twin has been dominant in your life for quite a while. It's time now to let that "wilder" half take you out for some good times — perhaps with someone very special.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Career aspects are high for Moon Children who make a good impression. Show people not only what you can already do, but also how you can be more valuable to them in the future.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Things start to brighten for the Lion's immediate financial future. But be careful to resist the urge to splurge. You need to tuck something away to help you through another tight period.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Having to do too many tasks in too short a time could lower your mood to just above the grumbling level. But if you handle things one at a time, you'll get through it all soon enough.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your usually carefully made holiday plans could be subject to change later this month. Use this week to prepare for that possibility by starting a Plan B just in case you need it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be careful about joining a colleague's plan to solve a workplace problem. Investigate it thoroughly. Otherwise, you could find yourself in a predicament with other associates.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Slow down that high-paced whirl you've been on. Spending quiet time alone or with people you care for can be both physically and spiritually restorative.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Make suggestions, not demands. You'll be more successful in getting people to follow your lead if you exercise quiet patience instead of strong persuasion to get your ideas across.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You still need more facts before you can make an informed career choice. One note of caution: Be careful about whom you ask for that information; otherwise, you could be misled.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Changing situations through the end of the week could lead to some challenging opportunities for those perspicacious Pisceans who know how to make them work to their advantage.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of being both daring and cautious, traits that could make you a research scientist or maybe even a rocket-ship designer.

INTERVIEWS TO START

Five TM finalists named

Milanoski not among the finalists

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Five finalists have been named for Cohasset's permanent Town Manager position, but Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski is not among them.

Milanoski, who has worked as Cohasset's acting town manager since March 2012, applied for the position, as did 23 other applicants.

Also not in the final list: former town manager Michael Coughlin, whom Milanoski replaced after Coughlin was removed from office. Coughlin is currently in litigation with the town, seeking reinstatement.

Richard Kobayashi, senior associate with the UMass Collins Center for Public Management, who was hired by the Board of Selectmen in July to conduct the town manager search, revealed the names of the five candidates during the Wednesday, Nov. 13 selectmen meeting.

While the Collins Center was hired to assist the board with identifying candidates, it is now up to the selectmen to interview the finalists and make a selection.

Of the five candidates, only one has worked in Mass.; three hail from Rhode Island while one is located in New York.

The five finalists are as follows:

- William DiLibero, who was Town Administrator in Charlestown, Rhode Island from 2009 to 2012 and was previously Town Manager in Hopkinton, Rhode Island;
- Stephen Hartford, who was Town Manager of Westerly, Rhode Island from 2009 to 2013;

VETERANS DAY

Giving thanks

Cohasset holds harbor-side ceremony

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset is one town that remembers its veterans.

This year's annual Veterans Day ceremony took place on Monday, Nov. 11 at 11 a.m. in Cohasset's Veterans Memorial Park at the harbor. The event culminated nearly a week's worth of veterans ceremonies, including the second annual Veterans Benefits Summit and a ceremony at Deer Hill School.

On a cool but sunny November morning, former and current servicemen and women, along with their families, friends and neighbors, took time to reflect, and time to say thank you.

During a packed reception at the Sons of the American Legion Hall across the street from the memorial park, many a veteran could be seen chatting and enjoying the company.

David Forsythe, a Vietnam era veteran of 4th Infantry Division, was sitting with Herb Bearce of Scituate, a Bronze Star and Purple Heart recipient and U.S. Combat 36th Infantry European Division veteran of World War II, who served "in Africa, France, Germany and Austria, and lived to tell about it!" he said.

The Sons of the American Legion Historian, Philip Pratt shared that he remembers his grandfather each Veterans Day: Augustan Tribodeau, who served in World War II as a Navy nurse.

"At the Cohasset Legion we do what we can," said Pratt. "We support our veterans as much as we can."

Cohasset's Veterans Service Officer, Vincent Fountaine, was the ceremony's featured speaker. The VSO asked folks to "remember the fallen and show respect to those still

DOWN ON THE CORNER

New eatery opens where three towns meet

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In Cohasset – and Hull, and Hingham – good food is just around the corner.

The Corner Stop Eatery, located on 235 Hull Street in West Corner where the towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull meet, opened last month in the building that used to house Italian restaurant DeNiro's and is quickly becoming a local fixture. The logo says it all: a signpost representing the three towns.

Husband and wife team Ron and Rudy Vale, two self-proclaimed foodies who grew up on the East Coast and spent many years on the West Coast, chased their dream of starting their own restaurant — and landed on the South Shore location.

Ron explained the choice in name. "In our research for the restaurant, we uncovered a piece citing an old newspaper article about a tri-town wedding at West Corner, with the priest standing in Hull, the bride

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Help with homework

The Homework Center at Paul Pratt Memorial Library meets every Tuesday from 5:30 to 7 p.m. Students in grades 3 and up are encouraged to come to the library to complete their homework in a supervised setting. Tutoring is available from Cohasset High School National Honor Society students and light refreshments are provided.

COHASSET PSO

Program on teen drug use

Join the Cohasset PSO for a parent presentation with Dr. David Cingari, an emergency room physician at South Shore Hospital, and Detective Lieutenant Gregory Lennon of the Cohasset Police Department from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 19, at Cohasset Middle High School Library.

Dr. Cingari and Detective Lennon will share their understanding and experiences with South Shore teen use of alcohol, new street drugs (e.g., Molly), and new uses for older, more familiar drugs such as marijuana.

According to a University of Michigan poll, teens reported using alcohol and marijuana at 52 percent and 28 percent respectively, in 10th grade. In a similar poll of parents, just 10 percent believed their own teens had used alcohol and that 5 percent had used marijuana while they overestimated drug use by "other teens" (i.e., not their own teen).

We hope you will attend this important presentation. The more you know, the more you can do to help protect our children and community.

Any interested parent in the community is welcome. One does not need to be a parent of a CMHS student to attend. For questions or more information, contact Franchesca Arnold franchesca@cohasset.net or Diane Dutton (dsdutton@comcast.net) of the CMHS PSO.

POLICE BEAT

Two phone scams reported

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Phone scam

An 80-year-old Cohasset woman called police after receiving a call last week from someone, who claimed to be from a publishing company, that wanted to verify the numbers on her credit card. The woman, who was not familiar with the company, did not provide the information and called police.

Phone scam

A 69-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last Friday (Nov. 8) that he had received a call from someone claiming to be with the IRS saying that he owned $745 and if he did not pay immediately, he would be arrested. He called the IRS, which explained he did not owe any money and that they do not handle unpaid taxes in that manner. He also called the police to report the incident.

School van

Police responded to an accident involving a school van and a 2007 Nissan Xterra on Monday (Nov. 4) around 8:25 a.m. on Chief Justice Cushing Highway in front of Aubuchon Hardware.

Police said the Xterra, operated by a 49-year-old Marshfield man, was headed south and had stopped to make a left-hand turn into Aubuchon when it was hit from behind by the 2010 Chevrolet van at a high rate of speed. The school van was operated by a 26-year-old Hull woman who was cited for following too closely and for not having a driver's license in her possession.

Everyone was seat-belted including the van's 22-year-old passenger who is a special needs student. There were no reported injuries but the van that is owned by a private transportation company was towed because it had heavy front-end damage, police said.

Debit card

The 67-year-old owner of a business in the village reported to police on Monday (Nov. 4) that he was a victim of credit card fraud. Someone had compromised his debit card number and made 15 different changes of $9.50 each for products from a company in Danbury, Conn., for a total of $148.50. The victim never lost possession of his card and does not know how the person making the charges got his number. The victim is working with his bank for reimbursement and wanted to file a report with the police.

Larceny charge

A 53-year-old Scituate woman is facing the felony charge of larceny from a person over $250 after she allegedly asked to see a diamond ring inside Cohasset Antiques on King Street at 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday (Nov. 5) and ran out of the door with it, police said.

The owner of the store chased the suspect on foot toward Dunkin' Donuts and witnesses were able to get a plate number and description of the vehicle before she took off, police said.

Cohasset police put out a BOLO (be on the lookout) for a dark –colored VW Beetle; Scituate police stopped the car on Hatherly Road. Cohasset police responded and placed Julie Gallagher, 53, of 100 Lighthouse Road, Scituate, under arrest on the larceny charge. She was bailed later that evening and was arraigned the next morning in Quincy District Court.

Inquiry

A 42-year-old Forest Avenue resident called police last week after reading a commentary in the Cohasset Mariner about possible election campaign finance violations. He was told the information was forwarded to the appropriate state agencies to look into.

Stolen tools

An 85-year-old Cohasset man, who owns a local business, reported to police last week (Nov. 7) that someone had broken into his barn on Beechwood Street and stole $1,000 in welding-type tools. Officers responded and found the paddle lock on the door was missing. There are no suspects at this time but detectives are continuing to investigate.

Mother advised

A detective on patrol noticed that a 7-year-old girl in the Avalon complex was playing in the parking lot far away from any of the residences last Thursday (Nov. 7) around 5:30 p.m. after dark. Another officer in a marked cruiser arrived and police talked to the girl who directed them to her home. Police spoke with her 40-year-old mother who explained the child had wandered off while playing. She was advised to keep a closer eye on her daughter, police said.

Restraining order

A 22-year-old Scituate woman was arrested on Friday (Nov. 8) around 9:20 p.m. after her estranged husband (a Norwell resident) reported she had showed up at his place of employment at Shaw's Plaza. He had an active restraining order out against her, police said. Officers responded to the Plaza where they located Alyssa G. Blakeman of 124 Tack Factory Pond Road. She was arrested and charged with violation of a 209A order. She was ordered held without bail by the clerk magistrate until arraignment on Tuesday. Therefore, Cohasset police had to hire matrons over the long holiday weekend to watch her.

Broken window

The owner of the Corner Eatery in West Corner reported that a pellet from a BB gun had gone through the window at the restaurant. The window is valued at $500. Police said the pellet came from the direction of Rockland Street in Hingham.

Summons

A 37-year-old Cohasset woman who works at the Red Lion Inn is being summonsed to court to face the charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon for allegedly assaulting a fellow employee with a bag of ice on Saturday (Nov. 9) around 5:10 p.m.

Police responded to a call from another female employee who said she had just been assaulted and the other woman had taken off. Witnesses provided the plate number and police went to the suspect's home on Beechwood Street.

Police said the women had words that led to the 37-year-old allegedly hitting the 33-year-old with the bag of ice in the face. Several people witnessed the incident, police said.

Police have also referred the case to the Board of Selectmen, which is the licensing authority because the incident occurred inside a licensed premises and alcohol was allegedly involved.

Shoplifting

CVS called police on Saturday (Nov. 9) around 7:46 p.m. when a Scituate woman suspected of shoplifting about two weeks ago had returned to the store and was acting in a suspicious manner. Police questioned the 32-year-old woman who denied having shoplifted but agreed not to return to the store, police said.

BOAT WOES

Boat ramp barrier added for safety reasons

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A resident boater's inquiry about a barrier at the bottom of a Parker Avenue boat ramp was addressed by the Harbormaster and Acting Town Manager.

Peter Workman, Beechwood Street, wrote to the Board of Selectmen last week saying he was unable to launch his boat due to a concrete barrier across the lower end of the boat ramp he's been using for over 20 years. Workman said it was impossible to launch his boat during low tide.

"For bigger boats it looks like they would need at least mid tide or above to launch. I believe the many boaters that use the ramp should be able to launch at all tides," said Workman.

He also noted that the four-by-four barriers on the side of the launch disappear when the tide comes up, which he felt was a danger to swimmers and boaters.

Selectman Karen Quigley spoke with Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons and responded to Workman in an email. Quigley explained that the barriers were added for safety issues and approved by acting town manager Michael Milanoski.

"Boats powering on and off had created a 'hole' and undermined the tarmac at the bottom of the ramp. The damaged area was excavated, repaired, and the concrete blocks put in place without shortening the ramp," Quigley stated.

The barrier was added, Quigley continued, "to prevent trailers from backing off the ramp and getting stuck in the 'hole'— something that had occurred and was a liability for the town."

Milanoski also addressed the issue during last week's selectmen meeting, explaining that Cohasset doesn't have a low-tide boat ramp and this ramp was repaired last year. Milanoski said that Scituate and Hingham have similar "stop blocks" at the bottoms of boat ramps.

The acting town manager also mentioned how the ramp had degraded due to boats powering on or off. "It's not allowed," he said, explaining that when boaters "rev up" their engines, it makes all the "sand and pebbles [get] caught up in the turbulence and pushed in the center of the channel." There will be fines instituted for this action, he added. "It's illegal."

TOWN COUNSEL

Campaign advice part of the retainer, DeRensis says

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"It's disturbing to me our town counsel billed the town for work directed toward a candidate."
Selectman Steve Gaumer

Town Counsel was asked to investigate a campaign issue from the May 2013 Town Election that involved contributions to one newly-elected selectman's campaign, with another selectman questioning whether this investigation was an appropriate use of town counsel's time.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis was asked to look into the matter of a $1,000 check issued to selectman Karen Quigley, who won a selectmen seat during the May election. Steve Gaumer was also elected. Quigley received a donation from Red Lion Inn owner Gerd Ordelheide of $1,000, a check that she returned to him without cashing it.

The issue was raised in a letter to the Mariner, and Quigley addressed the matter head-on during a recent selectmen's meeting.

Quigley said in a prepared statement that she was approached by Town Counsel in July after "he was advised by the acting town manager that town citizens were planning to file a criminal complaint against me on the following day for 'allegedly' accepting an improper campaign donation.

"In fact, what happened is that my campaign received a $1000 check," Quigley continued. "I believed it not to be an appropriate contribution and returned the uncashed check to the sender. End of story. Town counsel investigated the accusation, found it to be baseless, and reported this to the acting town manager. No complaint was filed."

Quigley added that she also consulted the state Office of Campaign and Political Finance, and was told she "had acted totally appropriately and had done nothing in violation of the law."

DeRensis corroborated with Quigley's account of the matter.

"I verified from the donor that he got the check back, and the state agency said everything was fine," DeRensis said in a phone call.

Gaumer said that he is troubled by the situation, however, questioning whether this matter is in fact a town issue that falls under Town Counsel's purview, since during the campaign Quigley was a candidate, not yet a selectman.

"It's disturbing to me our town counsel billed the town for work directed toward a candidate," said Gaumer during a phone call. "That is a clear conflict of interest... if the current town counsel is doing billable work on behalf of an individual selectman as a candidate, how can you look at his decisions as being wholly objective?"

According to invoices obtained through a public information request, DeRensis worked on "answering questions, attention to campaign finance violation complaint, investigation thereof" on July 2, 3 and 5, discussing the matter with Quigley and checking into "denials from owner of Red Lion Inn."

DeRensis said that this is a "routine " matter for Town Counsel to investigate, adding that it was part of Quigley's selectman orientation, during which the attorney educates new board members on "the rules of being a selectman."

"I do orientation sessions for all newly elected selectmen, equally, per long standing authorization from the board of selectmen," he said.

"For Karen in particular, I was told by the town manager that there were rumors circulating, and there might have been an issue she wasn't familiar with," DeRensis explained. "I made sure she knew, and sent her on to the office of campaign and political finance; she self-reported, and they determined there was no truth to any of the rumors."

DeRensis said the situation was a "teachable moment during the orientation process," further stating that ongoing reporting is required to take place following a campaign. This makes the matter a town issue, DeRensis said, since selectmen have ongoing reporting requirements.

Gaumer said something to the same effect, however explaining that the campaign is separate from town and selectmen issues.

"The campaign has a reporting requirement that doesn't stop on Election Day," said Gaumer. "Just because a candidate won doesn't mean the campaign as an entity" is over. Town Counsel reviewing the matter, Gaumer continued, is effectively helping a candidate's campaign. "Helping out a campaign has nothing to do with the town."

Gaumer said that town counsel's hours "should have gone to the town." By charging the town for the work, "It's an in-kind campaign donation to a sitting selectman; the legal work down by town counsel is an in-kind donation to the campaign."

Gaumer emphasized that his issue is not with Quigley, but with the matter of Town Counsel working on a campaign.

"I'm not focusing on Karen — I'm focusing on town counsel," he said.

DeRensis responded to questions about the billable hours by stating that the hours were not billed to the town; all of the work is covered by the town's legal services retainer, a flat rate of $54,000 a year.

"It's covered by the retainer; there's no extra charge," DeRensis explained.

Overall, according to the attorney, the selectmen orientation process and reporting requirements are all part of "good government."

DeRensis elaborated in an email, "Often in a democracy where government is 'of the people, by the people and for the people,' government officials may not be aware or even know that activity they are involved with could be illegal, or even criminal, and that participation in government is not, and should not be, limited to lawyers trained in municipal law, but rather people of any background should be able to step forward and participate in their government. The orientation session gives the newly elected the 'rules of the game' in which they were elected to participate."

UPDATE

Selectmen set hearing for the Red Lion Inn

The Red Lion Inn has a little over a week to respond to a request from the police for information regarding the inn's entertainment license.

Police Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon was appointed by the Board of Selectmen as a license enforcement agent to review a Sept. 28 alleged violation of the inn's entertainment license. However, Lennon reported Wednesday, Nov. 13 that 16 days after requesting information from the inn, the inn has yet to comply with the request.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski asked the selectmen during their Wednesday meeting to give the inn seven days to comply with the request, or else attend a public hearing on the matter and have the license suspended. If they comply, the hearing will not have to take place.

Due to the board's busy schedule over the next week, meeting to interview town manager candidates, the selectmen decided to schedule the hearing for Tuesday, Nov. 26.

Selectman Steve Gaumer said that while the interviews are important, the board should not ignore other important town matters. "This has to be addressed."

FINALISTS

• Timothy King, who has been the Assistant Town Administrator in Wellfleet, Mass. since 2011 and previously worked as Town Manager of Ellsworth, Maine for 13 years; he was also Town Manager of Westerly, Rhode Island for two years and spent six years as Town Administrator of Auburn, Mass.;

• Grady Miller, Town Manager of Narragansett, Rhode Island from 2010 to 2012 who previously worked in Peoria, Arizona;

• Christopher Senior, who has been Deputy Town Supervisor for North Hempstead, New York since 2004.

Kobayashi said that originally there were six final candidates from the pool of 24, but one withdrew after landing another job.

Members of the board of selectmen wanted to know which of the existing candidates were recruited from positions they already held; Kobayashi said that most "are in the market for jobs."

Something that stood out to the board was the fact that there are quite a few candidates from Rhode Island.

"I can't explain it," said Kobayashi. "I think it has a little bit to do with geography; Cohasset is on the south side of Boston."

Selectman Steve Gaumer wanted to know why the acting town manager was not among the finalists.

"That's not something I can address," said Kobayashi. "It's a reasonable question," however the consultant added that he has to "maintain confidentiality," even though the final candidate names are public.

Milanoski issued a statement later that night. "I am disappointed to not be selected as one of the five candidates for the position of Town Manager that the UMass Collins Center selected for the Board of Selectmen to interview. A position I have successfully held and found enriching over the past twenty plus months.

"However, I respect the process the Board of Selectmen voted as the elected body of the Town of Cohasset to establish the criteria they were looking for as their Town Manager. The Collins Center selected the Board of Selectmen's candidates accordingly.

"The record complied by my dedicated and skilled team of department heads is one of which I always will be proud."

The selectmen further asked for advice on the interview protocol. Kobayashi said it would be beneficial for the candidates to have a chance to speak to town department heads and employees in order to get a feel for the town.

"The record complied by my dedicated and skilled team of department heads is one of which I always will be proud."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski

"You want to get to know the candidates and have them get to know the board and this town," said Kobayashi. "I've always found it better if the person is able to gain some familiarity with the town, whether by being in a conference room with key or all of the department heads to learn what makes the place tick, or in one-on-one conversations."

He also warned the selectmen, in their reviews of the candidates, to "beware the Google effect."

"Don't believe everything Google throws up," said Kobayashi. "If there is a particular issue that raises concern or is puzzling, ask them about it... Go direct."

The bottom line of the crop of candidates, the consultant said, is that "they all have something significant to offer the town of Cohasset... and served as a measuring stick for the other candidates."

The selectmen plan to meet on Monday, Nov. 18 to go over their interview questions for the candidates and conduct interviews throughout the week. The plan is to select two candidates to bring back for follow-up interviews.

The board also discussed inviting candidates to come to Cohasset early on the interview days to get a tour of the town. The selectmen would also like to have the candidates meet with department heads prior to the interviews and plan to schedule time for that on the interview days.

Kobayashi urged the selectmen to do their due diligence and take their time throughout the process. "One thing's for sure— you want to take your time and you want a good outcome."

BRIEFLY

Hedlund asked for his support on two local bills

The Board of Selectmen voted to send letters to Senator Robert Hedlund regarding the status of two town home rule petitions that are currently being reviewed by the Senate: the amendment to Cohasset's Town Manager Act (H.3486) and the extension of the second amended sewer district (H.3671).

The letters, one for each bill, ask Hedlund to "take whatever action he can" to help move the bills forward and "urge passage of both bills," said selectman Steve Gaumer.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy drafted a letter supporting both bills, but selectman Karen Quigley said that since she spoke out against the changes to the Town Manager Act as a citizen, she did not want to vote to support the matter as a selectman.

The board decided to write two separate letters. The selectmen voted unanimously to approve sending a letter in support of the sewer bill and 4-1, with Quigley as the dissenting vote, to support the Town Manager Act legislation.

(Please do not bring magazines, VHS or audio tapes, or textbooks.)

All donations can be left at St. Stephen's Church inside the Parish office door off the courtyard.

There must be many, many voracious readers who might have some gems to be shared. Please support our fair with as many good-condition books as you can. Then join us December 7 and take home a few good reads for yourself!

Movie night

Please save the date for the next "movie night" sponsored by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee which will be shown on Friday, Nov 22 at 7 p.m.. The documentary "Koch Brothers Exposed" will be shown in the meeting room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The billionaire Koch Brothers, Charles and David, donate a portion of their millions to philanthropic causes, such as Public Television programs. All CDTC movie nights are free of charge.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Go Skippers! Go Blue!

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

With both teams gearing up for HUGE weekends, I encourage you all to do what you can to support the Blue and White.

The light snowfall that tumbled from the sky on early Tuesday morning was quite surreal for many here at 143 Pond Street. Although it was a brief snow that stubbornly refused to accumulate on the ground, it was still entertaining to watch through the window as the flakes danced through the air and finally met their melting demise on the ground.

Rested up after an exquisite three-and-a-half-day weekend that included relaxation, sports, and honor for our nation's veterans, CHSers plunged head first into the second term of school. With the switch in terms came minor changes in many students' schedules. Only electives (classes such as Band, Chorus, Art, Gym, Health, etc) switch after a term, so all students were still entrenched in their semester-long and yearlong academic courses.

In other CHS news, the student council has planned the year's first Red Cross Blood Drive, which will occur on the tentative date of December 8th. Its always an awesome sight to see the gymnasium floor covered in apparatus and volunteers, and CHS students are always eager to donate blood: whether it be to help others, or just get out of class for an hour or two. Either way, we are all excited to give some blood and same some lives.

While the aforementioned tidbits are relevant, there is one thing that has taken over the brains of many students this week, and in the process has united most of CHS under one banner; sports. Fresh off a thrilling 42-28 victory in the Division 6 South Sectional Semi-Finals (say that 10 times fast) in which they staved off a late comeback effort by Blue Hills Vo Tech, the CHS Football team marches on. Be sure to stop by Alumni Field tonight at 7 pm, as the footballers battle the Millis-Hopedale Mohawks in a game that will decide who represents the South in the D6 state championship game.

And, if you are still feeling the CHS spirit, take a trip out to Worcester on Saturday, as the Boys' Soccer team battles undefeated Sutton for the Division 4 state championship. The soccer squad is rolling, coming off a 2-0 victory over Georgetown in the state semi-finals, and ready to fight for Cohasset's first ever state title for boys' soccer.

With both teams gearing up for HUGE weekends, I encourage you all to do what you can to support the Blue and White. For now, Go Skippers, and keep it classy Cohasset!

Holiday Stroll is Dec. 14

Halloween has come and gone, meaning Christmas is just around the corner. And Christmastime in Cohasset means it's time for the Chamber of Commerce's annual Holiday Stroll.

This year's stroll through Cohasset Village takes place on Saturday, Dec. 14 from 4 to 7 p.m. Participating downtown and Route 3A merchants typically offer sidewalk sales, arts and crafts, face painting, holiday refreshments, and other goodies.

Other festivities of the day include St. Stephen's Carillon Concert and a Santa parade.

Support local businesses and shop the Holiday Stroll.

VETERANS

among us. They could be your neighbor, colleague, friend and relative," he said.

"Some serve in combat, others in a support role, but they all have the same goal: to serve and protect this great nation we live in."

As per Cohasset tradition, Deer Hill elementary school students also penned essays for Veterans Day. Last Thursday, Nov. 7 saw a special veterans ceremony held at Deer Hill. Two young writers were chosen as winners: Grace Albright, whose speech explained the reason for moments of silence to recognize veterans, and Lauren Stevens, who wrote about her great-great grandfather, a World War I veteran.

Albright asked her classmates to appreciate the simple freedoms they enjoy growing up in the U.S.

"Have you ever walked downtown with your friends? Have you ever signed up for the school play? Well, you do these things because you have the right to do what you want to do. You can play outside, and you can play games on the computer. You can have your best friend over, and you can turn cartwheels at recess.

"However, at points in our history we haven't all been free to do what we please," Albright continued. "Millions of brave Americans have gone to war to gain and defend those freedoms. This is because freedom is not free. It comes at a cost to soldiers and their families. They have had to fight for what we hold so dear, such as freedom of speech and religion. These incredible people are America's brave veterans. They fight for us. They will fight for future generations. They fight for America."

Stevens told the story of her great-great grandfather, who gave up time with his family and missed out on his first son's birth in order to fight for America's freedom overseas.

"My great-great grandfather was not able to be home when his first son (my Poppa) was born," Stevens shared. "He did not see his son take his first steps or say his first words. He was not able to come back to the United States until 1944 when the war was over. His own son did not know who he was when he returned home."

Stevens' speech touched on the difficulties veterans face upon coming home from war.

"It was difficult for him to find a job when he returned. Things had changed while he was gone. I am proud that my great-great grandfather was such a good American."

Veterans issues from housing to health care are major issues that Cohasset's VSO tackles every day, alongside the Elder Affairs department.

Elder Affairs Director Coral Grande shared recently that Cohasset entered into a covenant to care for its veterans, old and young.

"It was a promise, a public promise to support veterans and their families, making any possible resources available to them," Grande said of the town's military covenant.

With ceremonies like Monday's, it's clear that veterans are near and dear to many Cohasset residents.

During the Wednesday, Nov. 13 Board of Selectmen meeting, Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she attended Monday's event and was impressed with the turnout. "What strikes me most is how many veterans and townspeople came. We're a small town but we get a high percentage."

Selectmen Vice Chair Diane Kennedy complimented Thomas and Deidre Wigmore, the husband and wife team who head the Sons and Daughters of the American Legion, for organizing the event – and all of the other veterans events in town – year after year.

"People come here because they do it right," Kennedy said of the ceremony.

Maria Berroncello of Cohasset said she attended Monday's ceremony to honor her husband, who was a VFW army command for 26 years and fought in the Battle of the Bulge.

"He was a good guy. We were married 62 years," said Berroncello. "He sure loved his country."

She enjoys Cohasset's Veterans Day ceremony, Berroncello said.

"When they play the taps, it makes me cry."

CARILLON

JFK to be remembered

On Saturday, Nov. 23, from 11-11:30 a.m., the bells at St. Stephen's Church will ring in memory of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Carillonneur Mary Kennedy will play patriotic music, hymns, and several favorites from his Irish Catholic heritage. One of the musical selections, "Lento Doloroso," was composed — within weeks of the assassination — by Kamiel Lefevere, world-renowned Belgian carillonneur, who dedicated the piece to the 35th president on Jan. 15, 1964.

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Stop by the Marketplace!

Special to the Mariner

If we had a choice, would we purchase our seasonal decorations from one of the most fabulous florists in our community, one who is known for cutting edge creativity, handmade decorations, but with a talent that communicates tradition? YES! That is the place for me! Is there, however, some little thing that restrains us? Could it be the price? Despite the fact that our taste is for natural products sensitively arranged, we often end up with plastic, cardboard, or Styrofoam, horrid stuff for our homes and our environment.

Here is a solution: stop by Yuletide 2013's MARKETPLACE. On Thursday, Dec. 5, during the hours that the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its holiday house tour, St. Anthony's Parish Center will be full of fine handmade decorations of the season as well as memorable gift items. St. Anthony's will feel like a lovely specialized boutique if measured by the products for sale. The secret is that these are items, either made by members of the Garden Club, or by invited vendors whose hobby is their passion. Thus, the price is right; the products are unique; and you will be able to satisfy many of the needs on your "to buy" list.

These handcrafted items often sing of "Cohasset," and the South Shore. There will be sparkling black, white and blue mussel shells, which have become wreaths and small trees. Fresh boxwood topiaries or wreaths made from pine cones or from wonderful nuts, are just a few examples of local natural products which will make special decorations in your home a gift to a teacher, a hostess, to friends and relatives. These are gifts that will become warm happy memories, as they are unwrapped each holiday season for years to come. Several vendors also use "Cohasset" for inspiration in their handmade stationary and in their interesting containers of fresh greenery. From hand-knit, adult-sized sweaters to handmade doll's clothes you will find variety, quality, and extremely fine workmanship.

YULETIDE 2013

Community Garden Club of Cohasset's Holiday House Tour will take place from 10:a.m.-4:p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 5.

Tickets advance purchase: $30/ available only at St. Anthony's Center, on Dec. 5: $35.
Tickets may be purchased in Cohasset at: Buttonwood Books, Countryhouse Furniture and Interiors, Darilynn's, Fleming's of Cohasset Village, Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room

GIMME SHELTER

Pumpkin is a real peach

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Oh my goodness! How handsome, how gentle and loving, full of purrs and so filled with affection. That is what this charming guy wants to show you, over and over, with soft mews and sweet loving looks. Pumpkin, a laid back, orange male tiger has known some good times and he certainly knew a gentle and loving home once upon a time. It would be a Thanksgiving filled with feline appreciation if the right person or family came along and fell totally in love with this awesome cat.

Every cat that finds his or her way to Hull Seaside Animal Rescue has been through unique and different experiences and sharing them is sometimes easy and filled with joy, and other times it holds a sadness and deep concern. Pumpkin arrived in the shelter after being found outside where he was getting by for a while, being fed by a kind person, but cautious about coming inside a strange home. Well, once he was rescued, we met one of the friendliest, loving and fun kitties ever. Pumpkin is awesome. When he sees you come in the room, his look is direct and longing. Then, when you show him interest, the purrs and rolls begin. A rub up against your leg, a cute meow, it's irresistible. He absolutely adores the petting and sweet talk that you just can't help but give him.

Why is a great guy like Pumpkin here? Well, he has had some dental issues and it is likely that his owners could not afford to provide him the care he needed at the time. This is where HSAR steps up and helps an animal in need. It is very costly, but this is one wonderful boy and how could you not do everything possible for him? We are addressing his needs and he will have some teeth removed soon. It doesn't change very much. Pumpkin will always be happy with his canned food, and can even have some dry. Nothing will stop his constant purring and affectionate, friendly nature. That is who he is and his new family will be so fortunate to have such a wonderful companion and friend.

Pumpkin is one of the friendliest cats ever; his future family will have a wonderful companion and friend.

This is a situation where we are hoping for help and donations for the shelter's Medical Fund. Procedures for cats like Pumpkin, and many others who have been helped here and are now living in their new homes, comes at high costs. That makes it difficult for us as our only funding source comes from generous supporters, fundraisers, bottle and can donations and grants. It is a lot to handle, and somehow we do it, but never without worry and concern. If you or your community group or business would like to become a sponsor for a cat in need, please contact Casey, our shelter manager, at 781-925-3121. Any and all donations are greatly appreciated and go directly to the animals in our care.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on the sweetest guy ever, Pumpkin He deserves a Happy Thanksgiving and loving forever home so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for their best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. Lobster Trap Christmas Tree in progress

The first annual lobster trap Christmas tree will be erected on Government Island off Border Street on the harbor beginning Nov. 30. The tree, built entirely of lobster traps, will be decorated with all white lights, fresh evergreens and lobster buoys "ornaments" borrowed from commercial and recreational lobster fishers from Cohasset.

• Buoy Contest:
In addition, the committee is welcoming individuals, families, classrooms, service organizations, merchants and other entities to purchase and decorate their own buoys to display on the tree. Committee Chairman, John Covell said, "We have purchased blank buoys and sticks at a cost of $10 each. The Cohasset American Legion Post 118 has agreed to stock and sell the buoys and sticks at our cost during the hours they are open. This should make it easy for people wishing to create a buoy to display on the tree; to get their own blank canvas."

Multiple, first, second and third prize ribbons will be awarded by the Committee for the best decorated lobster buoys. "We will place the lobstermen's buoys on the top of the tree so that the merchant's and other buoys will be at eye level" said Covell. "We expect some really creative buoys and a high level of competition. All lobster buoys may be retrieved by their owner when the tree comes down after New Year's."

• Donations and Charitable Cause:
The Committee is soliciting donations for the first year startup costs to decorate the lobster trap Christmas tree. In addition to mail in donations, they have placed collection cans at various merchant locations in town. It is estimated that the first year cost will be around $1,000. Any excess monies collected will be donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry.

"If we are granted approval to erect a lobster trap Christmas tree in subsequent years, we will make the event a fund raiser to support the Cohasset Food Pantry", said Covell. "We want this to be community event and can think of no better cause than the Cohasset Food Pantry, to which to donate our proceeds."

• CHS Math Students Work on the Plan
High School Principal, Carolyn Connolly is putting together a group of students and faculty to work on the design plan for the tree. In response to an email from Covell she wrote, "This sounds very exciting and I very, much want to get a group together to help. I mentioned it already to a few teachers at school and will put out a call to students (last) week to see how we can help — hoping that we can have a hands-on part as well. What a wonderful way to get in the spirit."

The Committee not only welcomes the help with the plan design but also the desire to have the students and others help with the construction. "There will be plenty of need for as much 'hands on' as we can get" said Covell. "This is a large undertaking."

Anyone wishing to help with the initial expenses are asked to make a donation, no matter how small, to: Cohasset Lobster Trap Tree, 83 Elm St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

DEER HILL HONORS OUR VETERANS

Fifth-grader Charlotte Astley, 10, sold patriotic items during lunchtime to celebrate Veterans Day and raised upwards of $270. All the money will go to Cohasset Vets or widows of Vets who need assistance buying food and heat for their homes this winter.

Veterans Day essays

As per Cohasset tradition, Deer Hill School students penned essays for Veterans Day. Last Thursday, Nov. 7 saw a special veterans ceremony held at Deer Hill. Two young writers were chosen as winners: Grace Albright, whose speech explained the reason for moments of silence to recognize veterans, and Lauren Stevens, who wrote about her great-great grandfather, a World War I veteran.

One of the many colorful student poems and essays on display in the Deer Hill School library welcoming veterans to the school to be honored for their service.

Grace Albright delivers her essay, "A Moment of Silence," during the Deer Hill School Veterans Day assembly.

A Moment of Silence

GRACE ALBRIGHT

Every day we have a moment of silence at Deer Hill School. We face our flag and hold our right hands over our hearts. We do this every morning, but you may not realize why we have this moment of silence. You may not fully understand that we do this to remember the courageous veterans that fight for our freedom.

Have you ever walked downtown with your friends? Have you ever signed up for the school play? Well, you do these things because you have the right to do what you want to do. You can play outside, and you can play games on the computer. You can have your best friend over, and you can turn cartwheels at recess. However, at points in our history we haven't all been free to do what we please. Millions of brave Americans have gone to war to gain and defend those freedoms. This is because freedom is not free. It comes at a cost to soldiers and their families. They have had to fight for what we hold so dear, such as freedom of speech and religion. These incredible people are America's brave veterans. They fight for us. They will fight for future generations. They fight for America.

Our veterans make sacrifices in their own lives for us. Many soldiers leave their families behind to go to war. They fight, even though they know they are risking their lives. Still, they fight bravely and stand strong. Their focus is fighting for what our country believes in, for our freedom, and for what we have today. America's veterans put their lives in jeopardy for our country. For this, we owe them our greatest gratitude.

Ever year on November 11, we acknowledge the veterans that have served our country, the United States of America. Why are we honoring them on this date? Well, on November 11, 1918 at 11 a.m., there was a moment of ceasefire in World War I. This marked the end of the fight. Since that day, we have had ceremonies and parades all over the country to celebrate these extraordinary soldiers. These ceremonies remember and honor the veterans that dutifully served our country.

The next time we have a moment of silence, think about the brave Americans that risk their lives for us. They fight for our freedom. So, we give them our thanks on November 11— Veterans Day.

My great-great grandfather

LAUREN STEVENS

My great-great grandfather was born in 1908. In 1939 the United States of America became involved in World War II. At that time in the United States we still had a military draft system. That meant that if the government needed soldiers, all men of a certain age had to go to war.

When the war started the government put out a notice that all men between the age of 18 and 35 had to appear immediately for military duty. My great-great grandfather, who was 33 years old and in love with his girlfriend, knew he would have to serve his country. He quickly married his girlfriend (my great-great grandmother) and after a few weeks he left for the war.

He was an engineer so the government taught him how to repair airplane engines. Then he was sent to England for six years as an Air Force soldier. He had to fix the planes so they could fly out into the war zones to bring soldiers and food into battle and sometimes to drop bombs on enemy territory.

My great-great grandfather was not able to be home when his first son (my Poppa) was born. He did not see his son take his first steps or say his first words. He was not able to come back to the United States until 1944 when the war was over. His own son did not know who he was when he returned home.

On her tiptoes at the podium, Lauren Stevens reads her winning Veterans Day essay entitled "My Great-, Great-Grandfather."

It was difficult for him to find a job when he returned. Things had changed while he was gone. I am proud that my great-great grandfather was such a good American. He was 76 when he died and the government wrapped his coffin with an American flag because he was a veteran. At the funeral they took the flag off before they buried him and gave it to my [great] grandmother. The soldier who handed the flag to her said, "We want to thank your husband for his service to our country." That was 35 years after the war, but that is the thing about veterans; we should never forget that they sacrificed their daily lives to keep our country free. I am very proud of my great-great grandfather.

Third- and fourth-graders sing "We Celebrate America" honoring the veterans on stage at Deer hill school.

in Cohasset, and the groom in Hingham. We knew how special that was, especially given the different character of the three towns.

"That's why we named the restaurant The Corner Stop, and our logo is a signpost with the three town signs," Ron continued. "We love our little nook of the world and wanted to pay homage to it. Our kids get on the Hingham school bus, and we watch the Cohasset bus pick up the kids across the street and the Hull bus turn around by the restaurant. It's quirky, and we now all have a place to come together."

The restaurant, which opened in October, features a fresh foods menu of classic American favorites with a modern twist. From a glimpse of the menu, the couple's passion for food is obvious.

"We're lifelong restaurant people," Rudy said during a chat in the restaurant on a gray November day, during which the restaurant's stone walls and beach-themed decor, inspired by the rocky New England coast, were surprisingly warm and inviting (although the fireplace might also have something to do with it).

The couple loves the seaside, which is evident in both their restaurant's interior design, which seems to bring the outside in, and the fact that they have spent extensive time living on both the east and west coasts.

"We're very connected to the beach life," said Rudy, who did all of the restaurant's interior design work herself. "We're very much inspired by the seacoast. Nature has always been part of what we do aesthetically... We want [the restaurant] to be warm with natural elements, like field stone and wood."

The Vales, who both hail from the east coast (Ron is from Long Island while Rudy grew up in Connecticut), spent years living out west and became inspired by the cuisine, particularly that of the San Francisco and wine country area. It's where the couple met, working at the Lark Creek Inn restaurant in Marin County, where Ron was general manager and Rudy managed the wine program.

In addition to wine, the restaurant focused on "farm fresh," locally sourced food.

Husband and wife team Ron and Rudy Vale opened the Corner Stop Eatery last month, fusing their passion for fresh food with their love of the East and West Coasts.

"The day would start at the farmer's market for our chef, and then people would just come knocking on the kitchen door all day — mushroom foragers, fishermen, tomato growers... It was just as you would imagine it would be and pure heaven if you're a foodie," said Ron.

Ron went on to open a New England style fish house next door called Yankee Pier, a telltale sign of the couple's longing for their east coast roots.

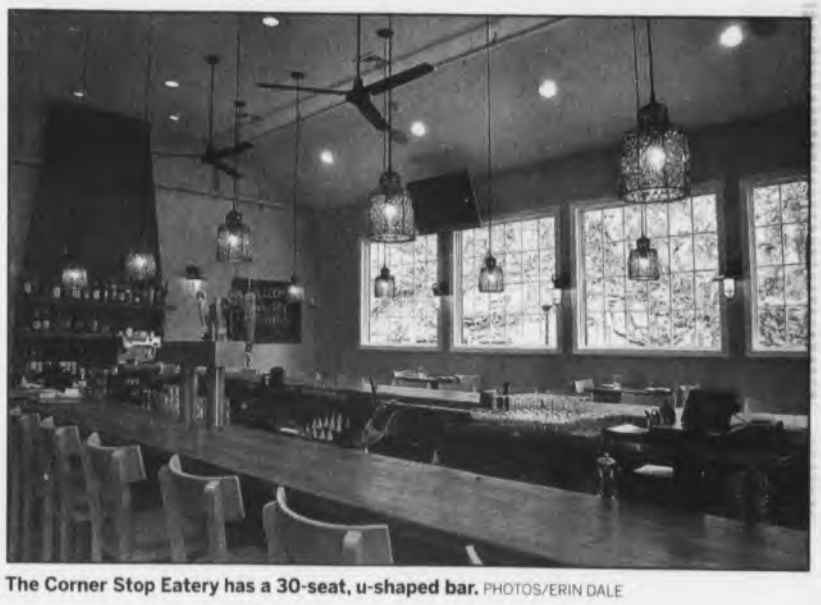
Ron and Rudy got married and decided to move east to be closer to their families, settling in Hingham 10 years ago. They shared that they were drawn to the beauty of the South Shore, its proximity to the ocean and Boston, and local restaurants the couple grew to love.

Ron continued to work for some of the top restaurant companies in the Boston area, opening Sorellina for the group that owns Mistral, Alta Strada in Wellesley for Michael Schlow, and most recently, Island Creek Oyster Bar and Hawthorne for the Lure Restaurant Group.

Yet all the while, the couple dreamt of owning their own restaurant.

"We always had it in the back of our mind, 'We should open our own place,'" said Rudy. "We wanted to provide good food where people can feel comfortable — feel like they're in someone's house."

The goal for the Corner Stop Eatery is to become the neighborhood haunt — for all walks of life and for any occasion.



"Being part of the community is important," said Rudy, adding that she hopes to see "kids with their uniforms and jerseys coming in with their parents" after sports games or retirees and empty nesters. "We want to be that restaurant for pretty much every occasion."

California vibe

And while the interior of the restaurant feels a bit fancy, the staff wears white shirts and jeans. Call it a leftover influence from the Vales' time on the West Coast — the restaurant exudes that laid-back, California vibe.

Despite the couples' fine dining background, the suit and tie look "is not who we are," said Ron. "We want everyone to be comfortable in a welcoming environment."

The main room with the 30-seat u-shaped bar and big screen TVs offers a different, more "hopping" dining experience than the smaller, more intimate dining room.

"We wanted to provide good food where people can feel comfortable — feel like they're in someone's house."

Rudy Vale, the Corner Stop Eatery

"It's a fun, vibrant place," Rudy said of the main room, while the dining room is "warm and intimate."

Both rooms tie together the beachside vibe, with walls the color of a light morning fog, plenty of stone and wood features, and for fun, a pop of color here and there — and the chosen color is orange, the same color as the eatery's logo.

The menu echoes the fun, with American staples (burgers, wings) that feature unexpected pops of flavor — something the chef, Sam Cabral-Curtis, specializes in.

"What I love about his food is that the flavors are very intense, but very balanced," said Rudy, adding that the chef used to work in New Orleans, "which had an influence" on his cooking style.

"He believes in strong, bold, layered flavors," said Ron. "We were so excited to find him; he's got a great palate."

The chicken wings, for instance, are made with an agridolce balsamic and red wine reduction. The sauce's name is Italian for "angry and sweet."

Another popular dish is proving to be the "Hippy Dippy" salad, brimming with field greens, wheat berries, carrots, avocado, cranberries, goat cheese, sunflower seeds and balsamic vinaigrette that promises to be healthy, but filling.

"There are so many textures and flavors — it's a meal," Ron said of the salad, adding that diners can opt to add salmon, tuna, steak or chicken on top.

The Hartley Ranch steak burger, featuring 100-percent organic beef, is another big seller. And while the burgers, wings, short ribs and pork chops are crowd pleasers, there are plenty of meat-free and allergy-free options on the menu. Those with dietary needs, from the gluten allergic to vegan and vegetarian diners, can rest easy in the Corner Stop Eatery.

"Our menu is pretty diverse," said Ron. "We can accommodate someone with allergies without any issue."

The owners feel it's important for the customer to feel empowered "to have conversations with their server" about the food, whether they need to state a food allergy or simply likes and dislikes. Swapping out sides and toppings is no problem.

"Part of our whole approach is that nothing is asking too much; everything is doable," said Rudy.

The kids' menu also offers more than the usual mac and cheese and chicken fingers fare, featuring fresh options such as salmon or steak with fruits and vegetables.

It's all part of catering to a growing health-conscious community.

"The people who live in this area are generally healthy, food conscious and fairly sophisticated," said Rudy. "Many moved here to settle down from Boston and beyond, so they know good food."

This is why the wine list features global selections at a reasonable price, with the focus of "50 wines under $50" from around the world. Most of the eatery's wines cost between $20 and $30.

"It's not a huge wine list, but it hits all the notes," Rudy explained.

"The intention is to have them go really well with the food — they're meant as food wines," said Ron.

Finding quality, yet affordable wines was key. Overall, Rudy explained, "the theme of this restaurant is making good things accessible."

If it sounds like the Corner Stop Eatery has something for everyone, it's no accident — that was very much the Vales' goal in finally opening their dream restaurant.

And whether you're a salad or burger lover, health nut or flavor aficionado, or just a classic picky eater, the staff at the Corner Stop will help you find something you like.

"No one will leave hungry," Rudy promised.

The Corner Stop Eatery is open for lunch and dinner, starting at 11:30 a.m. which lunch ending at 2 p.m. (although small dishes are available). For more on the restaurant, call 781-875-3065, visit online at www.cornerstopeatery.com, or stop by 235 Hull Street, Cohasset.

OUR VIEW

Cohasset's loss

The bottom line is the Cohasset Board of Selectmen may not have Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski to kick around much longer.

The Collins Center out of UMass Boston – which the town hired to conduct the search process for a new Town Manager – is not saying why Milanoski's name is not among the five finalists for the position.

We are disappointed that Milanoski was not included and will therefore, not have the chance to be interviewed and put his resume and Cohasset accomplishments on the table. However, with that being said it is doubtful with the current makeup of the Board of Selectmen that Milanoski would have the votes – making the whole exercise a waste of time for him and the rest of us.

We are also disappointed that through the fog of politics our current Acting Town Manager could not be retained. To be honest, at the beginning of Milanoski's tenure at Town Hall, we did not think he was a good fit. We started off on the wrong foot with him about access to public correspondence and, rightly in our view, we made a big deal about an infamous $7,000 bill he sent us for public records. There was no question that Milanoski was not a charm school graduate and the Town Manager is a people-position, after all.

With that being said, Milanoski has grown in the position. He has become the "devil" we know. He understands Cohasset and he cares deeply about the place he calls home. In our 16 years of covering acting, interim and permanent town managers, Milanoski is the most accomplished in terms of finances. In other words, Cohasset's financial house is in good order in large part due to his leadership. We ask, in a town like Cohasset, shouldn't that be Number One?

We are always nervous about "nationwide searches" to fill important positions. Applicants can sound terrific and nearly perfect in interviews but whether they will adapt to the culture of Cohasset is another matter entirely. Does anyone recall when Fire Chief John Nadeau broke his contract in the early 90s? Selectmen have hired fire chiefs from within ever since.

We think Milanoski would have continued to grow in the post. Selectmen could have worked with him to further smooth his rough edges by requiring he take a few "charm school" courses in public administration at UMass or have him work with a mentor in another town – like Jeff Nutting, the Franklin Town Manager, who advised selectmen recently on how to do their job.

Keeping a known quantity — who has completed the learning curve — and is leading us in the right direction seems like it should be a good news story. But sadly, Milanoski is being sent packing and it is Cohasset's loss.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Public bullying or public exposure

A writer in last week's Mariner complains about letters, which have repeatedly shined the spotlight on certain Selectmen.

We are fortunate we don't live in a dictatorship, where such exposure is not tolerated and the media muzzled.

The vendetta against our excellent Acting Town Manager is counterproductive and exposure surely warranted. Would "journalistic substance, objectivity and integrity," be enhanced by failing to have a forum to expose nonsense?

Last week's writer may be bored; others are alerted. And anyone is free to bury his or her head in the sand.

R. Murray Campbell,

Put an end to sniping!

This is in response to Mindy Evans' letter published in last week's edition of the Mariner. I cannot echo her thoughts better than she did. I wish I had written that letter. Enough of the petty bickering and sniping; you are all working (I thought) in the best interest of the town we all live in.

Please try to remember that.

Peter J. Wood,

Remembering the food pantry

There are many people who don't realize that Cohasset has a food pantry, but it does. There are many more who would be surprised at the number of residents who use the service. This is the time of year when people on a fixed budget become more reliant on such a service, particularly when the cost to heat a home has become so high.

I recently closed the committee we formed when I ran for Selectman last May, and we are pleased to have been able to give a check to the Cohasset Food Pantry for a little over $400.

This year I hope that people consider the Pantry when they are thinking of making donations either monetary, or food to help make the upcoming winter a bit less stressful for our fellow residents.

Pumpkin Patch support appreciated

On behalf of the leadership of the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project (Cohasset ASP), I would like to sincerely and warmly thank this community (and the Mariner staff!) for its support of our 11th annual Pumpkin Patch: the "Haunted Castle" on North Main Street. THANKS: to all those who helped unload pumpkins, to all those who volunteered as sales persons, and especially to the hundreds of folks who stopped by to wander among the 6000 pumpkins to make their selections. It is truly a unique and fun "event" of the season. Thanks to everyone's assistance and generosity, we were able to raise over $15,000 for next summer's work/camp trip to Appalachia. See you in our Village Fair Secret Room on Saturday, Dec. 7! Thanks, again.

Heartfelt thanks from Gjesteby family

We wish to thank all the kindness, cards, flowers, plants and food that were given to the family of Arne Gjesteby at is recent passing.

It was so special that many attended his recent memorial service and we thank them too.

He gave so much to Cohasset, especially town government and the Rotary.

Harbormaster goes above and beyond the call of duty

JACK BUCKLEY

Lorri Gibbons demonstrates year after year that she embraces an expanded view of harbormaster as educator, mentor, volunteer, and guardian angel for many of the youngsters who participate in harbor-based programs.

Cohasset's Harbormaster, Lorri Gibbons, plays a variety of public service roles that many residents may not fully appreciate. Some of these roles go above and beyond the call of duty, and could easily be dismissed by Lorri because they don't fit the typical job description of harbormaster. But, Lorri Gibbons isn't a typical harbormaster who narrowly defines her duties to simply maintaining a safe and efficient working and recreational harbor. Lorri Gibbons demonstrates year after year that she embraces an expanded view of harbormaster as educator, mentor, volunteer, and guardian angel for many of the youngsters who participate in harbor-based programs.

This fall she offered her services to shuttle three-dozen students over to Bassing Beach so that CMHS freshmen could participate in Coastsweep, the Commonwealth's annual tally of debris that clutters our nation's shores. The students returned invigorated by their time of service on the island, but Lorri's boat returned full of trash and sand. Calmly and professionally, Lorri directed and assisted as students disembarked with multiple boatloads of trash. Though Bassing's was cleaner, Lorri's vessel was not; "not a problem," she assured us with a smile.

Lorri also provides critical support to the adult and youth rowing programs of Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI). During the rowing season of April through October, Lorri keeps a watchful eye on the CMI boats as crews encounter the challenges of open water rowing in outer Cohasset Harbor, sharing with us our concern for the safety of our rowers. CMI coxswains and coaches consult with Lorri when weather conditions are questionable, and they know she is always at the other end of the radio. In addition, she has now established the practice of training CMI's college-age coxswains by giving them a tour of the local waters, instructing them in the rules of the road while pointing out the notable hazards that constitute local knowledge.

COLLEGE CONNECTION

Answers to your questions

STEPHANIE SEARS

It does not surprise me that every year I'm asked the same questions over and over. They reflect students' and parents' deepest anxieties during the college process. I've included some of the biggest issues that have been brought to me over the years, and most recently in the past four weeks. My responses are based on data and anecdotal evidence.

To how many colleges should I apply? For most students, I recommend between six and eight, although some students may only apply to four colleges. In some circumstances, 10 to 12 might (key word: might) be appropriate. However, more than that it seems superfluous. Here's why - with every school on your list, you should be able to articulate clear and specific reasons for why you want to attend. If you can't give a good reason why you are applying, then you should take it off. Additionally, having numerous colleges on your list can become too big of a burden when most colleges have two or three supplemental essays. If you know you won't be able to give every application the time and care it deserves while maintaining your grades and activities, consider trimming your list. Additionally, "because I want to see if I can get in", is really not a good enough reason to have a school on your list. Love the schools to which you apply. I believe that students can have a dream school on their list, as long as there are other ones they strongly like which balance things out!

What are the most important parts of the application? It depends on where you are applying. While many if not every university state that they look at the whole person, the reality is at the most selective places, it is a numbers game. This means a top grade point average and high test scores while taking challenging courses. Fortunately, apart from the Ivies and a few dozen other institutions, many academically rigorous colleges are in fact moving towards a more holistic admissions approach, meaning that all parts of your application are weighted. There is a growing trend moving towards being SAT optional, as colleges realize that there are many ways to measure a student's intelligence. Basically, admissions representatives want to see that students are ready for college-level work, emotionally and intellectually, which is why the essay still remains one of the deal breakers. Write a strong, personal composition and it changes your chances of acceptance. Write a weak statement, and it will also change your chances of getting in. Speaking of the essay...

Will the Common App really cut off my essay at 650 words? Yes. Remember that word economy adds power to your writing.

If the college offers their own application in addition to the Common App, which should I send in? Will it look better if I fill out the college one? They are weighted the same. If you are applying through the Common App for other colleges, then it makes sense to apply that way. If you don't have any Common App schools, fill out the college specific one. In terms of admission, it does not matter.

How many times should I take the SAT? Studies show that there can be significant improvement with studying before taking it a second time. After that, it's less likely scores will go up dramatically. It is important to look at what else you can do with the time and energy you have to boost your application.

Should I send all of my SAT scores? Most colleges prefer that. They really do take your "Super Score" or highest composite, so you have absolutely nothing to lose. Same with the ACT.

How many activities should I list? Quality, not quantity is the rule of thumb here. List the ones that are meaningful to you in order of importance. There is no need to fill every blank. Remember that babysitting, mowing lawns, and church activities are all great ways to show responsibility and initiative. For younger students reading this, don't just build a resume with busy undertakings. Focus on what you love doing and then do it well.

Do colleges ever look at second semester grades? Most certainly. A student may be admitted with junior grades or first quarter or semester grades, but admission may be rescinded if a student develops a bad case of senioritis in the spring and the grades drop dramatically.

What if I don't get into any of my colleges? Whenever you find out whether you are admitted, in December or April, there is still plenty of time to make a plan B. Even if you are only notified in the spring, there are still excellent colleges around. Competitive colleges in Canada often have deadlines stretching into May and they are worth a look. Other US colleges have rolling or later deadlines too.

From the parents:

Do we really need to fill out the CSS Profile? The Profile is additional financial paperwork required by some colleges in order to determine a student's aid package. If the family wishes to receive institutional aid and scholarships and the school requires the Profile, it must be completed. There is no way around this unless you do not plan to file for financial assistance.

When should my younger son or daughter begin the college process? I'll be talking more about this next month. Ideally, juniors should be starting this fall, and it is not too early to involve freshmen and sophomores in career and college exploration.

There is one question that people rarely vocalize because I give them my answer before they even ask: "It's going to be ok. You're going to get through this." Although it may sound cliché, I have found that things always work out for the best, even if it is in a different direction from where the student started.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Garlic seed for garlic bread

JON BELBER

It is garlic planting time again and there are more than 25 schools preparing farm garden beds for the heeling in of these delightful cloves.

Though many like to associate garlic with a means to keep away vampires, I prefer to focus on garlic bread, spaghetti sauce and a hardy crop that keeps many of us healthy.

It is garlic planting time again and there are more than 25 schools preparing farm garden beds for the heeling in of these delightful cloves. Many garlics are hanging in the Tomato Barn at Holly Hill Farm (since mid-July this space doubles as a Garlic Barn) and are set to be fetched, separated by size and popped for planting and cooking. The large cloves are ideal for seed this fall and the smaller ones are apt for peeling away the skin and dicing for a willing chef at a school cafeteria.

Before the farm teachers at Holly Hill journey to different schools, we try and make sure there are enough cloves for each child at a grade level to be ready to plant one. There is a top and a bottom, a tip and a root. Though some accidentally are planted upside down, all stems will find their way up to the sunlight while the roots wend their way down into the well composted, rich tilth of the fertile soil.

At St. Paul School in Hingham, the first and second graders used their hand span and measured the distance between each bulb, so each garlic seed would have enough room to grow. The four by eight foot beds provided plenty of room for the garlics and for the students around the perimeter of the bed.

After estimating the number of cloves in each garlic head, the students created parallel guidelines so as to be organized as they set to plant. With each taking a turn and waiting for a classmate to set one in, the tips all needed one final push and a gentle cover with the soil. Good night little garlics. May you have a nice winter's nap, and we will look for you, along with the similarly planted daffodil bulbs only a few feet away, come late February when the days grow longer and the sun shines brighter.

One major difference between bulbs though will be the fabulous garlic bread Miss Knobloch might create next June. Perhaps the daffodil flowers will be cut and admired in a sunny window on a cold March day. The students at St. Paul have doubled their garlic growth production due to the excitement and success of this increasingly wonderful, potent crop.

And they are not alone, as the Friends of Holly Hill Farm teachers make like their mentors at the farm and hope to plant garlic with kids of all ages from Cohasset to Marshfield and Hingham to Scituate while considering Plymouth and Braintree, too. And with a little bit of straw to keep them garlics warm and the weed seeds at bay, there is an agricultural and nutritional revolution quietly at work. At the farm, the farmers hope to slide in a little kelp and seaweed to help hold the soil and add nutrients too. Many facets at work as we grow, learn and think about a new beginning next year.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

FOR THE RECORD

Getting RAN up and running

GREGORY MATHIS

If you aren't interested in what we're printing in the newspaper or posting online, we need to know. Then we need to know what you are interested in seeing.

Following up on last week's theme of valuable reader feedback, it's time to revive an idea proposed more than a year ago that never came to fruition.

After a few false starts, it's time to get RAN up and running.

RAN is an acronym for Readers Advisory Network, an idea that has worked well in the past for individual editors in certain towns to gauge what residents think about certain topics.

The editors used the network to solicit ideas for stories, to track down sources for a particular issue and to respond to a question of the week. It's a very useful way outside of the newer social media channels to stay connected with readers invested in our brands and keep a pulse on what's happening in the community.

I'm looking to expand RAN beyond just a single town's border, however, since our group covers close to 40 communities throughout the South Shore and Cape Cod, along the South Coast, and up through the Route 24/495 corridor.

Depending on the response, I foresee the network serving multiple purposes.

1. Feedback – Your opinion on what we do is extremely important. If you aren't interested in what we're printing in the newspaper or posting online, we need to know. Then we need to know what you are interested in seeing.

2. Story ideas – We rely on residents for news tips, whether it's some sort of wrongdoing or letting us know about a great deed done by a neighbor. Our mission is to cover all aspects of the community, but we need your help.

3. Sources – As we continue to work on group projects and dig into stories that really matter, we'll need your assistance tracking down people who can share their expertise or are willing to provide information.

4. Reader reaction – A digital person on the street can help us poll readers when a big story breaks or a particular issue is generating discussion.

We'll start with those four areas and see where RAN grows from there.

Who is eligible? Anyone with an interest in participating in the process described above. You don't have to be a longtime subscriber and love the newspaper. Ideally, the network will include readers who prefer the website over the newspaper, or who stopped subscribing to the newspaper but somehow still managed to come across this column, or just have some solid, constructive criticism they'd like to share.

RAN is a little different than what we're trying to accomplish through social media. This will involve more specific requests, including the types mentioned above, directed to a set audience. And we'll use your responses to help us direct our coverage in print and online.

So if this sounds interesting, send an email to gmathis@wickedlocal.com with "RAN" in the subject line and tell me who you are, what town you live in and how long you've lived there, and why you think you'd be a valuable member of the Readers Advisory Network.

I'll start building the network based on the responses I receive through the end of 2013, with the goal of launching the second week of January 2014. That's a New Year's resolution I plan to keep this time around.

Jedis-in-training

Padawans – a.k.a. young Jedi warriors – from galaxies far, far, away (around the South Shore) enjoyed a day of Jedi training at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset last month. Children had a blast playing with lightsabers, "levitating" balloons, and learning to use "The Force."

Guided through Jedi training by Jedi Master Jim Manning, it's clear the Force was strong with these ones.

Children crack up at the jokes told by Jim Manning during his Jedi training class.

Housekeeping articles are on the warrant

Special Town Meeting is Nov. 23

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The fall Special Town Meeting is Saturday, Nov. 23 starting at 9:30 a.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

The meeting will come to order as soon as 100 voters have signed in.

Each year, Town Meeting convenes to discuss and vote on a host of issues concerning the town. Town Meeting has the ultimate say on how Cohasset's money is spent. And on the town meeting floor, the town's budget for the coming fiscal year is front and center.

The fall Special Town Meeting is typically reserved for financial "housekeeping issues" such as unpaid bills, although in recent years some heavy-hitting items have been voted on. This fall's meeting almost didn't take place, with officials debating whether or not there was a need for one this year.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski first told members of the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen early in the year that if the town's finances were in order, a STM would not be needed come fall. In September, after receiving totals from the state Cherry Sheet and Free Cash certification by the state Dept. of Revenue, Milanoski determined a STM was needed to vote on how to utilize these funds, in keeping with the town's financial management policies.

The selectmen were reluctant to schedule a STM in the middle of searching for, interviewing and hiring a permanent town manager. The selectmen are scheduled to interview five finalists for the job next week.

However, a citizen's petition that collected nearly 400 signatures forced the board to call the meeting. Once a STM is called, it must take place within 45 days. The petition called for a meeting to vote on appropriating the $600,000 in state-issued Cherry Sheet funds and the $1.3 million in Free Cash.

Warrant articles were due on Oct. 29 and seven made it into the warrant, including the petitioned article calling for the STM. Last week the selectmen voted to recommend four out of seven of the articles, opting to wait to vote on the financial articles until hearing how the Advisory Committee votes. Advisory plans to take up the warrant during their Thursday, Nov. 14 meeting (which takes place after the Mariner deadline).

Town Moderator Dan Evans will oversee the meeting. Articles will be taken up in the order they appear in the warrant. Warrants were mailed out to households last week and extras will be available at the meeting; the warrant is also available to view in its entirety on the Cohasset town website (cohassetmass.org/).

Each voter will also receive a printed copy of the Town Manager's recommended motions on each of the articles. Each article will be taken up one at a time, a motion will be made, and votes will be taken on a voice basis.

The seven articles are as follows:

- Article 1: Petitioned article to see if the town will vote to appropriate $600,000 to the Capital Stabilization Fund; $500,000 from Free Cash into the Stabilization Fund; $347,752 from Free Cash into the General Stabilization Fund; $100,000 from Free Cash into the Facilities Stabilization Fund; $250,000 from Free Cash into the Other-Post Employment Benefits (OPEB) Liability Trust Fund; and $100,000 from Free Cash into the DPW Public Roads Expense Account.
- Article 2: Water Commission Retained Earnings Transfer to see if the town will vote to transfer retained water department earnings of $95,000 for unanticipated expenses (funding an additional half full-time equivalent staff member of the water department operator).
- Article 3: Sewer Commission Retained Earnings Transfer to see if the town will vote to increase the sewer budget by $75,000 for unanticipated expenses related to repairs and maintenance.
- Article 4: Acceptance of Mass. General Laws (MGL) c39, section 23D that would allow town commission board members to miss a single session of a multi-session public hearing still vote on the matter provided they certify in writing that they have examined all of the evidence.
- Article 5: Adoption of a bylaw to accept of MGL c40, section 47 which would allow the town to deny or revoke local licenses and permits if municipal taxes and charges are not paid.
- Article 6: Acceptance of MGL c41, section 41B, which allows the town Treasurer to use direct deposit to pay town employee salaries and wages.
- Article 7: Acceptance of MGL c200A, section 9A, which allows the town to receipt outstanding checks back into the general fund in lieu of turning over all outstanding checks to the state.

Check back in an upcoming edition the Mariner for full Special Town Meeting coverage.

CSCR / CMHS students involved in studying the eelgrass beds in the shallow waters of the Glades. To and from the site, Lorri kindly ferried students, gear, and guest researchers about a dozen times- and kept her cool better than the teachers when additional trips were needed to retrieve materials left on the dock.

Though some of these anecdotes suggest simple actions, we believe that these minor gestures speak volumes about Lorri's commitment to the town and to all of the residents who find reason to work, learn, or play at the harbor. We are so very grateful for her services and appreciative of the little things that she does to support the activities that are important to us.

Thank you, Lorri.

Group ends 85th anniversary year

The Volunteer of the Year award was presented to retiring board member Stephen N. Bobo. Steve is a committed supporter of the Society and has helped to highlight the rich history of the society and the Maritime Museum.

Cohasset Historical Society is closing in on the end of its 85th anniversary activities. A few events of note were the Ice Cream Social in July, which was celebrated with the town, and the magnificent Clam Bake in September at Sandy Beach.

Saturday, Oct. 26, was a fun day of haunted and historic events just in time for Halloween. The day began with a walking tour of Cohasset Central Cemetery by local author Jackie Dormitzer, and continued at the Pratt Building where medium psychics Laura Joseph and Bridget DeBose held gallery style and private psychic readings. The keynote speaker of the day was renowned author, paranormal researcher and TV talk show host/writer Jeff Belanger whose engaging personality entertained the audience with stories of haunted New England, Massachusetts and even the White House. 143TV in Cohasset will be airing his presentation. Please check the 143TV schedule. A past-life regression with Kathryn McGlynn rounded out the day. Guests also enjoyed the Haunted and Historic Exhibit that includes mourning attire portraits, gravestone rubbings, articles from the shipwreck of the Brig St. John and from the "Witches of Eastwick" movie filmed in Cohasset.

The 2013 Annual Meeting took place Sunday, Oct. 27 at Cohasset Harbor Resort. The speaker was William M. Fowler Jr., a professor of history at Northeastern University who also served as past Director of the Massachusetts Historical Society. The topic was his recent book "Empires at War: The French and Indian War."

The Volunteer of the Year award was presented to retiring board member Stephen N. Bobo. Steve is a committed supporter of the Society and has helped to highlight the rich history of the society and the Maritime Museum. Most noteworthy is the copper weathervane Steve designed and made and donated of a "Pinky Schooner" that adorns the Pratt Building. (The weathervane did have to be repaired after a winter storm but will return soon.)

The final activity of the year will be a Holiday Party on Friday, Dec. 6, at the Pratt Building. Details can be found on our website.

One game away

Skippers headed to State Finals

By Joe Johnson
The Patriot Ledger

When the Cohasset High boys soccer team lost three of its first four games this season, nobody was thinking about a state championship.

The Skippers are one game away from the Division 4 state title, however, after a 2-0 semifinal victory Tuesday over North Sectional champ Georgetown at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Cohasset (18-4-2) will play for its first state title on Saturday against Central champ Sutton (18-0-4) at Foley Stadium in Worcester at 12:30 p.m.

The Skippers scored a goal with 8 seconds remaining in the first half and added one in the opening minute of the second half to clinch the trip to the finals. Sophomore Matt Legge, in his first varsity season, scored the decisive goal off a corner kick from senior captain Joe Buckley.

"The first and last minute of each half can be so dangerous because that's when kids sometimes will ease up," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "Taking advantage of those down times can be key.

"The corner was beautiful. Joe made a fantastic decision to abandon all set plays.

Big game tonight

Skippers ready for battle with Millis/Hopedale

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset football team is enjoying the new MIAA playoff format, and why not.

The Skippers have won both of their playoff games, routing Nantucket (35-6) and Blue Hills (42-28) to earn a spot in the Division 6 Semifinal against Millis/Hopedale, at home tonight at 7 p.m.

The Mohawks come in with an 8-2 record including a 3-1 mark in the Tri-Valley League.

When it comes to common opponents, the teams have both played Mashpee.

The Skippers knocked off Mashpee 42-0, while Millis/Hopedale beat them 39-8.

The Mohawks have also beaten Archbishop Williams 29-15, but lost 28-21 to East Bridgewater.

Millis/Hopedale also has impressive wins over Dover-Sherborn (30-14), Ashland (35-6) and Bellingham (33-15), along with two wins over Diman.

The Skippers have just one bump in the road, a 28-12 loss to Abington, which is one of the top teams in the area and play in the Big-School division of the South Shore League.

In recent years, that loss might have been enough to keep the Skippers out of the tournament.

The Skippers haven't been tested much over the course of a full game this season.

Semifinal Friday

Skippers outlast Blue Hills

By Dick Trust
For the Patriot Ledger

The Cohasset High football team survived a post-Halloween scare Friday night and moved one step closer to a shot at its first state championship.

The Skippers (8-1) raced out to a 34-6 lead in the third quarter before Blue Hills caught fire and made a game of it until late in the fourth quarter.

No. 1 Cohasset pulled out a 42-28 victory in the Div. 6 South Sectional semifinals and will host No. 3 Millis/Hopedale (7-2) in the sectional final Friday at 7 p.m.

"This game was closer than I wanted it to be," said Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw. "Our kids fought hard through the whole game, but Blue Hills just got it going with an outstanding running game in the third and fourth quarters." Our kids never wavered. Even when the game became a chess match, where both teams had to adjust to whatever the other one was doing."

COLLEGE SIGNINGS

Lax trio sign National Letters

Skippers continue collegiate tradition

This week was the National Letter of Intent signing period for Division I and II college lacrosse recruits and the Cohasset High School girls lacrosse team is excited to announce that the following players have signed their letters to play Division I lacrosse. Molly Fitzgerald College of William & Mary, Kathryn Dunn Georgetown University and Maddie Curley Boston University.

Coach Cully Reardon was proud of the girls.

"These three girls have worked extremely hard to get where they are. They are great players but better yet great teammates. This signing marks a memorable day for them as well as the Cohasset program. With their example we will have others follow in their footsteps which will continue the outstanding legacy of Cohasset lacrosse."

Chandler Street) where they'll play Sutton, the Central champ (19-0-4 including playoffs).

Sutton has been on a roll in the playoffs, outscoring opponents 19-2 in three games.

That number might be misleading however, as in the Sectional Final and State Semifinal, the numbers wers closer in a 2-1 win over Bromfield (Central) and 2-0 over Hopkins Academy (West champion).

Both Bromfield and Hopkins Academy were No. 1 seeds heading into their Sectionals, while Sutton was No. 2 in the Central behind Bromfield.

Cohasset coach Jim Willis knows the challenge ahead.

"We have to play the best game we've played all year," Willis said. "They're the two-time defending State Champ. They're 19-0-4 this year, and they've won 20 games each of the last two seasons."

It doesn't end there.

"They have a number of guys who can score, and their coach (Mike Elster) is a former Mass. State Coach of the Year," he said. "His son (Ryan Elster) is one of the top players."

Cohasset's Sam Morris celebrates a goal against Sacred Heart on Saturday. PHOTO/WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Elster had a goal in Sutton's 2-0 State Semifinal win over Hopkins Academy. The other goal was an own-goal.

Justin Rothermich is another big-time player for the Sammies. Junior Gordie Smythe is in his first year in net for Sutton, although he has played there at the club level.

Trying to gauge what kind of competition Sutton has faced compared to the Skippers is more difficult.

"We don't have a common opponent, so it's hard to gauge it," Willis said. "And there aren't teams we've played that they have. I know they're strong. They're looking for a three-peat."

Willis said his team is in the right frame of mind to be up to the challenge.

"We've been playing better and better," he said. "At every position we're playing our best soccer of the year. It has been a difficult road in the postseason. Every game has been very intense. We're competing and working hard. I hope we keep it up. This has been a very fun run. I'm looking for a good one on Saturday.

Usually we like his size in the middle but he put the ball down in the corner, saw the lane and put it through very quickly to hit Matt Legge. That quick decision is where that goal came from."

Legge, who scored twice in Cohasset's 3-1 South Sectional championship victory over Sacred Heart, has picked up the scoring pace while opponents key in on Buckley and co-captain Ryan McKeon, Cohasset's top two scorers.

"Joe just took a quick corner and I settled it off my chest and I put it into the corner," said Legge. "It was a huge momentum boost. It was a really tight game but that gave us the confidence to keep going."

The Skippers doubled their lead 40 seconds into the second half when junior Adam Benson scored on a setup from McKeon. Senior goalie Pat Federle made some key stops to keep the Pacers (13-3-7) off the board in the second half and finished with nine saves.

"In the second half we just came out ready to go," said Willis. "Scoring in the first half really gave us the momentum to come out strong in the second half.

"Everyone is geared toward shutting down Ryan and Joe since they are our top scorers, so in the tournament they have each taken on more of a role as playmakers for our midfielders," Willis added, noting that Legge, Benson and Sam Morris have picked up the slack offensively. "And our defense has just played so strong in every game and they were outstanding tonight."

Cohasset, which lost in the second round of the sectionals a year ago, graduated 13 seniors from last year's squad. Once they determined where personnel were best suited, the Skippers started winning.

"We needed to make adjustments and figure out where to put people," said Willis. "Ryan and Joe started the season at defensive center mid for us and it took us a couple weeks to realize they would be our offensive threats. We came out very slow and then we went to Norwell and beat them 1-0 and that turned our season around."

As they prepare for the state championship game against Sutton, the Skippers are battle tested. In the South Sectional, they defeated Archbishop Williams in the first round and then eliminated No. 4 seed Carver, No. 1 West Bridgewater and No. 2 Sacred Heart.

"We drew a brutal path into the tourney," said Willis. "I can't think of three teams I'd like to play less than Archies, Carver and West Bridgwater in the first three games. I knew if we got through that then anything could happen."

POPPIN' OFF

Talking some sports

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

This has been a fun season for sports in general.

We have the Red Sox winning the World Series, the Patriots still winning games despite a receiving corps that nobody has ever heard of, and a defense that seems to lose another key player every week.

The Celtics somehow have won four games in a row and the Bruins are still the Bruins.

On the local level, I have seen some interesting things this season, and just felt like throwing out a few thoughts.

One thought is night soccer in November.

I don't have a real reason, but I am not a fan.

Actually I have a reason.

It is cold!

Very cold.

How do soccer players ever get warmed up enough to play the game in shorts when it is cold enough to snow, like it did a few hours ago when I was writing this on Tuesday.

I actually thought of this on Sunday afternoon when I was watching the Cohasset boys in the South Sectional Final, and as I shivered while wearing three layers, gloves and a full-face ski mask, the thought of the next round at night made me shiver even more. Give me a nice 70 degree afternoon game and I'm loving it!

Speaking of Coach Willis, hope you feel better soon, and good luck Saturday.

This is about as big as it gets for Cohasset soccer.

The win on Saturday was the first sectional title since 1989.

But enough about the cold.

I know there will be plenty more of that during the winter in the hockey rinks.

On the other side of the sport, I saw something (none that had anything to do with Cohasset) – I mean that - seriously) that I didn't quite comprehend when it comes to sportsmanship.

In a recent game, and again, it was not Cohasset, an unnamed team was dominating another unnamed team in a playoff game, and the winning team, which had a bit of a bad reputation, enjoyed a moment when a player scored and did a backflip on a goal that made it 4-0.

It wasn't the winning goal. It wasn't the player's first goal. There was no way the other squad was coming back, and there was the showboating.

The interesting thing is that nobody was carded, and even warned, although later in the game, the losing team did have a player draw a card as tensions flared.

I guess it's just the game. In the heat of the moment it happens, but in high school, in a situation like that, it was just embarrasing

In Cohasset, I saw one player in a recent game complain to a ref, and was very quickly stopped by Coach Willis.

Said player stopped immediately, and had a huge tournament so far.

From my view, that's great coaching and a player who gets it, listens to the coach and plays with class.

Finally, I may have had my proudest moment as a coach when my daughter Katy scored her first-ever touchdown playing flag football.

I was pretty thrilled, even if we lost the game.

I went home smiling.

It has also been fun to watch the Cohasset football team this season.

These guys have done such a great job this season in all aspects of the game.

It has been great to see Cole Kissick emerge as a top running back, and Rocco Laugelle making things happen as a receiver and on special teams.

Chris Haggerty at quarterback seems to make all the right decisions, and I also love watching the second group of players getting the chance for significant playing time all season.

That just seems great for the future.

3) make a valiant attempt at a comeback on the strength of its multiple-back offense, led by senior Dimitri Revolus of Randolph. Revolus scored two touchdowns and gained 158 yards on 22 carries to put him over the 1,400-yard mark for the season.

"We're pretty proud of our kids," said Catabia. "We started off in the first half with mistakes and I told the kids in the second half to not worry about the score and to go out and have fun."

Cohasset got on the board 9 seconds into the game after Blue Hills failed to cover the opening kickoff.

Cohasset's Nick Hall pounced on the ball at the 19-yard line and quarterback Chris Haggerty hit Liam Burke for a 19-yard TD strike on the next play. Henry Butenschoen added the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Cohasset's Cole Kissick went over the 1,000-yard mark with 130 yards on 15 carries, including a 12-yard TD run in the first quarter to make it 14-0.

A Revolus 21-yard TD run pulled Blue Hills within 14-6 early in the second quarter, but Cohasset managed a 27-6 halftime lead on an 18-yard halfback pass from Hall to Terence Doonan and a 40-yard TD run by Ryan Gillis.

It went to 34-6 when Haggerty hit Rocco Laugelle for a 25-yard TD pass midway through the third quarter.

Cohasset's Liam Burke picks up some yards during the Skippers' 42-28 playoff victory over Blue Hills, Friday night. The Skippers host Millis/Hopedale tonight at 7 p.m. PHOTO/ALEX JONES

Blue Hills made it 34-14 when Revolus scored from 5 yards out and quarterback Keith Reissfelder hit Jason Fernandes for the conversion points.

Blue Hills drew within 34-22 with 1:42 left in the third quarter on Brandon Gordon's 46-yard run. Revolus added the 2-point conversion.

Reissfelder threw a 36-yard TD pass to David Neil early in the fourth quarter, making it 34-28 Cohasset.

Gillis' 2-yard TD run capped the scoring.

PREVIEW

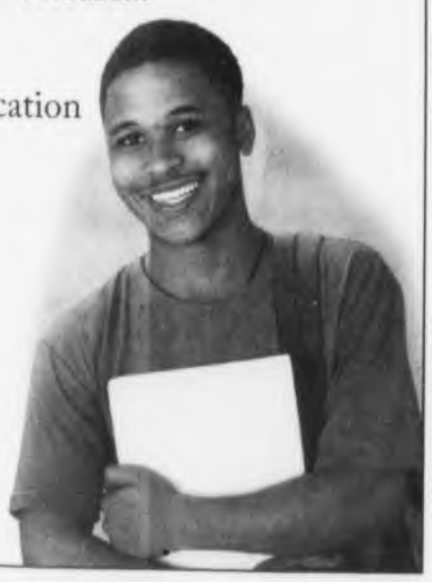
Outside of Abington, Cohasset has dominated, scoring at least 34 points in every game, while resting starters for much of the second half in most games.

The second lines have done well, holding and improving leads all season.

The most the Skippers have scores is 50 in a 50-6 win over Monomy. They scored 49 in their 49-8 opening-day win over Norwell.

Coach Pete Afanasiw knows what it will take for a victory.

"Practice has been good," he said. "The boys are really well focused and energetic! As for Friday, I just spoke to the boys about how in the playoffs it is not necessarily the best team that wins, it is the team that is playing the best that wins."



That means doing things properly is key.

"Execution is much more important than reputation at this stage of the season," he said. "They understand they need to continue to outwork their opponents in all three phases of the game. If they do that then they'll put themselves in a good position to win."

'A Christmas Story' adds NEW SPARKLE

Dan Lauria stars in charming new holiday musical for Boston

The Broadway musical 'A Christmas Story' brings television and theatre star Dan Lauria to the Citi Performing Arts Wang Theatre Nov. 20 to Dec. 8.

Dan Lauria is such a strong presence in the musical "A Christmas Story" that it's easy to overlook that he doesn't sing – not one note. And the audience should be thankful for that.

"I want to reassure you I don't sing," said Lauria, who is best known for his roles as the father in the television show "The Wonder Years" and as Vince Lombardi in the Broadway play "Lombardi." "If I did, you'd have my back."

When "A Christmas Story, The Musical" comes to the Citi Performing Arts Center Wang Theatre Nov. 20 - Dec. 8, Lauria will repeat his Broadway performance as the narrator, a grown man looking back on his youthful quest for a Red Ryder BB gun for Christmas in 1940. The three other Broadway original cast members are Erin Dilly as Mother, John Bolton as Old Man and Caroline O'Connor as Miss Shields.

Lauria, 66, has a sonorous voice, authoritative and compelling, perfect for guiding the audience through Ralphie's escapades and dealings with his grouchy, tempestuous father.

"It's a very active part, because I'm walking in and out of scenes and talking to the audience," Lauria said. "I'm like a Greek chorus."

Lauria, who also is a film actor, playwright and children's author, has had far more complex roles, but none with the challenges unique to musical theater.

"In the beginning, I was like, 'Are you going to play that music while I'm talking," said Lauria, nominated for Outstanding Featured Actor in a Music by the Outer Critics Circle. "It seemed rude. That shows you how much I knew about musicals."

Lauria can be dismissive when he speaks of the hype around Broadway and the history of "A Christmas Story, The Musical."

"It makes no difference to me whether a play is on Broadway or in New Jersey," he said. "I'd rather do a good play in an alley than a bad one on Broadway."

Lauria accepted the role in "A Christmas Story" only after the script went through a complete revision. The first version deviated too much from the script of the beloved 1983 movie, he said.

"When they first did it in Kansas it was terrible," he said. "Then it went through what it takes to develop into a good play."

The show begins and ends with Lauria delivering a monologue, written by Jean Shepherd, the radio humorist and storyteller. Shepherd wrote the story "Red Ryder Nails the Cleveland Street Kid," that is the basis of the movie. Other than these monologues, the dialogue and events are nearly identical to the movie.

"This is one show where we're never ahead of the audience," Lauria said. "They know what's coming and that's what they want."

But there are plenty of surprises because, after all, this is a musical. Written by composer Benj Pasek and lyricist Justin Paul, the 18 songs give emotion and drama to Ralphie's fantasies. With a passel of dancing kids and big choreographed numbers, the songs sweep up the audience with their exuberance, comedy and sweetness.

Given that Lauria has performed in 57 productions, he has a breadth that may be unfamiliar to audiences who identify him as Jack Arnold from Emmy-winning show "The Wonder Years."

He demonstrated that versatility as the legendary coach Vince Lombardi in "Lombardi," a new play that was expected to run for 10 weeks but ran from October 2010 through May 2011. A former linebacker who received a football scholarship to Southern Connecticut State University and made All-Conference, Lauria knew football and it showed.

"A lot of people said it needed a big name star," said Lauria, clearly proud of his portrayal.

Lauria recalled the visit he received backstage from Tom Brady and other Patriots, as well as many Packers and Dolphins players.

"Tom said he liked the show," said Lauria, who grew up on Long Island and is a Giants fan. "We were both in awe of Lombardi."

Ironically, the football field was the place where the possibility of theatre entered Lauria's life.

"I was telling a joke to my teammates and a teacher heard me," he said. "She suggested I should try out for a show."

After graduation, Lauria was a Marine officer during the Vietnam War and earned a Master of Fine Arts in play writing. His play "Dinner with the Boys" will be produced by the New Jersey Repertory Company in Long Branch. Over the years, he has produced more than 400 readings of new American plays to champion unrecognized playwrights.

"Dan does not do plays by dead white guys," Lauria said bluntly, when he expressed his dismay that Broadway favors the classics and neglects contemporary plays that deserve prominence.

Currently, he stars as Jack Sullivan in the TBS sitcom "Sullivan & Son," where he plays an Irish-American father whose corporate lawyer son takes over the Pittsburgh working-class bar he ran. And he is excited about the recent release of his book "The Blue Hair Club," the first in his new series of children's stories"The Godfather Tales," based on ones he made up for his godson Julian Farnsworth. Lauria did not have children during his 10 years of marriage, but Julian is like a son to him and spends a lot of time with Lauria in his California home, he said.

For now, Lauria looks forward to the Boston run of "A Christmas Story," especially to sharing the stage with the kids who make the show so much fun.

"I miss them," he said. "They'd come into my dressing room and I'd give them hot chocolate and tell them stories."

There's no gingerbread or candy canes in these shows

Broadway in Boston brings "Once" to the Boston Opera House Jan. 7-19.

Sick of ho-ho holidays?

When the holiday entertainment gets a little too sweet, like the candies and pastries that follow every meal, we often yearn for something with some bite. Here are a few shows that take us to a different culture ("Arabian Nights"), say things we don't dare say to our parents during this festive season ("The Cocktail Hour"), offer some of the rough sides of life ("Working," "The Color Purple"), and even get rather naughty ("Venus in Fur"). They should more than cleanse your palate.

Celebrate with song

Holiday concerts with a different beat

The Chandler Travis Philharmonic headlines the annual Boston Christmas Cavalcade for the Homeless on Dec. 12 at Johnny D's in Somerville.

Is it already time to say 'tis the season? Yup. The leaves are (mostly) down, the coats have replaced the jackets, the basement oil tanks have been filled and, for those who haven't completely switched over to impersonal email greetings, the holiday card lists have been dug up. But we're going beyond just saying the phrase; we're thinking of singing 'tis the season. There are plenty of holiday-related concerts going on at clubs and venues throughout December in Boston and its surroundings as well as in MetroWest. Here are some suggestions for your listening pleasure that will help you celebrate Christmas, Hanukkah and the spirit of the year's end.

Erin McKeown performs her "Anti-Holiday Spectacular" Dec. 6 at Passim in Cambridge.

On Dec. 7, Matisyahu's Festival of Light brings reggae, pop, rock and traditional Hebrew together at the House of Blues, Boston.

Dec. 3 Peter White's Christmas – It's an evening of Christmas-flavored smooth jazz with the acoustic guitarist being joined by saxophonist Mindi Abair and trumpeter Rick Braun. Tickets: $40. At Scullers, Allston, 617-562-4111

Dec. 6 The Four Bitchin' Babes perform "Jingle Babes!" – You never know who will be joining this ever-changing quartet of folk-singing women who like to spice up the songs of Christmas in a satirical way, then add in some oddball holiday stories. Tickets: $35. At the Center for Arts in Natick, 508-647-0097.

Dec. 5 - Elan Trotman Christmas special – The Barbados-born, Boston-based saxophonist is best known for his smooth jazz sounds, but he is responsible for the annual project known as "The Reggae Christmas." So get ready for an upfront bass beat. Tickets: $25. At Scullers, Allston, 617-562-4111

Dec. 6 Erin McKeown's Anti-Holiday Spectacular – The singer-songwriter lets loose in a funny, curse-filled, satirical take on the kind of seasonal music that obviously drives her crazy. This show's definitely not for the kids, or those who take Christmas music seriously. Tickets $20. At Passim, Cambridge.

Dec. 8 The Catie Curtis Christmas Show – The longtime local folksinger, and band, will perform distinctive versions of "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas," "Little Drummer Boy," "Baby, It's Cold Outside," and more from last year's album "A Catie Curtis Christmas." Tickets: $30. At Passim, Cambridge.

Dec. 7 Matisyahu's Festival of Light – Reggae, pop, rock, and traditional Hebrew all blend together, along with a big, energetic stage presence, even though Hanukkah – celebrated early this year – will already have passed. Tickets: $28.50 and $39.50. At House of Blues, Boston, 888-693-2583.

Dec. 7 Nancy Beaudette (and friends) Holiday Show – The Canadian singer-songwriter, along with pals Scott Rossley, Christine Hatch, Steve Rapson, Dawn Kenney, Deb O'Hanlon, Gail Finnie and Aisling Keating, will feature original music from her Christmas album "Fa La La." Tickets: $18. At Amazing Things Arts Center, Framingham, 508-405-2787.

Dec. 8 The Back Bay Ringers – This group makes the instrument more musical. They'll be performing some classics from their album "Merry and Bright: A Celebration of Carols." Tickets $15. At Amazing Things Arts Center, Framingham, 508-405-2787.

Dec. 10 The Sweetback Sisters Christmas Spectacular – They're not related, but Emily Miller and Zara Bode – The Sweetback Sisters – sing country music like they are. Along with their flannel shirt-wearing band, they'll do Christmas standards and rarities, and pass out lyric sheets for audience members to join in. Tickets: $15. At Passim, Cambridge, 617-492-7679

Dec. 12 The Chandler Travis Philharmonic headlines the Annual Boston Christmas Cavalcade for the Homeless, featuring Merrie Amsterberg, Miriam, Sal Baglio, The Philharmonic Trombone Shout Band, and The Athol Thingerth. Suggested donation: $25. At Johnny D's, Somverville, 617-776-2004.

Dec. 12 A Fine Winter's Night with Matt & Shannon Heaton and Lissa Schneckenburger – Schneckenburger's fine fiddling mixes well with the multi-instrumental lineup and vocals of the Heatons, producing a whole new take on songs and carols we all know. Tickets: $18. At Passim, Cambridge, 617-492-7679

Dec. 13 Michelle Willson Christmas Show – The Boston blues songstress goes a little folkie with her Second Annual Holiday Hootenanny. Tickets: $20. At Amazing Things Arts Center, Framingham, 508-405-2787.

Dec. 15 Yulegrass: Lauren Rioux, Scott Law, Mike Block, Amanda Kowalski & Tony Trischka – Yulegrass almost rhymes with bluegrass. Let's just say there'll be lots of string players reinventing the way we usually hear this music. Tickets: $25. At Passim, Cambridge, 617-492-7679

Dec. 21 The Heather Pierson Quartet: A Charlie Brown Christmas – Jazz pianist Pierson heads up her group in a performance of Vince Guaraldi's music from the soundtrack of the popular TV special. Tickets: $18. At Amazing Things Arts Center, Framingham, 508-405-2787.

Dec. 21 The Paul Byrom Holiday Show – The Irish tenor, whose first album, recorded when he was only 14, was aptly titled "The Golden Voice," will sing selections from his 2008 release "I'll be Home for Christmas." Tickets: $30. At Regattabar, Cambridge. 617-661-5000

Dec. 21 Wayne Martin's Puppets Presents "Santa's North Pole Express" – A family-friendly show featuring oversized marionettes including Frosty and Rudolph, and the ever popular juggling Christmas tree. Tickets: $10 (adults), $8 (kids). At the Center for Arts in Natick, 508-647-0097.

Dec. 24 Jewmongous – Sean Altman, who founded Rockapella, has been touring around for most of the past decade with this extremely hip and very funny take on the Jewish side of the season. Can't think of a better way to spend Christmas Eve. Tickets: $20. At Passim, Cambridge, 617-492-7679.

Douglas chronicles Bank of NE failure

Author Charles Douglas announces the release of his new book, "The Outstanding Truth," a detailed chronicle of management behavior, which, over a 10-year period, lead up to the failure of Bank of New England Corp.

While centered on bank management behavior, it has application to the management of any organization and particularly to those who are concerned about the interactions among managers and the impact of those interactions on overall performance and accountability. The material referred to is taken from memos and other documentation subpoenaed by the Trustee in Bankruptcy, many of the documents used as exhibits in depositions and some in the court. All of the memos presented by Douglas in this book were drawn from his 25 years of experience at the Bank of New England and 10 at Irving Trust Co., in New York.

Published by Tate Publishing and Enterprises, the book is available through bookstores nationwide, from the publisher at: tatepublishing.com/bookstore, or by visiting barnesandnoble.com or amazon.com.

A rubber boot catches on fire as a result of step potential from a live fence. The closer you are to a live conducting object, your chance of electricity hurting you increases because of the voltage difference between the fence and your body.

A hot dog catches fire after it comes into contact with a live fence that is touching a primary wire that is conducting 4,000 volts. The primary wire usually conducts 8,000-15,000 volts.

Beyond the classroom at Curry College

Graduate students partner with law enforcement community agencies

Students in Curry College's Master of Criminal Justice (MACJ) program do more than just learn in the classroom. For their final capstone course, students also learned in the field through partnering with the Plymouth Intensive Probation Supervision (IPS) Court to conduct a recidivism analysis and the Boston Police Department (BPD) to reduce burglaries and improve neighborhood safety.

Plymouth students assess 'Drug Court' effectiveness

The Plymouth MACJ cohort conducted an assessment of the effectiveness of the Plymouth IPS Court, also known as the "drug court," to examine whether there was a reduction in re-offenses by IPS Court participants. "This study helped us better understand what it is we're doing and gave us positive ideas on how to improve what we do," said Judge Rosemary Minehan of the Plymouth Court.

Team Leader Bill Massey commented that the diversity of his fellow students was a great advantage in conducting a successful project. The team represented a cross-section of ages and ethnicities with a variety of backgrounds in law enforcement and correctional occupations, including patrol officers, sergeants, lieutenants, detectives, substance abuse professionals and social insurance specialists.

"I now have a much better understanding of how other agencies serve the justice system. This project better connected us as professionals and better informed us as concerned citizens and professional students. It made us more effective researchers and I'm happy to report – closer friends."

Milton students assist BPD in burglary prevention

The Milton MACJ cohort worked with the Boston Police Department on a burglary prevention capstone project that involved the analysis of three years of burglary data within the Allston-Brighton area.

Cohort member Michael Whittaker reported on criminological theories that answered three key questions: Why do criminals pick certain areas to commit their crime? Why are some homes targeted more than others? How do criminals know which homes to burglarize?

Carrie Hormanski, another cohort student, reinforced the notion of "predictive policing" with her report. By utilizing several state-of-the-art crime mapping software tools, she and her team analyzed several sources of data to pinpoint and analyze hotspot areas.

The team's analysis and report detailed ways empirical research is utilized in real-life policing scenarios. To collect data, the team visited hotspot-area properties and also conducted interviews with property owners and tenants to provide a deeper understanding of the problem. The team provided insightful policy recommendations to decrease burglaries and make the neighborhood safer.

Both cohort teams reported their findings to an audience of faculty, staff, and representatives from the partnering agencies at the Milton campus.

MACJ Program capstone illustrates reflective practice

The Milton and Plymouth cohort teams completed their projects with the goal of becoming "reflective practitioners."

Dr. Jennifer Balboni, MACJ Program co-director, said "the model asks those of us working in the field to engage in a process of reflection to improve upon what we do as professionals in criminal justice – to be better at what we do and to be more humane in the pursuit of justice."

Fuel your career at Tufts

Find your path to success through School of Medicine's PHPD programs

Melanie Gaiser was considering medical school when she happened upon Tufts University School of Medicine's Masters in Public Health (MPH) program – a program that has led her on a fascinating path.

Gaiser plans to pursue a career in qualitative research and patient-provider communication after she completes her Ph.D. in health policy.

"Tufts fueled a new passion for me," Gaiser says. "I am now blending my previous career [as a journalist] with my desire to help patients."

At Tufts "hands on" is no empty phrase – it's an integral part of every class, where students learn not only the theory, but the skills needed to pursue public and allied health careers. The Applied Learning Experience (ALE), a self-designed field study requirement, provides challenging forays into real work environments.

When Andrea Fletcher was planning her ALE project for the MS-Health Communication program – a preschool sun safety and skin cancer prevention program for the Maine Department of Health and Human Services – she had no idea it would eventually become the springboard for her career in the public sector.

"Before Tufts, I had worked in the private sector. I went back to school because I wanted to balance my experience in commercial marketing with improving the health of our communities," Fletcher says. "My ALE pulled together everything I had learned at Tufts." Today, as a public health educator for Maine's Comprehensive Cancer Control and Colorectal Cancer Control programs, she is implementing the program throughout the state.

Tufts PHPD's connection to a medical school is a unique asset. "A great benefit is the varied connections faculty have," Gaiser says. "If you need an introduction to someone in an influential position, or you want to do hospital administration or clinical research, chances are those contacts are right there in the next room. These connections enrich the learning experience and provide many opportunities after graduation."

At Tufts, students learn critical thinking, writing and speaking skills that teach them to effect change. "These are the skills employers look for in students – the ability to solve problems in systems, both at the agency and community levels," says Dr. Anthony Schlaff, director of the public health program.

Meridith Lawrence's MS –Pain, Research and Education gave her the tools she needed to speak knowledgeably in order to help more patients.

"I was already a pharmacist with an interest in pain management. Now I am the 'go to' person at my institution for pain information and expertise. I am a founding member of the palliative care team, the pediatric pain task force and the pain committee in the ambulatory setting."

If you are passionate about improving the health of people, communities and the environment, consider one of Tufts' PHPD Programs. Other programs offered include Doctor of Public Health; MS –Medical Sciences (Physician Assistant); MS –Development and Regulation of Medicines and Devices; and MS –Biomedical Sciences degrees.

EXPERIENCE THE MSLAW DIFFERENCE.
THE EXPERIENCE IS THE DIFFERENCE.
Why do students love their experience here? Maybe it's the chance to learn from professors that practice what they teach. Maybe it's the lasting bonds students form, whether in interactive classes or mock trials. Or maybe it's the peace of mind of experiencing New England's lowest tuition.

Holiday savings

The holidays are stressful enough without worrying about food. To make things go a little more smoothly during family entertaining, try these tips from Recyclebank:

Shop local and buy in bulk: Give yourself a pat on the back for helping out the environment and local businesses, as less fuel and packaging are needed for food brought from farms closer to home. Some of the best bulk holiday foods include nuts and grains.

Celebrate imperfection: Even though that apple has a small blemish, it'll still taste great in a homemade pie or other dish. Don't trash rotten produce, either — reduce emissions by composting. You can try vermicomposting (composting indoors with worms) during the winter in smaller spaces or set up a bin in your yard to help nourish your garden.

Get those buns in the oven: Already roasting a turkey or baking a ham? Choose side dishes that can go in the oven alongside your main dish at the same temperature. If you time it appropriately, the dishes will be ready at the same time and you won't have to worry about anything getting cold.

Start a leftovers tradition: Guests can bring over their own reusable container and fill it with leftovers to take home. If your party is too small or you make too much food, you can always donate it to a local food shelter or rescue program to help someone in need.

Keep it separate: During your holiday meals, serve individual drinks from recyclable aluminum cans and wine from a box. Or, use glasses you have on hand and try to avoid Styrofoam. Have guests help you separate compostable materials and recyclables as you're cooking and cleaning.

Pumpkin is king

Versatility will wow your guests with more than pie

By Saimi Bergmann
More Content Now

SXC.HU.COM

In the drama that is Thanksgiving dinner, pumpkin earns a starring role. Pumpkin pie is as central a character to this annual meal as the turkey.

Pumpkin can also play a supporting role, appearing in muffins, breads and bisques.

But perhaps most surprising is pumpkin's success as background, adding moisture or richness without any discernible pumpkin flavor.

A supporting role

Our nomination for best supporting role goes to the pumpkin latte, a recipe from "Pumpkin: A Super Food for All 12 Months of the Year" by DeeDee Stovel. With a few ingredients and a little practice, you won't need to head off to Starbucks or Dunkin' Donuts to enjoy this seasonal favorite.

Mix a couple spoonfuls of pumpkin puree with sugar and a shot of espresso. If you don't have an espresso machine, you can use double-strength coffee. Top off this mixture with steamed, frothed milk and some freshly grated nutmeg.

A close runner up in the supporting category is the pumpkin muffin from Jo Ann Martin and Vickie Hutchins, founders of the popular Gooseberry Patch cook booklets. Their new booklet, "Pumpkin," includes a recipe for muffins with a surprise — a cheesecake filling — and a streusel topping. These muffins will steal the show at a holiday brunch.

In the background

The winner in the background category is a silky sauce for pasta from Rachael Ray. Unless you confess, nobody will know this earthy, sage-laden dish owes much of its appeal to canned pumpkin.

Ray's recipe is simple, but it's important to have all your ingredients out and ready before you start preparation. It's from her "30 Minute Meals" TV show, so it goes together quickly once you get started.

She starts with Italian sausage, garlic and onion, then adds lots of fresh sage leaves, cut into thin ribbons. Do not be tempted to substitute dried sage — it's not the same.

The sauce is a combination of pumpkin, white wine, chicken stock and cream, scented with nutmeg. So outstanding I found myself wishing for more sauce and less sausage. Next time, I may cut the sausage to half a pound and the pasta to 3/4 pound. Or I may simply double the sauce part of the recipe.

Pumpkin Latte

- 1 shot of espresso
- 2 T of canned pumpkin
- 1 t sugar
- 1/4 t cinnamon
- Pinch nutmeg
- Steamed milk

Mix the espresso, pumpkin, sugar and spices in a large mug. Fill with steamed milk.

If you don't have a steamer or frother, you can microwave the milk on high for 30 seconds, then froth with a stick blender or aerating tool.

Optional: Top with whipped cream and a pinch of freshly grated nutmeg.

Pumpkin and Sausage Pasta

- 2 T extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 1 pound bulk sweet Italian sausage
- 4 cloves garlic, chopped
- 1 medium onion, finely chopped
- 1 bay leaf, fresh or dried
- 4 to 6 sprigs sage leaves, cut into chiffonade, about 2 T
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 1 cup chicken stock
- 1 cup canned pumpkin
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 1/8 t ground cinnamon
- 1/2 t ground or grated nutmeg
- Coarse salt and black pepper
- 1 pound penne rigate, cooked al dente, drained, returned

Optional: I used whole milk instead of heavy cream, with fine results.

Heat large, deep nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Brown sausage in 1 tablespoon of the olive oil. Transfer sausage to paper towel-lined plate. Drain fat from skillet; add the remaining tablespoon oil, garlic and onion. Saute 3 to 5 minutes until the onions are tender.

Add bay leaf, sage, and wine to pan. Reduce wine by half, about 2 minutes. Add stock and pumpkin and stir to combine, stirring sauce until it comes to a bubble. Return sausage to pan, reduce heat, stir in cream. Season sauce with cinnamon and nutmeg. Simmer mixture 5 to 10 minutes to thicken sauce. Remove the bay leaf.

To serve, pour sausage-pumpkin sauce over pasta, or toss over low heat for 1 minute. Yields 4 servings. Garnish with shaved Parmigiano or Romano cheese and sage leaves.

Make a juicy pork roast in the Crock-Pot

JIM HILLIBISH

My butcher tells me pork loin is the top-selling meat in his case. Maybe that's because it can be bone in or out pork roasts, pork chops, pork steaks and back bacon. We call that Canadian bacon.

Nothing like a pork loin stirs your imagination, especially on sale.

I decided to throw out everything and start from scratch. I know, that's always taking a chance, hence my flatbread pizza made with mushroom soup. Let's just say you needed a bowl.

I came up with an Asian marinade including honey and soy sauce with obligatory garlic. The piggie spent the night bathing in it. Then I seared it on all sides over high heat. The final step is the surprise — Crock-Pot.

The marinade went into the pot with a bottle of Canadian beer, Labatt's. Pork loin was brought by English settlers to Canada, settlers bearing gifts of pigs. The beer was fitting.

I didn't have enough time for the required 6 to 8 hours cooking length. So I shortened it to two hours on high, covered, and stuck a thermometer into it in case that wasn't enough.

With an hour to go, I added cubes of potatoes, carrots and onions. By then, the aroma had our dog Lily wagging and watching my every move.

It was perfect. The sauce made rich gravy, and the roast sliced in pieces and wasn't stringy.

The fat on the top had dissolved, adding juiciness.

Time for the critic: "This is the best pork roast you've made," said my wife, with her mouth full. Lily was too busy on her "I wanna" dance to comment.

Jim's Pork Loin

Meat:

- 1 pound boneless pork loin

Marinade:

- 2 fresh rosemary sprigs or 1 t dried
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1 T white vinegar
- 1 T Worcestershire sauce
- 2 cloves garlic, diced
- 1 T honey or brown sugar

Crock-Pot:

- 1 bottle beer, 12 ounces
- Cut vegetables (potatoes, onions, carrots, etc.)

Mix marinade. Add pork and refrigerate overnight, turning occasionally.

Oil a heavy skillet, heat to just before smoking and sear the loin on all sides, about 5 minutes total. Place in a Crock-Pot on high with marinade and the fat side up. Pour over beer. Cover and cook for an hour. Then add vegetables and cover and cook for another hour. It's done when a meat thermometer shows 160 F.

Remove liquid from the pot to a saucepan and mix 1 tablespoon flour into 3 tablespoons juice. Whisk to combine, then pour into simmering juices, whisking until thickened. Slice meat and arrange vegetables around it. Serve gravy on the side.

Note: This makes perfect second-day hash with the gravy.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 25, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A project benefits from your organizational skills that get it up and running. Your success leaves a highly favorable impression. Don't be surprised if you get some positive feedback soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Spend time on practical matters through the end of the week. Then begin shifting your focus to more-artistic pursuits. Resist being overly self-critical. Just allow yourself to feel free to create.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Restarting those creative projects you had set aside for a while will help provide a much-needed soothing balance to your hectic life. Besides, it will be like meeting old friends again.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change in plans could make it tough to keep a commitment. But stay with it. You'll get an A-plus for making the effort to do what's right and not taking the easy way out by running off.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Lion's enthusiasm for a workplace policy review is admirable. But be sure you know who is really behind the resistance to change before pointing your finger at the wrong person.

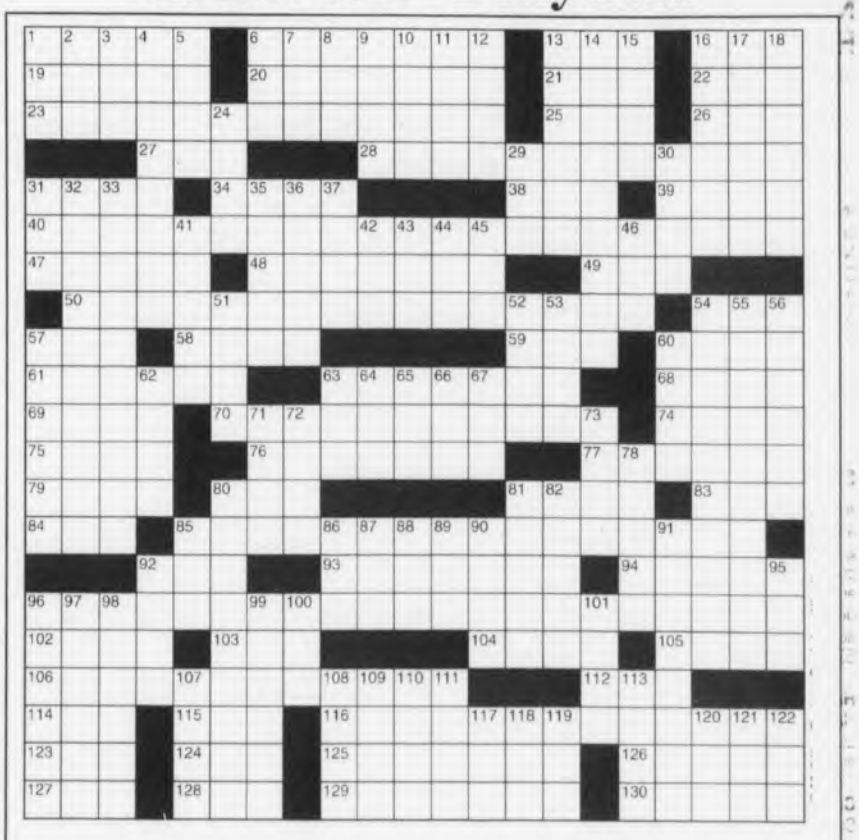
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You can expect to have to do a lot of work through midweek. Devote the rest of the week to checking your holiday plans in case some need to be adjusted to accommodate changes.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Try to avoid signing on the dotted line in the early part of the week. You need time to study issues that weren't fully explored. Later in the week might be more favorable for decision-making.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new development could snarl travel schedules or other holiday-linked projects. Some flexibility might be called for to deal with the problems before they get too far out of hand.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Relatives seek your advice on a matter you'd rather not be involved in. If so, use that sage Sagittarian tact to decline the "offer," so that no one's feelings are needlessly hurt.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A shift in planning direction might help you speed up your progress toward achieving that long-planned goal. Trusted colleagues are ready to offer some valuable support.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unexpected demand for settlement of an old loan could create some pre-holiday anxiety. But you might not really owe it. Check your records thoroughly before remitting payment.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's a good time to get into the social swim and enjoy some well-earned fun and games with those closest to you before you have to resume more serious activities next week.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Advisory against Article 1

Split decision on money matters

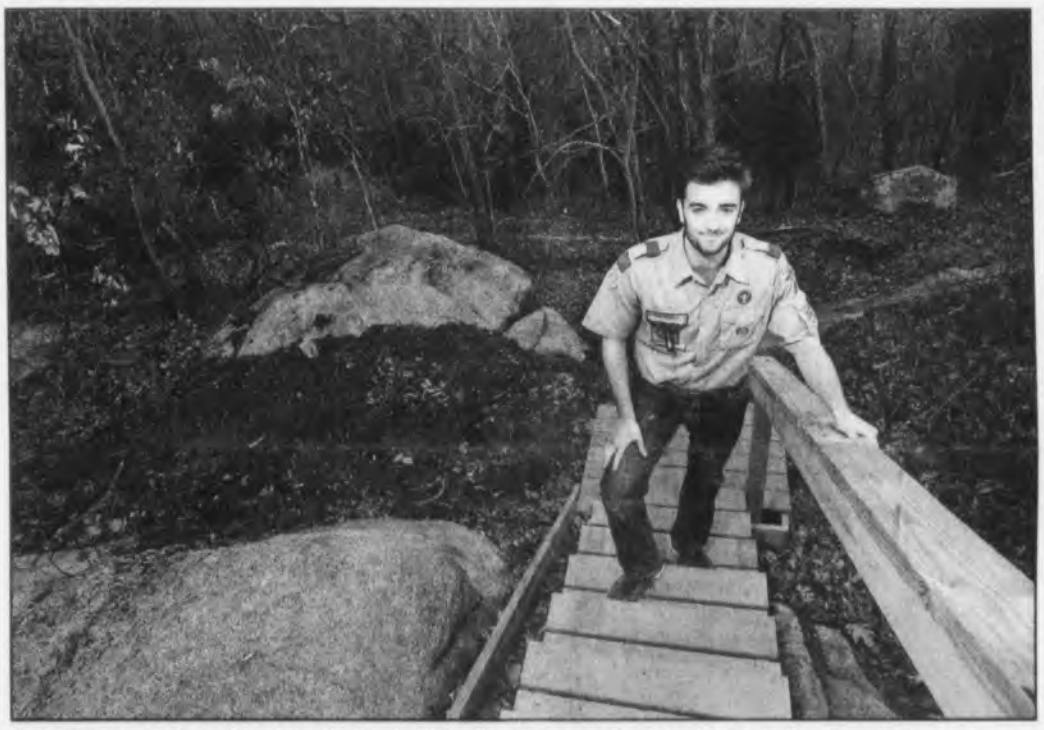
By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

While most of the articles on this Saturday's special Town Meeting Warrant have been labeled "housekeeping matters" by town officials, it seems one article has courted a bit of controversy.

Article 1 on the warrant, which was mailed out to residents two weeks ago, was petitioned by nearly 400 citizens to deal with financial matters, including $1.3 million in Free Cash certified by the state this fall.

The citizens' petition forced Cohasset selectmen to call for a fall special Town Meeting, which was debated by officials who earlier questioned whether Cohasset needed to hold one (once a Town Meeting is called, it must be held within 45 days).

Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre said, "We've always had a special Town Meeting. Since I've been here, there's never not been" a fall Town Meeting.



Special Town Meeting will convene Saturday, Nov. 23 at 9:30 a.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

Call it the special Town Meeting that almost wasn't.

Selectmen were reluctant to schedule the meeting as they are in the midst of a town manager search. Final candidate interviews took place this week. (See related story

A stairway to heaven

Eagle Scout's project is something to see

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Jack O'Brien ended up with an Eagle Scout project that rocks – literally.

For his contribution, O'Brien, a 17-year-old Cohasset High School senior, constructed a staircase leading up to Beacon Rock, which overlooks Cohasset Harbor from behind Lightkeepers House.

The stairs were built on top of the trail that snakes its way up to the rock, upon which used to sit a semaphore tower, a.k.a. a low-tech way of signaling with flags.

"When they built the lighthouse, the masons that sculpted it carved out stairs," O'Brien explained during an afternoon hike up to the rock. "It looks like they tried to cut out a staircase out of the rock. I think there might have been a trail at one point. There was a semaphore tower 100 years ago, but it fell down."

O'Brien thought this would be a fun project to pursue. Wayne Sawchuk suggested it to him during a meeting with the Cohasset Rotary.

TOWN MANAGER

Five have their say

Selectmen gear up for final round

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Five town manager candidates put their best feet forward this week during interviews with the Board of Selectmen.

The five finalists are Steven Hartford of Bradford, Rhode Island; William DiLibero of North Kingstown, R.I.; Timothy King of Harwich Port, Mass.; Grady Miller of Narragansett, R.I.; and Christopher Senior of Port Washington, New York.

Cohasset's Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, has served in the position since March 2012 following former Town Manager Michael Coughlin's removal. Milanoski applied for the job but was not among the finalists. Coughlin is suing the town for reinstatement.

Selectmen launched the search for a permanent town manager in July, hiring consultants from the UMass Boston Collins Center. Senior Associate Richard Kobayashi primarily oversaw the search, working with the board to craft a town profile and job description of the town manager position.

The center conducted the search, advertised the position, and narrowed down a pool of 24 candidates to six finalists. Last week, Kobayashi said that one of these finalists dropped out of the race, leaving the selectmen with five to interview throughout this week. Interviews began on Monday and concluded on Wednesday.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Faculty fight for enrollment right

Topic catches board members off guard

The issue at hand: whether children of faculty should be allowed to continue their education in Cohasset year after year.

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It was standing room only in the community room of Cohasset High School Wednesday night (Nov. 20) as faculty members packed the school committee meeting.

The issue at hand: whether children of faculty should be allowed to continue their education in Cohasset year after year.

The matter was a surprise topic that the school committee chair had not anticipated within 48 – or even 24 – hours of the meeting. As such, the committee had to vote to amend the agenda to allow those concerned to speak, bumping up the public comment period to the top of the agenda.

While members of the public could comment, school board members were unable to ask questions or respond.

Laura Keating, an Osgood teacher, addressed the school committee. She noted that she spoke with School Committee Chairman Paul Schubert late Tuesday night. However, Schubert said that he would have liked to have received earlier notification.

Keating stated her concern as fellow faculty members listened. On Tuesday, Nov. 5, Keating said she met with Schools Superintendent Barbara Cataldo along with Deer Hill teacher Karen Johnston concerning Article 24, Section 5 of the Cohasset Teacher Association's contract regarding children of faculty attending school in the district.

According to the contract, faculty members' children are allowed to attend school in Cohasset provided there is enough space to accommodate them. It's not a matter of Attempted left turn across two lanes results in accident

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 27-year-old Hull woman with non-life-threatening injuries was transported to the hospital on Thursday (Nov. 14) following a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Leo's Gulf Station. Police said the woman, who was driving a 2012 Nissan Maxima, tried to make a left out of the gas station driveway across two lanes of northbound traffic when she was struck by a 2013 Volvo XC90 that was headed north. The Volvo was operated by a 39-year-old Cohasset woman. Both vehicles were towed. The Hull woman was cited for failure to use caution when entering a state highway, police said.

Intoxicated

Police gave a 42-year-old Scituate woman a ride home after she was attempting to get into her car and drive home around 5:15 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 14). Police responded to a call outside the Legion Hall where the woman's male friend, who is 56 and from Cohasset, was preventing her from getting behind the wheel of her car because she was intoxicated.

Hunter

Police responded to a complaint about a man with a crossbow and wearing camouflage walking in the area near Border Street last week. Police said the man had a hunting license. Police explained that it is currently archery deer-hunting season.

Helped mother

Police went to the aid of a 33-year-old Nantucket woman last week who called because she was having trouble getting her son, who has special needs, into her van in the parking lot at Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza off King Street (Route 3A). When police arrived she had gotten the boy into the van. The officer provided the mother with a cruiser escort to the Hull town line to make sure everything was still OK.

Wires down

Police responded to a mishap on Cedar Street involving a large tractor-trailer truck that took down some low-hanging wires while making a delivery to the Cohasset Golf Club on Wednesday (Nov. 13) around 11:10 a.m. The operator of the truck, which had some slight damage, was a 36-year-old Worcester man, police said.

Icing up

Police got their first call last week about icy road conditions. A caller reported the road was icing up around 7:20 p.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 13) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Pond Street. Police notified MassDOT about the road conditions and said there is some run off in the area that freezes.

Domestic

A 34-year-old Cohasset man was arrested for domestic assault and battery and intimidation of a witness on Wednesday evening (Nov. 13) following a dispute with his wife that allegedly became physical, police said. The husband was held overnight at the station and transported to Quincy District Court the following morning for arraignment.

The court has not been allowing bail for people who are arrested for domestic violence and therefore police are holding suspects overnight or over the weekend without bail.

Hit and run

A 62-year-old Hingham woman reported to police on Thursday afternoon (Nov. 14) that the 2001 Volvo she had parked outside the Sea Chest Consignment Shop off Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) was backed into while she was shopping. There was damage to the passenger-side mirror, police said.

Chicken attacked

A Cedar Lane woman reported to police on Friday (Nov. 25) around 9 a.m. that a large dog had attacked her chicken and she needed assistance to get the dog out of her car so she could take the chicken to the veterinarian.

MVA

Police responded to a two-car accident on the west end of Beechwood Street near its intersection with King Street on Friday (Nov. 15) around 10:15 a.m. Police said a 2005 Dodge Ram truck, operated by a 49-year-old Weymouth man, was attempting to make a left onto King Street when it was hit from behind by a 2012 Toyota Prius. The Prius was operated by a 43-year-old Halifax woman. There were no tows and the operator of the Prius was cited for failure to use caution.

Phone scam

A 49-year-old Cohasset woman went to the police station on Saturday (Nov. 16) to report a phone scam. The woman explained she had received a call from a man with a Spanish accent who demanded money and claimed to be holding her brother hostage after he had been involved in a serious motor vehicle accident. She hung up and contacted her brother in Braintree who was fine. She recognized the call as a scam and notified police.

Chain saw

Police have custody of a chainsaw that fell off a landscaping truck on Sunday afternoon (Nov. 17) near Jerusalem Road and North Main Street. A caller reported that a bunch of branches and a saw had fallen off the back of the truck. No one has claimed the chainsaw, police said.

Tax values stable

Selectmen adopt uniform rate

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Homeowners can calculate their monthly property taxes by taking the assessed property value, dividing it by $1,000 and multiplying that by the tax rate.

The Board of Selectmen votes to adopt a uniform tax rate versus a split one for all property classes during the tax classification hearing on Tuesday, Nov. 19.

A split tax rate would shift the tax burden between the residential, commercial, industrial, and personal property classes. According to the town's Board of Assessors, a split rate shouldn't be considered unless the combined valuation of commercial, industrial and personal property equals 25 percent of the total taxable valuation of the town.

Cohasset has historically adopted a uniform rate every year. A uniform rate is "most logical for this town," said Town Assessor Mary Quill. "I don't think the board of assessors has ever recommended anything but a uniform rate."

A split rate between residential and commercial properties would be "bad for the commercial property owner," Quill said, because the rate would be so much higher for commercial properties that it could discourage businesses from coming into town.

The town's total property value is assessed at $2.5 billion. Only 6.98 percent of this valuation is commercial, industrial and personal, meaning that nearly 93 percent of the tax burden lies with residential property owners. There are 3,389 total parcels in town, with 2,971 residential and 418 commercial/industrial/personal.

The fiscal year 2014 tax rate is anticipated to be $12.54, up from $12.20 in FY13. The tax classification hearing will remain open until after the Special Town Meeting (Saturday, Nov. 23), however, as growth has yet to be certified by the state Department of Revenue.

Certification is completed "usually in December," said Quill. "When we finish the recap, it allows us to set the tax rate."

The new tax rate will be reflected in the third quarter bills. Homeowners can calculate their monthly property taxes by taking the assessed property value, dividing it by $1,000 and multiplying that by the tax rate.

The average single family home in Cohasset is assessed to be worth $860,200, a $2100 increase over last year. The tax bill for the average valued single family home will be $10,800 an increase of about $300 a year or $75 per quarter.

Quill explained that the increase is normal. "That has been the trend," she said, adding that the tax rate the prior year was $11.98. "There has been a gradual progression, but values are very stable. There's much more inventory on the market."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained that in Cohasset, "there has been some type of movement with more residential [construction] than commercial."

There is an estimated $35 million in new growth, which also has yet to be certified by the state Department of Revenue.

Under Prop. 2-1/2, a state law enacted in 1980, new growth allows a community to increase its levy limit annually by an amount based on the increased value of new construction. New growth is calculated by multiplying the increase in the assessed valuation of property by the prior year's tax rate.

Cohasset's FY13 levy limit is $28.7 million. Factoring in Prop. 2-1/2, plus the estimated growth of over $400,000, along with over $2 million in debt exclusions, the levy limit is estimated to be approximately $31.8 million.

can achieve. To reach Eagle Scout status, a scout must complete 21 merit badges and a project that benefits the community and involves leadership; the area Boy Scout Council must approve an Eagle Scout project and the workbook detailing the scout's project. The Eagle Scout Project Workbook contains all of the scout's records as well as letters of recommendations. It also includes pictures and details of the project itself.

All requirements must be completed by the time the scout reaches 18. Roughly 5 percent of boys who enter scouting go on to become Eagle Scouts. However, several Cohasset Troop 28 Boy Scouts have received the honor in the past year.

"I thought it was a terrific Eagle Scout project," Sawchuk said of the staircase. With these types of projects, he added, "I love to see something I think will be long-lasting. It was something I thought about for so many years myself."

"The average person wouldn't think of how nice the view is until they actually go up and see... It's absolutely beautiful. I thought it was something that should be shared."

Wayne Sawchuk, on the view from Beacon Rock

Sawchuk explained why the area is so important to the town's history.

"That was the signaling rock to be able to signal the workers on Minot's Light. Ultimately, the lightkeepers used it for signaling back and forth."

While the rock has been the victim of vandalism over the years – spray paint and broken bottles are part of the locale's décor – Beacon Rock is a little-known destination to many Cohasseters.

"Most people I've talked to have never been up here," said O'Brien.

Those who haven't are missing out on an impressive view.

"It's such an unbelievable view from there," added Sawchuk. "The average person wouldn't think of how nice the view is until they actually go up and see... It's absolutely beautiful. I thought it was something that should be shared."

The next step for the rock would be adding some additional safety measures, said Sawchuk.

"The scout project was really the foundation of being able to open up that to the public," he said. "Now there should be a little more effort to ensure it's going to be safe and live on for a long time."

The staircase is already a vast improvement.

O'Brien, along with around 20 volunteers, including fellow scouts, friends and adults, completed the project in October. It took roughly 40 hours over the course of four or five weekends, the scout said.

"It was a lot of fun," O'Brien said of the construction.

Troop 28 Scoutmaster Merle Brown was O'Brien's project advisor. Sawchuk donated materials used to build the stairs – gray boardwalk material recycled from deck boards used at Sandy Beach, giving the project an eco-friendly vibe.

"The wood on the surface was all reclaimed," said Sawchuk. "It's artificial, plastic wood that's about 10 years old right now, but it will last."

O'Brien said wood from Hingham Lumber was also used. The total project cost was about $1,000. The scout solicited donations by writing letters to family and friends. He also appeared before town boards seeking approval for his project.

Overall, O'Brien, who has been a scout for six years and is following his grandfather's Eagle Scout footsteps, said he gained invaluable skills from overseeing this experience: "organization, managing a project, and leadership."

Sawchuk said that O'Brien "did a terrific job." It speaks well of Cohasset Troop 28, he added.

"We're so blessed to have so many Eagle Scouts. This is one of the building blocks that makes [scouts] continue to be a good person throughout life."

With a love for camping and hiking, O'Brien makes the quintessential scout. He also teaches sailing at the Sailing Club and plays CHS lacrosse and football.

"I'm really into football," said O'Brien. "I'm always up on the news and player transactions."

He is in the process of applying to colleges, where he plans to study business and eventually become an entrepreneur.

For now, he is proud of what he's accomplished with his Eagle Scout project.

"It's awesome; it's my baby," he said of the new staircase. "It's amazing to look at it. It's still here and should last a long time."

steps following the final interview on Wednesday, and decided to reach out to town department heads for comment. Finalists had the opportunity to meet with department heads while they were in Cohasset.

Selectman Steve Gaumer said he felt it would be helpful to learn what struck the employees as positive or negative about each candidate. Selectmen asked for their assistant, Tracey Connors, to send an email to the department heads and compile their comments anonymously, if anyone should wish to remain anonymous.

Selectmen will convene at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday before special Town Meeting to discuss the candidates. At that point, they plan to decide whether to make a cut from five finalists to two or three. Whoever is in the final mix will be asked to come back for second interviews.

Candidates were asked a series of questions gauging their experience, management style, opinions on issues such as taxes versus fees, and whether they were ready to help Cohasset get up to date on human resource protocols, among other issues. The selectmen appeared to be impressed with the caliber of many of the candidates, often remarking that a finalist answered questions before they were even asked.

While the candidates vary in experience (see sidebar), the selectmen made it clear that they are looking to hire a town manager that will be here to stay. Cohasset has had four town managers (including acting town manager Milanoski) in five years, and the selectmen are hoping to end that trend.

"We are looking for stability," said selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy. "We're trying to bring as much stability [as possible] to the town... We need somebody that has a lot of energy and ideas and can build consensus around" the various committees and "competing interests in town," Kennedy explained. "It's an exciting time."

Gaumer said that the "revolving door" of Cohasset town managers "doesn't bode well. It's incumbent upon the town to recognize we're more than a stopping point for last few years of a career...We need a skilled, personable manager with an eye to the community and an eye to refining and understanding role of the town manager."

Selectmen Chair Fred Koed said that in a town manager, Cohasset needs a peacemaker who can help the town turn over a new leaf.

"One of other things we're looking for is somebody who has the ability to diffuse tension," said Koed, adding that Cohasset has a lot of "politics and personalities."

"The community's ready to move on, the board's ready to move on," Koed continued. "We're looking for a new leaf in getting through our past history."

Selectman Karen Quigley explained to one candidate, "The little bumps the community has been through have left a scar. We need somebody who can come in, reestablish confidence, and resolve lingering issues."

Despite the challenges a future town manager will face, said selectman Martha Gjesteby, Cohasset is an exciting place to work. "The community is interesting and diverse...I think it would be a challenge for anybody to work with the mix of people and wonderful boards."

The candidates have indicated they're up for a challenge.

Timothy King, who was town manager of Ellsworth, Maine for 13 years, said that he would like to break his record as town manager of Cohasset. King said that he was drawn to Cohasset because he "heard so many wonderful things about the community." Upon visiting town, he was struck by how Cohasset "reminded me of Maine, with the rocky coast."

William DiLibero said that he loves living on the coast, and that the last town he managed, Charlestown, R.I., is similar to Cohasset.

Grady Miller, who was recently town manager of Narragansett, R.I., praised Cohasset as "the gem of the South Shore." Like King, he compared Cohasset to Maine.

The town has "an excellent reputation," said Miller. "It's a really nice seaside community and has the look and appearance of southern Maine. It's just special."

Steven Hartford, who recently worked as town manager of Westerly, R.I. but grew up in Connecticut, said he is attracted to Cohasset as a New Englander. "Cohasset is a beautiful town and has a lot of the fundamentals," he said. "It's close to Boston and not far from Providence. I'd love the chance to live and work here."

Look for more on the town manager interviews in an upcoming edition of the Mariner, as well as on wickedlocalcohasset.com.

Meet the candidates

William DiLibero was Town Administrator in Charles-town, Rhode Island from 2009 to 2012 and was previously Town Manager in Hopkinton, R.I. and planning and development director in Cumberland, R.I. He holds an M.A. from Clark University, a Masters of Urban and Regional Planning from the University of Miami, and a J.D. from New England School of Law.

Stephen Hartford was Town Manager of Westerly, Rhode Island from 2009 to 2013. Prior to that, he worked as Town Solicitor for nine years. He has a B.A. from Fairfield University and a J.D. from the Thomas Cooley Law School in Lansing, Michigan.

Timothy King has been the Assistant Town Administrator in Wellfleet, Mass. since 2011 and previously worked as Town Manager of Ellsworth, Maine for 13 years; he was also Town Manager of Westerly, Rhode Island for two years and spent six years as Town Administrator of Auburn, Mass. He holds a B.A. from the University of Maine and an M.P.A. from Pennsylvania State University.

Grady Miller, Town Manager of Narragansett, Rhode Island from 2010 to 2012, previously worked for 20 years in Peoria, Arizona as the assistant to the city manager from 1990 to 2002, and later as the director of communications and public affairs until 2009, when he became deputy director of community services. He has a B.A. from San Diego University and a M.P.A. from Arizona State University.

Christopher Senior has been Deputy Town Supervisor for North Hempstead, New York since 2004. He holds a B.S. in Journalism and a B.A. in Economics from Boston University and a J.D. from Hofstra University.

MEETING

on page 1). The selectmen plan to discuss the five candidates they interviewed and select either a top two or three and then call for second interviews.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski first told members of the Advisory Committee and selectmen early in the year that if the town's finances were in order, a special Town Meeting would not be needed come fall. In September, after receiving totals from the state Cherry Sheet and Free Cash certification by the state Department of Revenue, Milanoski determined a meeting was needed to vote on how to utilize these funds, in keeping with the town's financial management policies. Article 1 follows the acting town manager's recommendations.

But not everyone is backing Article 1.

Last Thursday, the Advisory Committee was split on supporting Article 1; the board voted 5-2, with one abstention, to recommend the article on the Town Meeting floor.

The article, which outlines several allocations for these monies, deals with two chief sources of funding: the free cash and estimated savings from revenue. The problem? Advisory Chair Peter Pescatore explained that a majority of his board objects to allocating "estimated revenues from the year we're in."

While this practice is allowed, it's not commonplace in Cohasset, Pescatore said. "We're questioning whether this should be done. Recognizing income in the year we're in as excess hasn't been done in the past."

Some Advisory Board members take issue with the article allocating $600,000 to the town's capital stabilization fund, as opposed to the general fund.

"The question is, why are we building that up to such a high level?" asked Pescatore, pointing out that there is also $350,000 of the budget already earmarked to go into the stabilization fund, for a total of $950,000.

The bottom line for advisory: "We're concerned about things that will get purchased that are nice to have but not all that needed," said Pescatore, adding that these monies should go into the town's general stabilization fund instead.

Otherwise, the Advisory Board voted unanimously to recommend the remaining six articles on the warrant. Selectmen voted to recommend four of the articles, preferring to wait on the Advisory Committee's votes before deciding on the remaining three, including Article 1.

Selectmen plan to meet at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday prior to the special Town Meeting's 9:30 a.m. start time.

About STM

Each year, Town Meeting convenes to discuss and vote on a host of issues concerning the town. Town Meeting has the ultimate say on how Cohasset's money is spent. And, on the Town Meeting floor, the town's budget for the coming fiscal year is front and center.

The fall special Town Meeting is typically reserved for financial "housekeeping items," although in recent history several "heavy hitters," such as bylaw changes, have been up for vote.

Saturday's meeting will come to order as soon as 100 voters have signed in. There are 5,849 registered voters in Cohasset as of Nov. 13, which was the last day to register to vote for this Town Meeting.

Town Moderator Dan Evans will oversee the meeting. Articles will be taken up in the order they appear in the warrant. Warrants were mailed out to households last week and extras will be available at the meeting; the warrant is also available to view in its entirety on the Cohasset town website (cohassetmass.org/).

Each voter will also receive a printed copy of the town manager's recommended motions on each of the articles. Each article will be taken up one at a time. A motion will be made and tallies will be taken on a voice vote.

Check wickedlocalcohasset as well as next week's edition of the Mariner for full special Town Meeting coverage.

Warrant articles

Saturday's special Town Meeting will vote on the following:

- Article 1: Petitioned article to see if the town will vote to appropriate $600,000 to the Capital Stabilization Fund; $500,000 from Free Cash into the Stabilization Fund; $347,752 from Free Cash into the General Stabilization Fund; $100,000 from Free Cash into the Facilities Stabilization Fund; $250,000 from Free Cash into the Other-Post Employment Benefits (OPEB) Liability Trust Fund; and $100,000 from Free Cash into the DPW Public Roads Expense Account.
- Article 2: Water Commission Retained Earnings Transfer to see if the town will vote to transfer retained water department earnings of $95,000 for unanticipated expenses (funding an additional half full-time equivalent staff member of the water department operator).
- Article 3: Sewer Commission Retained Earnings Transfer to see if the town will vote to increase the sewer budget by $75,000 for unanticipated expenses related to repairs and maintenance.
- Article 4: Acceptance of Mass. General Laws (MGL) c39, section 23D that would allow town commission board members to miss a single session of a multi-session public hearing and still vote on the matter provided they certify in writing that they have examined all of the evidence.
- Article 5: Adoption of a bylaw to accept of MGL c40, section 47 which would allow the town to deny or revoke local licenses and permits if municipal taxes and charges are not paid.
- Article 6: Acceptance of MGL c41, section 41B, which allows the town treasurer to use direct deposit to pay town employee salaries and wages.
- Article 7: Acceptance of MGL c200A, section 9A, which allows the town to receipt outstanding checks back into the general fund in lieu of turning over all outstanding checks to the state.

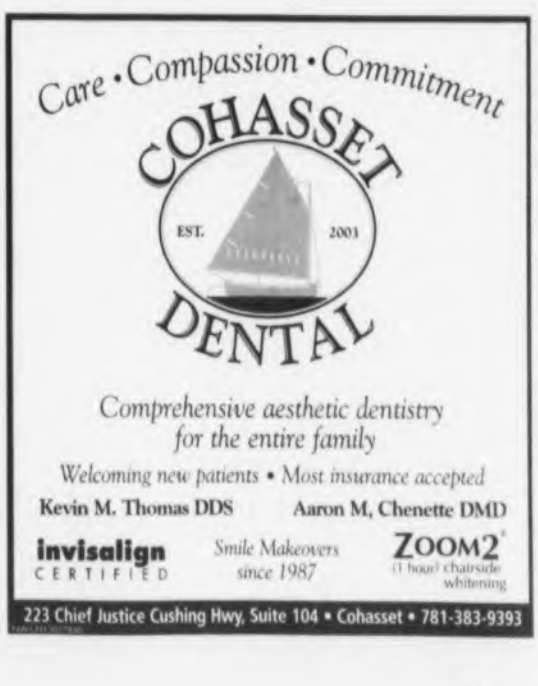
BRIEFLY

CPC hearing slated for Dec. 9

The Community Preservation Committee's annual public hearing has been rescheduled to Monday, Dec. 9; it was originally slated for Monday, Nov. 18.

The meeting is held each year to allow town committees and boards to propose town projects that could be funded using state Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds. Approved projects are submitted as warrant articles to be voted on by Town Meeting.

The fall Special Town Meeting is on Nov. 23, however the CPC does not have any warrant articles scheduled. The Dec. 9 hearing will discuss potential projects that could be voted on by the Annual Town Meeting next spring.



Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Vets support

Charlotte Astley presented Cohasset Veteran's Service with $696.50 that she raised through a fundraiser at the Deer Hill School. Proceeds were raised selling small patriotic items such as American flag pencils and key chains, red, white and blue necklaces, small American flags, etc.

The money raised will be donated to local veterans and widows of veterans who need assistance with buying food and heating their homes this winter. Charlotte is a fifth grader at the Deer Hill School.

Thank you, Charlotte, for supporting our veterans!

Special day

A little bird told us that Thomas Wigmore (commander of the local chapter of the Sons of the American Legion) is celebrating a special milestone on today (Friday). Tommy is turning the BIG 5-0!

We know, it does not seem possible – he is much too young to be turning 50! If you see Tommy around town be sure to wish him the very best. Tom cares so much about our veterans –he is the force behind the Field of Honor, Memorial Day and Veterans Day observances, among many other activities and programs for veterans. His wife Deirdre is a wonderful lady who supports her man and all our veterans through her work in the American Legion Ladies Auxiliary.

All the best, Tom – for a very Happy Birthday and many, many more!

Turkey raffle

Don't miss the Turkey Raffle tonight (Nov. 22) at the American Legion Hall on Summer Street. Thirty (yes, 30!) turkeys are going to be raffled off. Try to be there around 5:15-5:30 p.m. to participate. You might walk way with a terrific T-Day bird!

Breakfast

The American Legion Auxiliary is hosting a Thanksgiving Day breakfast from 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. on Thanksgiving morning. What a nice way to avoid having to prepare breakfast! Adults are $7 and children are $5. All are welcome!

Feast for seniors!

On Tuesday, Nov. 26 at 12 noon, The folks at Atlantica will host its annual, complimentary pre-Thanksgiving Feast for seniors at noon, on Tuesday, Nov. 26. Join others for turkey and all the fixings. Although there is no charge for this event, it is requested that attendees bring a canned good to donate to Cohasset Food Pantry.

Transportation is available. Call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 for reservations or to arrange a ride.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Money being raised for Philippines relief

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

Living in Cohasset, we sometimes forget just how lucky we are. Sometimes, we don't even realize how extraordinary it is to have our beauteous beaches and ornate town common. Its only natural, in the busy, oftentimes overwhelming hamster-wheel of life, to forget about how fortunate we are to have roofs over our heads, meals on our tables, and water in our sinks.

Last week, when Typhoon Haiyan hit the Philippines, millions of Filipinos lost those basic amenities. So, as part of our new mission to provide charitable relief to those in need, the CHS Student Council took to work. With the assistance of Don Roine, program director at 143TV, CHS senior and editing-wizard Bryce Avila and I teamed up to make a three-minute video that included pictures and video from the disaster. This video was showcased to the entire school on Tuesday morning (shout out to junior Christian Cunnie, and sophomores Richie Kinscherf and Luke Norton for helping set up the auditorium). The CHS masses packed the auditorium to see firsthand the devastation of Haiyan. Then, Senior Class President Tim Cavanaro, alongside the Senior VP (yours truly), gave a five-minute speech that introduced the Student Council's "Philanthropy for the Philippines" campaign.

The campaign, which aims to raise over $1,000 to donate to the American Red Cross relief efforts, is manifested in the classic "Penny Wars" fundraiser design. Penny Wars follows a simple formula. To begin, each grade (9-12, and one for the faculty) gets their own coin jar. The object of the game is simple; put coins in your grade's jar, and put dollar bills in the jars of other grades to subtract points from their total. At the end of the fundraiser next Tuesday, the grade with the most funds raised will be pronounced the winner. If anyone from the community wishes to contribute, feel free!

In addition to the school-wide "Philanthropy for the Philippines Campaign", there are quite a lot of activities going on at CHS. The Drama Club is preparing for it's showing of LOL: A Century of Comedy, a hilarious five-part play that includes monkeys using typewriters, crazy language professors spewing gibberish on the stage, and much, much more. The show will be running in the CHS auditorium at 7:30 pm on Friday evening, and 3:00 pm on Sunday afternoon. Be sure to come out and support the arts! (If you are interested in learning more about the cast and crew of LOL, check the listings of 143TV for CHS junior Ben Buckley's backstage video!)

Additionally, CHS's army of Peer Leaders saw their first action this week. Peer Leaders took to the Middle School on midday Tuesday, meeting with their classes and doing activities discouraging bullying, exclusion, and prejudice. Typically, two to three Peer Leaders go to each CMS classroom, and the hands-on, wholesome interactions are beneficial for all.

The CHS school newspaper, The Spinnaker, hit the press last Friday, leaving students in a frenzy for the best $1 they will ever spend. Students pored over articles about anything ranging from the government shutdown to up-and-coming rappers: from CHS sports to restaurant critiques. It's safe to say the Fall issue was a success!

As always, we end with sports. Quick shout out to the CHS soccer team, who lost in the State Finals to Sutton last week, but nonetheless had a heckuva season. Lastly, be sure to head out to Brockton on Saturday night at 6:30 for CHS Football's bout with St. Clement (a trip to the State Championship is on the line!).

That's all for now friends. See you next week, and remember, as always, to keep it classy Cohasset!

Matthew MacCormack is a senior at Cohasset High School; his column runs weekly during the school year.

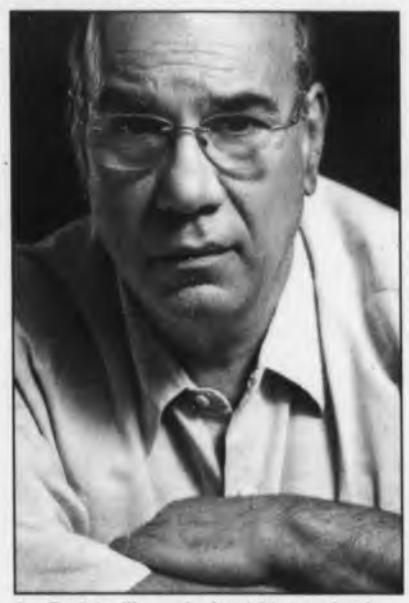
SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

College professor to speak



By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

For further conversation with Jay Parini, a wine and cheese reception will follow his talk; Buttonwood Books will provide copies of his book for purchase and signing.

Cohasset Library's Sunday Authortalks series, which will take place at 4 p.m., on Dec. 8, will feature writer Jay Parini who will speak about his new book, "Jesus: The Human Face of God," due in bookstores on Dec. 3.

Poet, novelist, biographer, critic and professor of literature at Middlebury College, Parini has written a powerful little book – straightforward, reverent, and scholarly – about a real person who lived in time and whose life has resonated in the hearts and minds of human beings over the last 2,000 years.

In his search to discover the truth about Jesus and what certainties can be known about him, Parini harkens back to the social, political and religious context of ancient Palestine and the Judaic ideas that both shaped the culture and inspired Jesus' reinterpretation. Informed by multiple sources, including the New Testament, the Gnostic Gospels and centuries of historical scholarship, Parini recalls a fascinating time period – it was an epoch of turbulence in Jerusalem under the brutal occupation of the Romans, but also one where Eastern ideas that gave rise to Buddhism converged with the Western thoughts of Greek philosophers, and one where, in lower Galilee, scents of lavender and thyme drifted over fertile land.

Jay Parini will speak about his new book, "Jesus: The Human Face of God," on Dec. 8. COURTESY PHOTO

Parini's prolific writings have been translated into more than 30 languages. His five books of poetry include "The Art of Subtraction: New and Selected Poems"; his eight novels include "Benjamin's Crossing," "The Apprentice Lover," "The Passages of H.M." and "The Last Station" – the latter was made into an Academy Award-nominated film starring Helen Mirren and Christopher Plummer. His forthcoming novel, "Galliano's Ghost," will be published in the spring. He has written biographies of John Steinbeck, Robert Frost, and William Faulkner; other non-fiction works include "Why Poetry Matters" and "Promised Land: Thirteen Books that Changed America." He writes for various publications, including The New York Times, The Guardian, and The Chronicle of Higher Education.

For further conversation with Jay Parini, a wine and cheese reception will follow his talk; Buttonwood Books will provide copies of his book for purchase and signing.

Admission is free, but seating is limited, so come early to ensure a spot. For more information, visit Cohasset library.org or call the library at 383-1348.

Sunday Authortalks is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors, the Cook Estate, and A Taste for Wine and Spirits.

50 years later, JFK's death still affects us

Fifty years should be enough time for America to finish mourning, to shake the pall, to move forward.

Yet America keeps looking back to Nov. 22, 1963. We see a 46-year-old smiling face, frozen in time. A hand waves at admirers, unknowingly waving goodbye.

A country also said goodbye that day, not just to a president, but something hard to define – something that cast a far bigger shadow and left a gaping hole in our collective psyche.

A half-century later, the assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy remains a galvanizing and unsettling moment for America. Its aftershocks remain palpable and resonant.

Why does Kennedy's death still gnaw at the nation?

Perhaps we can point to conspiracy theories, which periodically spark renewed interest in the murder. But is that cause and effect? Do these theories refresh the focus on Kennedy's death? Or is it the other way around? Are conspiracies a desperate attempt to explain inexplicable loss?

Or we could blame the shared shock at the sight of images left indelible on our national consciousness: the First Lady in a pink suit scrambling onto the trunk of a presidential limousine, a dour vice president taking the presidential oath on Air Force One, a grimacing assassin taking a fatal bullet on national television, a 3-year-old son saluting his father's casket.

But there could be a more painful and profound reason for the unyielding sense of loss. Something else died on that day in Dallas. Perhaps those three rifle cracks started a chain of events that killed more than a president.

The other victim: the hope for a better tomorrow through national service. That's why we look back to Nov. 22, 1963. We wonder about all we lost, and what might've been.

Americans still want to make positive changes, just not as John Kennedy urged at his inaugural: "Ask not what your country can do for you - ask what you can do for your country." To that, many people – especially today's younger generations – might add, "Sure, as long as I don't get even a whiff of politics."

That's the gist of a poll released in July by USA Today and the Bipartisan Policy Center. By more than a 2-1 margin, respondents said positive change can be best made in society through volunteer organizations and charities, not by being active in government. The poll also found just one in five people trust the federal government to do what is right. And Americans younger than 30 are particularly put off by politics.

Even worse, the survey found: the cycle could become more dire, spiraling downward further and further, pushing more and more people away from a system considered rife with corruption and absent much hope.

That viewpoint jibes not in the least with Kennedy's New Frontier. In his acceptance speech at the 1960 Democratic National Convention, he described "the frontier of the 1960s, the frontier of unknown opportunities and perils, the frontier of unfilled hopes and unfilled dreams. ... Beyond that frontier are uncharted areas of science and space, unsolved problems of peace and war, unconquered problems of ignorance and prejudice, unanswered questions of poverty and surplus."

These were no mere slogans to the young people wowed and wooed by Kennedy. These were sincere promises of a country and world yet to come, through hard work in public service.

Kennedy had Hollywood looks and a cool swagger. He became the first politician to harness the power of television, initially in debates with Nixon and later as the first president to televise live press conferences.

The dashing swath cut by Kennedy did not end on the campaign trail, says Dick Stolley, who as a Life magazine editor obtained the landmark Zapruder film of the Kennedy assassination. For young people, Kennedy – with his kicky nickname of "Jack" – played to their strong urge to follow a pied piper of their own.

"We never had a president like him: young, handsome, great speaker," says Stolley, 85, now living in New Mexico. "Eisenhower was undervalued in many ways as a president. But he was old. It was an amazing transformation in leadership that America realized it was under. ... It was a new sense of America, a willingness to change, with young people in leadership. It was led by Kennedy."

Stolley says grief following the president's assassination didn't ebb in the least along party lines.

"Even those who didn't vote for him, they admired him and admired his style," Stolley says. "And then it was gone. Young, handsome and vital, just suddenly wiped off, in a ghastly way, and photographed at the same time."

Mind you, by fall 1963, major publications had cast Kennedy – seen by many voters as more competent in foreign affairs than national issues – as beatable in the 1964 general election. Yet he and his likely Republican opponent, U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, already were discussing campaigning together: they would traipse from town to town, hosting civil debates at each stop.

Today's party-line incivility stagnates governance and alienates voters, says Michael Dukakis. The 1988 Democratic presidential candidate – who walked many of the same footsteps as Kennedy: same childhood home (Brookline, Mass.) and same schooling (Harvard Law School) – now teaches at Northeastern University's Dukakis Center for Urban and Regional Policy. By their nature, his students boast interest in public service, but he acknowledges not all young people share that verve. In part, Dukakis – no stranger to pit-bull politics – blames politicians who don't dare play nice for fear of seeming soft to a disparate electorate.

"(House Speaker) Tip O'Neill and Ronald Reagan fought like crazy all day, then had a beer together at 6 p.m.," says Dukakis, 79.

If not for Dallas, what kind of legacy could Kennedy have attained? Great debate there. Should he be heralded for staring down the Soviet Union during the Cuban Missile Crisis? Or should he be faulted for the Bay of Pigs fiasco? Or both?

Many critics pan his perceived slowness or softness on the civil rights movement. Stolley says Kennedy didn't have the congressional horse-trading power of Johnson, who later pushed through civil rights legislation.

Is that reversible? Is there a way to turn a collective peevishness into optimism?

Maybe, if Americans allow themselves to believe again – in their country and their leaders, and in themselves and in tomorrow.

The president's final hours

7:30 a.m.: In Suite 850 of the Hotel Texas, the president dresses in a two-button, blue-grey suit, white shirt and dark blue tie. He sits down to a room service breakfast of eggs and goes over the day's activities with Kenny O'Donnell, a top aide, and David Powers, special assistant and assistant appointments secretary.

8:45 a.m.: Kennedy speaks to a crowd of thousands standing on a platform set up outside the hotel.

9 a.m.: Breakfast with Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce. JFK focuses on military preparedness.

11:24 a.m.: Air Force One leaves Fort Worth.

11:37 a.m.: Air Force One arrives at Love Field in Dallas with the president and Mrs. Kennedy and Gov. and Mrs. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas aboard. Vice President Lyndon Johnson and his wife arrive aboard a separate plane.

11:55 a.m.: Thousands of supporters and a few protesters line the gate around Love Field. The president and Mrs. Kennedy shake hands with well-wishers before the Kennedy motorcade leaves Love Field 25 minutes late.

12:06 p.m.: JFK stops the motorcade to shake hands with children and others at Lemmon and Lomo Alto. He stops again a few blocks later after seeing a nun and children.

12:29 p.m.: The motorcade turns from Main Street onto Houston Street. The presidential motorcade was traveling about 11 mph.

12:30 p.m.: Shots fired at Dealey Plaza. As the president's limousine turns onto Elm Street, a shot pierces the air. JFK grabs his throat. About three seconds later, a second bullet hits the president's skull.

12:33 p.m.: The motorcade races toward Parkland Memorial Hospital, which had been notified of the president's injuries. At about the same time Lee Harvey Oswald leaves his rifle on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository. Making his way out of the building, Oswald runs into a Dallas police officer and his job supervisor, who allow Oswald to continue on and out of the building. Oswald travels to the Greyhound Bus Terminal on Lamar Street, where he catches a cab to the Oak Cliff neighborhood where he lives.

12:36 p.m.: The presidential limousine arrives at Parkland.

12:40 p.m.: Walter Cronkite breaks into the CBS television show "As the World Turns" to announce that the president has been shot.

12:45 p.m.: The police broadcast a description of the suspect: "The suspect from Elm (Street) and Houston (Street) is reported to be an unknown white male, about 30, slender build, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 165 pounds, armed with what is thought to be a 30-30 rifle."

12:58 p.m.: Oswald arrives at his home in Oak Cliff to retrieve a pistol, then leaves a few minutes later to wait at a nearby bus stop.

1 p.m.: With a crowd gathered outside awaiting news, doctors at Parkland pronounce Kennedy dead.

1:03 p.m.: A roll call of employees at the book depository finds Oswald missing.

1:12 p.m.: Bullet casings are found by police on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository.

1:15 p.m.: Oswald shoots police officer J.D. Tippit dead at the corner of 10th Street and Patton Avenue in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas.

1:40 p.m.: Oswald enters the Texas Theatre.

1:50 p.m.: Police surround the Texas Theatre and arrest Oswald.

2:04 p.m.: Although Texas law states an autopsy must be performed, the Secret Service removes JFK's casket from Parkland Memorial Hospital.

2:27 p.m.: Cronkite relays news of the president's death to the nation.

2:38 p.m.: Lyndon B. Johnson is sworn in as the 36th president aboard Air Force One by Sarah T. Hughes, a federal judge in the Northern District of Texas.

4:58 p.m.: Air Force One lands at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, and the casket is taken on an ambulance to Bethesda Naval Hospital.

7 p.m.: Oswald is interrogated and charged with the death of officer Tippit after an intense investigation. An autopsy on the president is performed at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

11:26 p.m.: Oswald is charged with Kennedy's murder.

JFK'S ASSASSINATION

Readers' recollections of that infamous day

'Scared to death'

Who else was at South School in Hingham when we got the news over the PA system?

Fifth grade at the time, for me. Mrs. Hughes' class, I think.

And then, had to trudge home thru the town forest and a cornfield to my home on Hoover Road, off Prospect Street.

And Sunday, watch on live TV as Oswald was gunned down by Ruby.

I was scared to death!

Jeff Howlett

Days following tragedy

I was a junior at Cathedral High School in Boston and before being dismissed from school we were naturally praying for President Kennedy. As you pointed out news reports were not like today and I must say before leaving school I don't think we knew for sure he was dead.

However I took the train and bus home to Quincy and as we were going thru the subway concourse at what is now Downtown Crossing we listened to news broadcasts confirming he was killed and people were very silent and many, including myself were crying. One thing I also remember was the following day at school a couple of the nuns were not only saddened and upset, but really mad, convinced he was killed because he was Catholic and president.

The next few days were of course truly traumatic, first of all the unfolding of the drama of the funeral and the surreal shooting of Oswald on live TV. I remember thinking, "What is this country turning into?" We were thinking the country was coming into an era of peace and prosperity.

I soon realized how wrong that was.

I do firmly believe that this country can get thru any crisis – I've seen enough of them – and still be the greatest country on earth. God Bless America!

Richard Walsh

Mourning the loss of a president

I remember quite well sitting in the eighth grade class at St. Paul's School when the school's principal came into the classroom in tears to announce that President Kennedy had been shot. A television was wheeled into our classroom and our teacher (a St. Joseph's nun) started praying the rosary. She (and most of the class) broke into tears when it was announced that the President had been killed. It is a memory that will never leave me.

Steve Murphy, Hingham native

Praying for the President

My first grade classmates and I were working under the eye of Sister Corsini at St Paul's School when Principal Sister Annunciata came in and whispered urgently in her ear. Immediately Sister Corsini ordered "children please stand." We saw imminent tears in both the nun's eyes.

We were told that we would now pray for the soul of our President Kennedy. This puzzled me. Was he dead or were we praying because he soon would be? Why weren't we praying for him to live?

What I remember after that was for days how somber and disbelieving all the adults in my life were. I saw grown men cry on TV and heard lots of hushed grownup conversations. I was worried about his children. What would happen to them?

That day I realized that the world could be a scary and unpredictable place and grownups weren't able to control things like I thought.

Wendy Whitman, Hingham

UN tour cut short

I was with the Hingham High School 1964 senior class visiting the United Nations. At the time of the first announcement, we were in the UN lobby waiting to go on tour. The tour was eventually canceled and we returned to the Route 128 station later that evening.

Thomas K. Paine, Santa Fe, New Mexico

Remembering teachers' reaction

I was in grade five at the newly opened Hatherly School. I was more afraid/stunned by crying teachers!

OUR VIEW

Inspiring a generation

As the world marks the 50th anniversary of the assassination of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy it is important to focus on what JFK meant to an emerging group of young Americans.

Anyone who was around on Nov. 22, 1963 is now older than JFK was when he was taken from us. That is a sobering thought for the lead group of baby-boomers whose fathers fought in World War II or Korea and were the same generation as the president. For those in junior or senior high school at the time, JFK was their president – even though they were way too young to vote for him.

JFK had star-power and understood the relatively new and emerging media: television.

By 1963 most American homes had TV and people of all ages enjoyed watching the president speak over the national airways.

As part of the "Greatest Generation," JFK — who saw how the United States had risen out of the Great Depression to help free the world from fascism and imperialism — believed in the best of America and inspired youth of that day to "ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country."

Although at school there were drills for a nuclear attack, the early 1960s were a relatively innocent time for America's schoolchildren who grew up with "Leave It to Beaver," "Ozzie and Harriet" and Roy Rogers and Dale Evans singing "Happy Trails to You."

Nov. 22, 1963 was the day that would live "in infamy" for that generation and change their world forever. Like today's youth that saw 9/11, young people in the early 1960s grew up fast.

Rather than TV scenes or photographs in Life magazine of Caroline hopping around the president's desk; Jackie Kennedy hosting an affair for foreign diplomats; or John-John learning to walk for the first time around the halls of the White House – the media was focused on war, death and riots in the streets.

In just a few short years, America would be embroiled in a war in Vietnam; The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy would both be assassinated; the fight for civil rights would turn violent in cities across the country; and four students would be shot to death on the campus of Kent State during a war protest leading to a nationwide student strike that closed colleges across the country.

Yet despite the tragedies and strife of the times, there was no question that young Americans had been inspired by JFK to pay attention, get involved and make a difference. Therefore, some protested on college campuses, some fought proudly in the Armed Forces, and still others joined the Peace Corps and civil rights movement.

This week many will remember what they were doing when they heard the news that President Kennedy had been shot. But perhaps more importantly – we should all reflect on what we have done since the enormity of that moment faded into history.

JFK should forever be remembered for the inspirational figure he was – a man that could inspire young people to believe in the promise of America and to get involved in helping make that promise a reality.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Supports YES vote on Article 1

The Board of Selectmen has scheduled an important Special Town Meeting for Saturday, Nov. 23 at 9 a.m. The meeting will be held at the Sullivan Gym (Cohasset High School).

The major agenda item is Article 1. Article 1 requests Town Meeting to approve the allocation of the town's $1.6 million surplus into various stabilization funds that will be used to pay for long term town needs such as retirement obligations, building maintenance, road repair and information technology upgrades. If Article 1 does not pass, the surplus funds will remain in the general fund as cash where they will earn a minimal return and may be used to cover ongoing operating expense shortfalls.

As a result of Cohasset's fiscal crisis of 2010 to 2012, the Board of Selectmen and Town Meeting adopted a set of fiscal policies designed to meet best practices for municipal finance. Our long term needs must be addressed if we wish to remain financially stable. While great progress has been made by our dedicated town employees since our nadir in late 2011, the town must continue on a disciplined path. A commitment to prudent financial management requires that we allocate temporary surpluses to long-term needs rather than spend them on current operations.

If you support the prudent management of our financial resources, please take an hour to attend the Special Town Meeting on Saturday morning to vote YES. Article 1 is the first of seven items on the agenda. The other items are important but not controversial. This should not be a long meeting.

Role models at football game

Friday night I met up with a colleague at the football game. The night was near perfect, cool, not cold just a breath of air, not windy, and a near full moon. The only missing good omen was an absence of an ice halo around the moon, the omen for a good hunt prior to a storm according to the Algonquians and Iroquois that once inhabited these very parts. A few years back the man sitting to my right helped a patient I was caring for that had a ruptured aneurysm in his belly. This was far beyond my skill and the patient needed a surgeon and I knew it. Ralph Froio huddled next to me last Friday night was the surgeon that day and pulled him through a catastrophe. Several hours later I saw Ralph in the hall and quite matter of fact said the surgery was a mess but he'll do fine, an understated response, dismissing the chaos of the operating room. That is Ralph. We all have role models Ralph is one of mine.

Far down the field, beyond the rush of fans was my best friend, my wife, Cindy, selling raffle tickets. A 6- or 7-year-old boy in glasses dressed in a sweatshirt holding a football far too big for him approached her and asked for a sharpie marker. She looked for one and while looking asked if he wanted to put his name on so it wouldn't get lost in the crowd. No he said, I want Rocco to sign it. Rocco you have a fan out there and a young boy who has you as a role model, good job and good luck Saturday.

It's funny how life repeats itself.

Perhaps you are as perplexed as I am as to why the town of Cohasset was unable to attract a single qualified candidate for town manager who has had any significant experience as a town manager in Massachusetts or could be deemed qualified by having a working knowledge of Mass. Municipal Law or Mass. Municipal finance. In fact, all one can say about the candidates, based on the little that has been published is that they have been town managers in some other state, and four of five are not currently employed in the profession.

As you know, our acting town manager was not included in the pool, as he did not fit the selectmen's deliberately limiting requirement that the candidate have worked several years as a town manager. Mr. Kobayashi, our consultant from the Collins Center, presumably provided no guidance on the exclusion of our acting town manager, a significant failure on Mr. Kobayashi's part. It is always possible that one of the candidates is excellent, that all references will check out and due diligence will turn up no significant negative indicators.

As you know, our acting town manager was not included in the pool, as he did not fit the selectmen's deliberately limiting requirement that the candidate have worked several years as a town manager.

Having participated in search committees for candidates for town offices in Cohasset that have resulted in dismal outcomes, I believe that there is less than a 50 percent chance that, whomever the selectmen choose for town manager, he or she will be successful here. This is not only because the selection criteria excluded many qualified people, including the acting town manager, but that the current serious philosophical split among the selectmen will exacerbate the normal difficulty of the town manager's job under the best of circumstances.

The philosophical split extends into the community as well, where a majority of people believes the acting town manager deserves, at the very least, a fair chance at the full-time job based on his record. Moreover, the dependence on the Collins Center and the failure to appoint a search committee of knowledgeable townspeople as required by our new Town Manager Act, also stripped the process of legitimacy that would have markedly improved the chosen candidate's potential for acceptance and success here.

One also has to ask, what do the selectmen, or at least the majority subset, really want in a new town manager? Is it excellent financial management? Is it the ability to attract and hire excellent people? Is it willingness to take on politically difficult issues? Is it skill in collective bargaining?

Mike Milanoski has excelled at the above and much more. He has also been an activist town manager. He has done the hard things. Yes, he has burned bridges, not in pursuit of personal self-aggrandizement, but in the pursuit of excellence on behalf of the town.

With a pool of candidates for town manager that is clearly thin, shouldn't the selectmen declare a pause in the search? Rather than gamble on still another unknown individual, the selectmen should view the paucity of suitable town manager candidates as an opportunity to reconcile their differences with Mike for the good of the town. Most of us believe it would be the prudent course and, however difficult, worth the effort.

Pointers for a successful holiday

RENATE DEVIN

Set your children up for success by suggesting topics ahead of time like sports, local events (Turkey Trot), school, upcoming vacations, and favorite family traditions.

A successful Thanksgiving meal is as much about the lively conversation and laughter as it is good food. Conversation is an essential ingredient to this special meal and this is a wonderful time for our children to practice the art of small talk. The following tips will help your children learn the social side of the holiday gathering:

• All electronics should be turned off and placed far away from the dining area.
• Talk to people on both sides of you and across the table.
• Show an interest in what others are saying.
• Be careful not to interrupt and be a good listener.
• Volume is not too loud, and not too soft.
• Do not talk with a mouth full of food.
• Discuss the art of small talk. Set your children up for success by suggesting topics ahead of time like sports, local events (Turkey Trot), school, upcoming vacations, and favorite family traditions. Avoid questions that can be answered with a simple "yes" or "no." Instead use who, what, where, when, and how. Help your kids make up their own list of practice questions.
• Avoid talking about personal family issues.
• Make only positive comments on the meal and thank the cook and hostess.

Thanksgiving is next week and that typically means a more formal than usual dinner, both at restaurants and the homes of our family and friends. Discuss these brief pointers on table manners to ensure a successful and memorable holiday:

• Approach the table completely ready to eat. Hands washed, face clean, no hats, etc.
• Stand behind your chair and wait for everyone to gather. Boys may help girls and ladies in their chairs.
• Put your napkin in your lap as soon as you sit down. Keep hands in your lap until food is served. Sit up straight in your chair.
• Utensils are held like pencils not like the handlebars of a bicycle.
• Bread is meant to be broken. Tear off bite size pieces of the bread or roll, butter it and eat it. Do not saw the roll in half and coat both pieces with butter.
• Pass serving dishes initially to the right. Always set the dish down. Do not pass off in mid air. The handle should be turned toward the person you are passing to.
• If a dish is beyond your reach, ask for it to be passed rather than reaching for it.
• Say "please", "thank you" and "no, thank you".
• Chew with your mouth closed. No chomping noisily. This is easier to do if you haven't stuffed your mouth.
• Cut only a few bites of meat at a time. This not only looks more gracious but helps your meat stay hot longer.
• Salt and pepper are always passed together. They are married.
• Elbows can be placed on the table only between courses and never when a plate is in front of you.
• If you accidentally burp, simply say "excuse me" and try not to giggle (too much) about it.
• In a restaurant, if you drop a piece of silverware or your napkin falls off your lap, ask your server for another. Do not pick it up.
• If you must leave the table during the meal, asked to be excused and place your napkin on your chair or on the table.
• NEVER blow your nose in your napkin.
• Thank the host or cook at the end of the meal.
• Offer to help clear the dishes.
• Place your loosely folded napkin to the left of your plate when finished.
• Push your chair under the table after you rise.

It is up to all of us to exercise good holiday manners to make everyone feel comfortable. Remember, we are role models for our children and should always strive for courteous behavior (because they do remember everything). Happy Thanksgiving.

VIEW FROM THE FRONT PORCH

The wisdom of Alan Simpson

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Boy, I miss those conversations. Thirteen years after that conversation and for the most part the wave of newly elected officials who don't seem to have any inclination of working with others continues.

Over the years I have been lucky enough to have met and worked with some incredibly amazing and smart people. People far more amazing and smarter than I, but that's not really saying much. One of those people is former US Senator from Wyoming, Alan Simpson.

In what seems like a hundred years ago, but in actuality was a mere 15, I conceptualized, developed and ran an educational based nonprofit organization. If any of you have ever started a nonprofit from the ground up then you know that the proper term should actually be deficit-profit. While incredibly rewarding, the process can be exceptionally trying and you find yourself immensely grateful to those who offer their assistance; Alan Simpson was one of those who supported me.

Our focus was on developing curriculum about political and social issues relevant to junior high school students in hopes of inspiring them to want get involved with civil and political discourse when they turned 18. We had the support of numerous educational institutions, The "West Wing" TV show, Aerosmith, a number of US Senators including John McCain and Ted Kennedy, but our biggest supporter was Alan Simpson. The retired three-time Republican Senator was heading up Harvard's Kennedy School of Government and a strong believer in what we were trying to do. Unfortunately, the project was a casualty of the 9/11 tragedy when charitable foundations focused their donations towards New York but the experience was one I'll always cherish.

As tough as it was to try and get the project up and running, one of the ongoing positives was the conversations I had with Senator Simpson. Discussions were compelling, and his common sense/matter of fact tales were always with purpose. Allow me to share a conversation we had in 2001 when I asked how he had become involved with the Kennedy School.

"Do you know who my best friend in the Senate is?" Senator Simpson asked me. Before I got a chance to answer he continued, "Ted Kennedy. And do you know whose Ted Kennedy's best friend in the Senate?"

"You," I responded in the form of a question.

"No, I wish" he said, "Orin Hatch."

The Senator continued, "Our wives have dinner together, we play cards together, we work together and we respect each other. You see, our job is to "bang the shoe" when the red light is on but as soon as the red light goes off; we need to put the shoe back on, go behind closed doors and work together. That all changed in 1994 and depending on which side of isle you sit, you can blame Clinton or Gingrich, but following the 94 elections legislators started to forget what their job description was and stopped working together."

"Ask any Senator who the best Senator they've ever worked with and they will tell you, Ted Kennedy. Ask Ted Kennedy the same question and he'll tell you Bob Dole. Both men have agendas that are important to them, both men know how to build consensus, how to work with others and both men know when it's time to do what's best for the common good and put a battle to the side for another day."

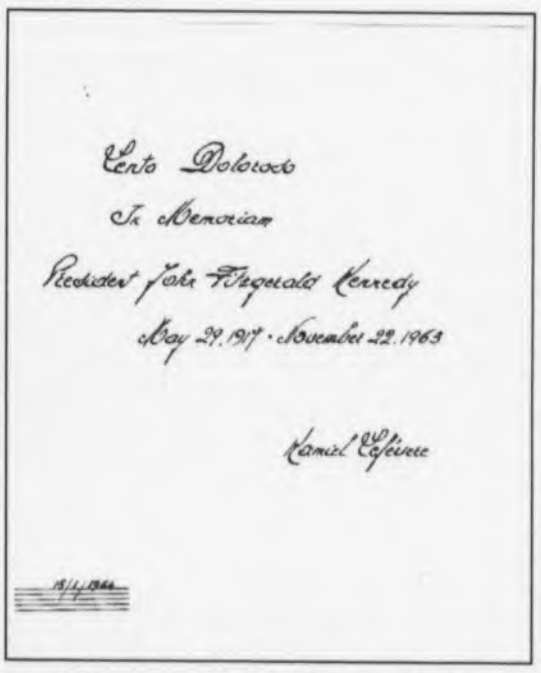
Boy, I miss those conversations. Thirteen years after that conversation and for the most part the wave of newly elected officials who don t seem to have any inclination of working with others continues. It seems officials would rather shut down government or experience other adverse consequences than express a willingness to compromise. Unfortunately, officials who believe that ideologue is more important than progress are dominating government and we are all worse off because of it. If there is a silver lining, it's that there's a few candidates running on the principles of working together to find compromise; a much needed and admirable stance that was recently taken by Gabriel Gomez in his Senate run.

Last week it was reported that the search for a new Town Manager would not include Michael Milanoski. The Mariner's editorial about this decision was as good of an op-ed that the paper has written and I highly recommend that you go online and read it if you missed it. Describing his warts and his growth curve, the Mariner outlined how Milanoski had evolved into the best Town Manager Cohasset had in close to two decades. Given the accomplishments outlined in the piece, it's rather apparent that our Selectmen choose ideologue over definable achievements and as the editorial states; the result is Cohasset's loss.

For the record, I do not know any of the Selectmen personally. I have never met the fire chief or the police chief and to the best of my knowledge I am friendly with just two people who currently work at Town Hall (and they are at opposite ends of the spectrum). I have neither an axe to grind nor a bucket of water to carry; I simply remain consistent in my distain for obstructionism and the continued stream of poor behavior. For what it's worth, I do seem to get along pretty well with the guys who work at the transfer station.

With the inevitable moving on of Michael Milanoski, Cohasset will see yet another Town Manager and we can only hope that this person is as skilled as Milanoski. When this person is hired we as citizens have two choices. We can choose to behave like some of the Selectmen and make the job for the eventual new Town Manager as miserable as possible or we can choose to work to end the animosity and give this person room to grow. As Milanoski's accomplishments demonstrated, a successful Town Manager benefits us all.

Fifteen years ago, I was incredibly lucky to have someone as honorable as Senator Simpson care about my nonprofit endeavor. It's a shame all elected officials don't approach their job with the same amount of wisdom and respect as he did.



Thank you for reading and a reminder that the Food Pantry will be accepting baked goods this Sunday and Monday afternoon. I wish you all a Happy Thanksgiving.

COURTESY OF MARY KENNEDY

On Saturday, Nov. 23, from 11 to 11:30 a.m. the bells at St. Stephen's Church will ring in memory of President John F. Kennedy.

• 11:37 a.m. Friday November 22, 1963: Air Force One arrives at Love Field in Dallas, Texas.

I was home-tutoring a Scituate High School freshman who is recovering from an operation. Part of the lesson plan was a unit on run on sentences; sentence fragments; punctuation.

• 12:30 p.m. The presidential limousine passes by the Texas School Book Depository.

I was saying goodbye to Helen and her mother and making plans for the next tutoring session on the following Monday.

• 12:36 pm. .... "hospital, the president....." The first radio broadcast of the assassination was announced on Radio ABC. I had just turned on the car radio and wondered what's going on? I drove along Country Way in North Scituate, planning lunch for Jocelyn, my two-year-old daughter and her Grampa, who had been babysitting, and me, four and a half months pregnant and always hungry.

At home on Hollett Street, Grampa met me at the door and we both said: "What's happening?"

• At 1 pm, the awful news was confirmed. For one brief instant the whole world shuddered to a stop. Never before and never again would there be such an awful moment in everyday time. A moment frozen — with startling accuracy — forever. Will there ever be a time when those of us who heard the news will not remember?

On Monday, Nov. 25, 1963, millions of Americans watched while the solemn procession moved from the Capitol to the White House. And watched as the caisson moved on to St. Matthew's Cathedral. And continued to watch as it moved on to Arlington National Cemetery. At each stop there was music, played in turn by the Army Band, Coast Guard Academy Band, Marine Band, Navy Band, Air Force Band · Just after 3 pm, during the closing flag-folding ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery, the Marine Band played the hymn, "Eternal Father, Strong to Save," also known as the Navy Hymn.

On Saturday, Nov. 23, from 11 to 11:30 a.m. the bells at St. Stephen's Church will ring in memory of President John F. Kennedy. I will play patriotic music, hymns and several favorites from his Irish Catholic heritage. One of the musical selections, "Lento Doloroso," was not part of the music played 50 years ago on Nov. 23rd. Within weeks after the assassination, world-renowned Belgian Carillonneur Kamiel Lefevere composed the piece and dedicated it on Jan. 15, 1964, to the 35th president of the United States, John F. Kennedy.

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

The documentary "Koch Brothers Exposed" will be shown in the meeting room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The billionaire Koch Brothers, Charles and David, donate a portion of their millions to philanthropic causes, such as Public Television programs. All CDTC movie nights are free of charge.

Lecture on civil liberties

South Shore Progressive Mass will present a lecture by UMass-Boston professor Paul Watanabe titled Fear and the Challenge to Civil Liberties: From the Japanese American Internment to 9/11 to the Boston Marathon. The lecture will take place at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, Dec. 10, at Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St. All are invited to attend.

Traumatic experiences often prompt responses that challenge the duty to protect civil liberties. The delicate balance between legitimate national security interests and the preservation of those liberties will be addressed. Watanabe will draw upon his knowledge of the World War II internment to analyze the aftermath of the 9/11 attacks and the recent bombings in Boston.

STATE SENATE

Town Manager Act amendment corrected

Cohasset's bill to amend the Town Manager Act is with the State Senate, but still needs some tweaking.

The Board of Selectmen received a memo this week from the Senate counsel seeking to make a few minor revisions to the wording in the Act. The Town Manager Act amendment was voted on by the April 2013 Town Meeting and was sent to the state legislature as a Home Rule Petition. It had a State House hearing in July, during which Cohasset citizens and officials spoke for and against the bill.

The Town Manager Act amendment was voted on by the April 2013 Town Meeting and was sent to the state legislature as a Home Rule Petition.

Since then, the town has awaited resolution on the Town Manager Act. Now that additional changes must be made, it could take longer for the bill to be passed.

Selectmen Chair Fred Koed explained, "If we change something, there's no guarantee it will get through this month; it could take it into the January-February session."

The changes are minor and include a simple typo correction that, if left unchanged, would affect which town employees are appointed by the town manager and approved by the selectmen. Per the Town Manager Act, the town manager has appointing authority for three positions: the police and fire chiefs, and the finance director. The selectmen have 15 days to accept or reject these three appointments.

This is outlined in Section 5D, subsection (f) of the Act. However, a typo in the Town Manager Act referenced Section 5D(c) but should instead read subsection "a." Otherwise, it would seem the selectmen could reject or accept any appointment in town.

Selectmen sent an email to the Senate counsel explaining the need for this revision.

UPDATE

Red Lion Inn hearing held off

The Board of Selectmen will take up a recent noise violation at the Red Lion Inn at its Tuesday, Dec. 3 meeting. The item was originally scheduled for the Tuesday, Nov. 26 meeting, but the board learned this week that it will take a little longer for the inn to file the requested information regarding the inn's entertainment license.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski asked the selectmen last week to give the inn seven days to comply with the request, or else attend a public hearing on the matter and have the license suspended.

The Board of Selectmen appointed Police Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon as a license enforcement agent to review a Sept. 28 alleged violation of the inn's entertainment license. However, Lennon reported Wednesday, Nov. 13 that 16 days after requesting information from the inn, the inn has yet to comply with the request.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski asked the selectmen last week to give the inn seven days to comply with the request, or else attend a public hearing on the matter and have the license suspended.

ENROLLMENT

cost, said Keating.

"It only disallows enrollment of students based on class size population."

However, according to Keating, during her meeting with Cataldo the superintendent said the schools "could save money if faculty students were removed from the district."

Keating further stated that Cataldo "is the first and only superintendent in the history of Cohasset schools to make this an issue. It's been in our contract for many years."

Johnston said there are benefits to having Cohasset teachers enroll their own children in the district. Teachers whose kids attend Cohasset schools are able to spend more time in their classrooms lesson-planning while their children can stay in town for the afternoon, study or attend after-school programs such as the recreation program, RISE.

"It demonstrates our confidence in the school system," said Johnston, adding that it allows the faculty members' children "to nurture relationships in the community we chose for their education.

"There's a strong desire in the district to attract and attain highly-qualified teachers," Johnston continued. "For some of us, having our children attend here is what attracted us to Cohasset and why we stay."

Keating said the uncertainty around the issue is stressful for children of faculty, not to mention their parents, the teachers.

"I respectfully hope you reconsider your determination to make whether or not a child's education career being possible each fall changes. It's very stressful for the family and the child. It's not child-centered."

When School Committee member Jeanne Astino asked how many children would be impacted should the enrollment change, Cataldo cautioned that school board members were not allowed to ask any questions at that time, and that the issue deals with collective bargaining with the teachers union.

Keating responded, "I don't consider this bargaining."

Schubert said the school board would have to discuss the matter during a closed, executive session.

OPERATION GRATITUDE

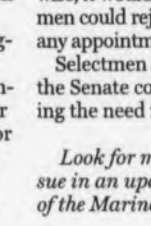
Dentist's office donates over 450 lbs of Halloween Candy to troops

Dr. Kristine A. Grazioso, d.b.a. South Shore Children's Dentistry, has donated over 450 lbs of Halloween Candy to our overseas troops. A prominent pediatric dental practice serving children's dental needs in the South Shore communities, Dr. Grazioso was looking for ways to encourage children in her practice to show their appreciation to our troops serving overseas while simultaneously promoting dental awareness. Dr. Grazioso and her associates, Dr. Anne Kuczma, Dr. Keri Peterman, and Dr. Mina Schafft, decided to engage the practice again this year by hosting a Halloween Candy Give Back event in conjunction with Operation Gratitude.

Operation Gratitude is a National Guard affiliated organization that annually sends 100,000 care packages to U.S. Service Members deployed in hostile regions, to their children left behind and to Wounded Warriors, Veterans, and First Responders. Throughout the month of October, South Shore Children's Dentistry encouraged its patients to consider donating some or all of their Halloween Candy as an act of gratitude to our overseas troops. This is the second consecutive year in which the practice has participated in this event with Operation Gratitude.

Over 75 families chose to donate their Halloween candy to this worthy cause. In an event held at Dr. Grazioso's office in Cohasset, on Nov. 4, her staff collected candy and encouraged the children to write cards with words of appreciation and encouragement to be delivered to the troops along with the candy. More than 100 cards were collected. In addition to her staff, local middle school and high school students donated their time towards organizing and executing the candy collection process. "We are thrilled with the turnout we received and the enthusiasm from our patients! It's wonderful to see the children giving their candy as an act of gratitude to our troops. Parents should be very proud of their children!" said Dr. Grazioso commenting on the event.

The candy and cards are being delivered to the California Army National Guard for distribution through Operation Gratitude. Items will be sent to our troops within the next three weeks. Judy Gray of Bohrnes United based in Hull, has generously donated her company's time and resources to provide shipping of the candy to the La Jolla, Calif. staging area for Operation Gratitude. Dr. Grazioso said, "I am extremely grateful to Judy for helping us with this effort – without her support, this event would be vastly more complicated."



For more information on this event, contact Julie Fitzpatrick or Jen O'Donnell at Kristine A. Grazioso, DMD PC, 781-383 0003, visit Dr. Grazioso's website at www.drgrazioso.com or visit us on Facebook at www.facebook.com/drgrazioso. Volume 38 - Report No. 46 November 11-15, 2013

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 313C

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives and senators on two roll calls from the week of November 11-15.
$177 MILLION FOR MILITARY INSTALLATIONS (H 3736)
House 150-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would provide $177 million for six major military installations around the state. Supporters said this would make Massachusetts the first state to provide funding for all its major federal military bases and may help persuade the federal government not to close the state's military bases if and when another round of closings occurs. They argued the bases employ some 15,000 Massachusetts residents and are critical to national security and the state's economy. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	Y	*
CAMPAIGN FINANCE VIOLATIONS BY LOCAL OFFICIALS (H 3719)
House 149-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill imposing the same penalties on candidates for local office who violate campaign finance laws that are currently imposed on those for state and county office. The measure would prohibit a municipal candidate from appearing on the ballot if civil proceedings for failure to file his or her campaign finance reports on time have been initiated. Supporters said it is time to treat all candidates the same. They urged the House to get rid of this giant loophole that favors municipal candidates. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	Y	*
BABY HEART SCREENINGS (S 1919)
Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the House a bill that would require all newborns to have a test that will determine whether he or she has a congenital heart defect. The test would be performed prior to the infant being discharged. Supporters said 27 other states have this mandate. They noted that the requirement will save lives. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)	*	Y
BAN DISCRIMINATION AGAINST VETERANS (S 1921)
Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the House a bill prohibiting an employer from discriminating against an individual in hiring and firing practices and compensation because he or she is a veteran. Supporters said that oddly, veterans are not included in the state's current anti-discrimination law. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	*	Y

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ROMNEY AND THE 2024 OLYMPICS - The newly established 11-member state commission created to study the feasibility of Massachusetts hosting the Summer Olympic Games in 2024 met for the first time last week. The idea of asking former Gov. Mitt Romney, who ran the 2002 Salt Lake City Winter Games, to address the committee in the near future was mentioned.

Supporters of bringing the games to Boston say it would pump hundreds of million of dollars into the economy and shine a national spotlight on the Bay State. Opponents say this is a misguided effort that will cause havoc in the city of Boston and would likely result in a gigantic boondoggle costing taxpayers millions of dollars.

$1.4 BILLION FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING (H 3727) - Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law legislation allowing the state to borrow $1.4 billion over five years for public and affordable housing. Provisions include $500 million to renovate and modernize many of the state's 45,000 public housing units; $55 million in loan guarantees to assist homeowners with blindness or severe disabilities to make their homes accessible; and $45 million for loans for the development of community-based housing for individuals with mental illness and intellectual disabilities.

Supporters say this package will finance projects that would create an estimated 1,150 units of new housing and 1,935 new construction jobs.

STUDY ON THE DANGERS OF VIDEO GAMES - The Committee on Public Health held a hearing on a proposal that would establish a commission to study the social impact of video games. The investigation would focus on video games that involve killing and also include studying the addictive quality of video games and any connection between killing games and actual violence. It would also look for benefits of some video games including their use as military training devices and educational devices and how video games teach the player new skills.

Supporters said such an investigation would be helpful in understanding the negative impact of these games on millions of players. They cited several cases in which killers were regular players of violent video games.

Opponents said studies have already been done and some are still being done. They argued there is no connection between the games and violence and noted the success of this industry in Massachusetts.

UNEMPLOYED MUST VOLUNTEER (H1781) - The Labor and Workforce Development Committee's agenda included a proposal that would require any person who receives unemployment benefits for more than six months per year to perform eight hours of community service weekly as a condition of receiving further benefits.

JURY DUTY -The Judiciary Committee's hearing included a bill raising from 70 to 75, the maximum age at which a person can serve as a juror (H 1681). Another proposal on the committee's agenda would exempt from jury duty any person who is a direct family member of a murder victim (H 1245) including the deceased's spouse, child, parent, sibling and grandparent.

COMMENTARY

'Beware of the Google effect'

PETER DECAPRIO

He is afraid that we will be on to his technique for finding highly skilled candidates: search for every finalist of every job opening in Massachusetts for the past 18 months and call the guys that didn't get hired.

Last week, when Richard Kobayashi presented the five mediocrities the Collins Center found suitable to run Cohasset, he warned the selectmen to "beware the Google effect," which sounds more ominous than the Ides of March. I can see why he made the suggestion. He doesn't want us to know the extent to which his search was a farce.

The Collins Center claims on its website that its "recruitment experts assure that municipal appointing authorities have a broad, well-qualified applicant pool when recruiting top executives. We have led successful searches in Chatham, Plymouth, Princeton, Plymouth, Springfield, Winthrop and Worcester, among others." By successful searches they mean someone got hired at the end.

Mr. Kobayashi promised publicly we would get candidates recruited away from other jobs. Instead, we got four currently out of work, and the one currently working was only in his current job 14 months before he began looking around for another job.

If the profile was to find candidates that look and act like Mike Coughlin, Mr. Kobayashi has hit a home run. Only one of the five has worked in a town meeting form of government. One was fired from his job because of "poor communications skills" when he apparently deliberately withheld information from his board regarding a federal licensing proposal. Another was terminated because of a "lack of trust." That candidate was the same one that, like Coughlin, once wanted a job "to be nearer elderly relatives." Now that guy wants to move again. A third was dismissed after his town's auditor found material weaknesses in financial reporting. That same guy at the same time was also in a foreclosure fight over his own home. If a manager can't manage his own finances, and was terminated because he couldn't manage his towns', what makes Mr. Kobayashi believe that guy should manage us?

All of our candidates have been "finalists" in more than one job search in Massachusetts in the last 12 months — the energetic candidate from New York has interviewed for three jobs and gotten none. Perhaps this is why Mr. Kobayashi is warning us of Google. He is afraid that we will be on to his technique for finding highly skilled candidates: search for every finalist of every job opening in Massachusetts for the past 18 months and call the guys that didn't get hired.

What is it that other selection committees know that we don't and now can't avoid? A member of the Harwich selectmen recently said this about that town's search, which included one of our finalists: "I am not impressed with any of the candidates and I think we can do better." According to their local paper, the Harwich selectmen agreed that all the candidates were at the stage in their careers where they considered this position a "gateway to retirement," hardly a ringing endorsement. At least these Harwich selectmen have it figured out. Maybe we should get Mr. Kobayashi to recruit them to come here and run for office.

In the 2011 search, we had over 80 candidates, this time, only 26. Our five finalists are, by all accounts, experienced job-seekers. How lucky for us. The Collins Center, which rewrote aspects of our search profile as directed by Karen Quigley, has offered nothing of value to us, but something that should satisfy experienced political operatives like Mr. Koed: a list of warm bodies none named Milanoski.

In my industry, when choosing to describe underperforming companies that frequently change management teams yet still manage to chronically underperform, analysts often use this expression: "Same circus, different clowns." Enough with the "experts;" let's just stay with homegrown talent that outperforms. In the meantime, send in the clowns.

COMMENTARY

TM candidate pool is lacking

LEONORA C. JENKINS

What he did present is an interesting array of men, three unemployed, and the majority with no experience in Massachusetts government having spent their careers in other states from Rhode Island to New York and Arizona.

It appears "qualifications" are only disqualifying when it comes to our current Acting Town Manager

Ever since town resident Michael Milanoski stepped up to the plate to fill the void left by the termination of the ill suited last Town Manager he has been lambasted by certain factions of the town as being 'unqualified'. This group led by current Selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Karen Quigley have been aided and abetted by previous manager, Mike Coughlin, who is in the process of suing the town.

Currently, we have a man in the Town Manager's seat with a vested interest in the town — a Little League coach with two children attending Cohasset schools and whose wife is an active volunteer in the schools. He has a Masters Degree in Economic Development and Community Planning. From day one he recognized and began correcting the operational and financial abyss the town had been thrust into by the behind-the-scenes tactics of former TM Bill Griffin.

Mr. Milanoski with his financial team has led us to a degree of financial stability that has seen our Standard and Poor's rating increased to AA+/Stable. Recently the Government Finance Officers Association has recognized him for excellence in financial reporting. He is in the process of making operations at town hall more user-friendly for residents and adding a greater sense of professionalism to the staff. Mr. Milanoski has also added a layer of transparency to Cohasset government by hosting a series programs on the Cohasset cable station.

But still some of our Selectmen view him as 'unqualified' to serve our town.

Now the Selectmen are choosing the person to move our town forward. Rather than appoint a citizens screening committee as was done for the last Town Manager search, on a 3-2 vote the Collins Center was hired at a cost over $13,000 to obtain and screen applicants and present a slate of finalists to the Selectmen.

During the process of determining criteria for a town manager, the Selectmen again led by Karen Quigley and Martha Gjesteby voted 3-2 for qualifications to insure that our Acting Town Manager would not be able to be part of the pool of candidates

The Collins Center representative Mr. Kobayashi presented a slate that did not include our current manager who did apply for the position. What he did present is an interesting array of men, three unemployed, and the majority with no experience in Massachusetts government having spent their careers in other states from Rhode Island to New York and Arizona.

One example is a gentleman with degrees in journalism, economics and law (definitely lacking Ms. Gjesteby's public administration requirement) who has worked in New York with a small stint in DC. Currently he works in a town of about a quarter million people with police and fire outside the purview of the town government. Rather than having a small BOS, this applicant works under an elected highly paid Supervisor and deals with a very political paid board that is voted in on strict party lines. I am confused how his background and experience comes close to meeting our needs.

When asked about the out of state applicants who are unfamiliar with and never dealt with our form of government, Mr. Kobayashi sloughed it off and said that we have good managers in place (due to Mr. Milanoski's diligence) and after one Town Meeting the applicant will catch on. Mr. Kobayashi also intimated that we should not be concerned with anything learned on a GOOGLE search – because even he had some uncomplimentary articles. Listening to this paid professional, I felt a sense of deja vu that we were listening to the person hired to vet our applicants last time around.

With the toxic environment that has existed in Cohasset since the elimination of our last Town Manager, I am concerned what the behind the scenes manipulations will produce for the overall future of Cohasset, especially our fiscal health.

Kelly honored at Bates

Bates senior captain Meredith Kelly, a former Cohasset High star, earned the first Maine Player of the Week honor of the season, announced Tuesday by the Maine Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

The 5-foot-8 guard won all-tournament team honors at the Mariner Pepsi Challenge over the weekend at Maine Maritime Academy after pouring in 26 points in both of Bates' first two games of the season, a 77-63 loss to Mount Holyoke on Friday and an 84-55 win over Simmons on Saturday. She connected on 21 of 46 field goal attempts (.457) and added 8.0 rebounds, 3.5 steals and 1.5 assists per game.

It is the first MWBCA Player of the Week honor for Kelly. She was twice named Maine Rookie of the Week in 2010-11, ultimately winning Maine Rookie of the Year honors.

Skippers win way to Final

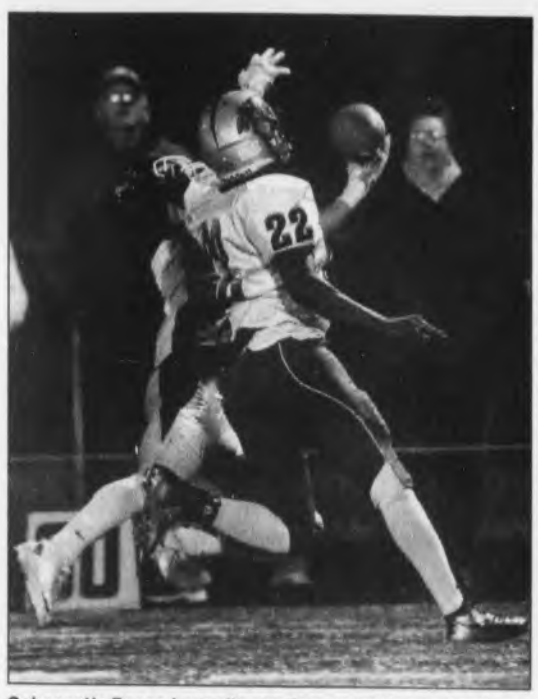
By John R. Johnson
For the Patriot Ledger

On a night when the Cohasset High School football team had trouble finding the end zone, senior quarterback Chris Haggerty took things into his own hands.

After Cohasset was stopped at the 1-yard line on each of its first two drives, Haggerty threw a pair of touchdown strikes to lead the Skippers to a 14-8 victory over Millis/Hopedale in the Division 6 South Sectional title game.

Cohasset (9-1) advances to the Division 6 state semifinals against either Latin Academy or St. Clement's. That game will be played on Saturday at Brockton High School.

Haggerty completed 14 of 19 passes for 155 yards and two scores, including five consecutive completions during a 9-play, 81-yard TD drive in the fourth quarter that gave Cohasset a 14-8 lead with 8:38 remaining. Haggerty hit Rocco Laugelle for a 1-yard scoring play, and the pair connected again for the conversion points.



"This was as much of a team win as you could come up with," said Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw. "It was incredible. Chris is as good a quarterback that I've had the pleasure of coaching in my 17 years of football. He's cool, calm and collected and has a nice, accurate arm."

After scoring 77 points in their last two games, the Skippers moved the ball well

Saturday's game – what to expect

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset football team will face St. Clement High School, a private school in Medford.

The Anchormen beat Latin Academy 21-14, Saturday night at Brockton High School, just one week after knocking off defending Div. 4A Super Bowl champion Cathedral 28-8 at Dilboy Stadium, Nov. 9.

It was the second time this season that St. Clement beat Cathedral, a team many in Cohasset know from recent basketball playoff showdowns.

St. Clement heads into the game with a six game winning streak and the best record since the team went to the Super Bowl in 1984.

In the win over Latin Academy, the Anchormen, known as a strong defensive team, forced a late turnover that turned into a 24-yard touchdown on a quarterback keeper by Mike Sullivan.

Sullivan also threw a touchdown pass in the game.

St. Clement blocked a punt for a safety and had an interception late in the game.

Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw knows St. Clement will be tough.

"St. Clement poses a number of threats," Afanasiw said. "They have two very fast receivers and a solid running back, as well as having a very

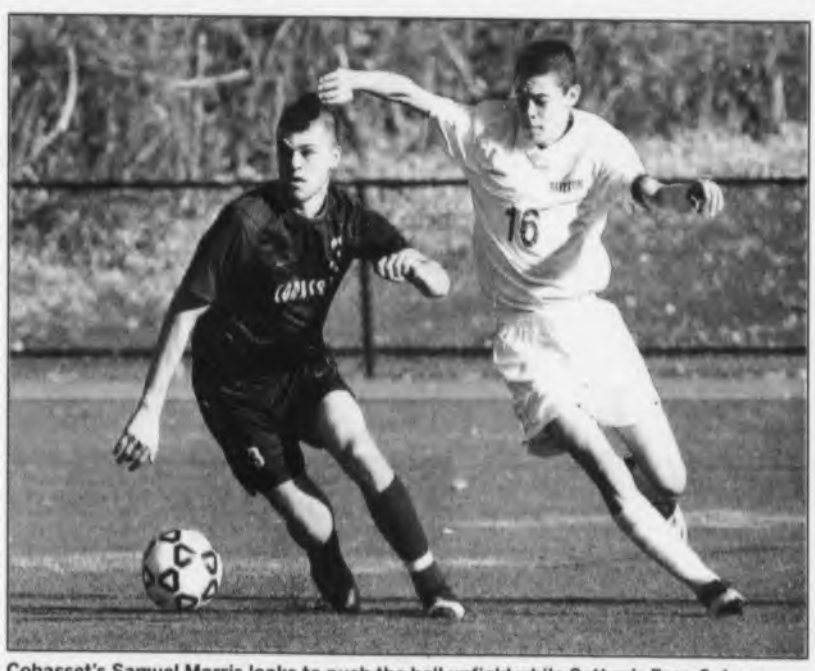
Skippers fall in final

Sutton overpowers Cohasset

By Jay N. Miller
For The Patriot Ledger

The Cohasset High boys soccer team's first trip to the state championship game since 1989 ran headlong into Sutton's three-peat Saturday as the Sammies blanked the Skippers, 4-0, at General Foley Stadium.

Central Sectional winner Sutton (19-0-4) got a pair of goals in each half, including two from sophomore Cole Acocelli, but South champ Cohasset (18-5-2) hung tough, and without the stellar work of junior goaltender Patrick Federle, the Sammies would have scored even more.



As much as Cohasset's squad accomplished this season, including rebounding from a 1-3 start, the Skippers weren't able to put much pressure on Sutton's net, thanks to the savvy and skilled Sammies defensive corps. And when the Skippers did penetrate the penalty box area, Sammies senior goalkeeper Gordy Smyth was masterful at commanding his crease, either batting away or snaring prospective crossing passes.

"The score of this game is misleading, because we were dominated by their back four," said Cohasset coach Jim Willis. "Play in the middle of the field was about even, but as soon as we ran into their backline, the ball was gone. Those guys also consistently started their offense. I can't say enough about the Sutton defense, because they really created so much of their offense too."

"Our back four has been a key all season," agreed Sutton coach Michael Elster. "But strong defense is a hallmark of our program, and this year we have an extra solid defensive group. We also get the (defensive) guys on the outside involved, pushing forward to help our offense, and that presents a challenge for any opponent to cover everybody."

Willis praised Federle but noted that Cohasset didn't quite play as well defensive-

Skippers psyched for hockey season

The Cohasset Mariner

Although Cohasset High School fall sports are doing well, hockey players, fans (and coaches) are doing a daily countdown to the start of the high school season.

This year's 2013/2014 hockey season will mark Coach Bob Walsh's eighth season at the helm of the Cohasset Skippers hockey team.

"We have a healthy number of veteran players returning this season," he remarked. "In addition we have some really skilled rookies entering this year's training camp." (Camp begins on December 2).

There are five senior captains of this year's Skippers hockey team.

Mickey Barry and Chris Lund are captains and defensemen. Chris Cohen, Terence Doonan and Colin Whelan man the forward positions.

"The job of leading this team is far too big for only one or two guys," Walsh said. "Each one of these guys brings something different to the ice, the bench and to the locker room. There's a lot of excitement surrounding this year's team."

This year also brings back a great core group of talented juniors and sophomores but adds an exciting level of rookie freshmen that will be trying out for the big team this year.

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Final poll: Silver Lake boys, Scituate girls are No. 1

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The fall season came and went in the blink of an eye, and when all was said and done, the region produced several South Sectional champs, finalists, and teams that made unexpected runs in the postseason.

The No. 1 teams for both the boys' and girls' sides are the clear-cut frontrunners. Not only did they exceed expectations in the regular season, they took their game to another level in the postseason. The top six on both sides all had tremendous seasons, and in total, of all the teams in our coverage area, 14 girls' teams and 13 boys' teams reached the postseason.

There are the final rankings for the 2013 season.

Boys

1. Silver Lake – The Lakers had arguably the best season in school history, going 21-1-1, which included four wins in the Division 1 tournament. They won the South Sectional title with a double-overtime win against No. 2 Needham before falling to Somerville in the Division 1 State Semifinals, which unfortunately was their first loss of the season. This team has talent from top to bottom, so expect them to come back loaded again next fall.

2. Hingham – The Harbormen took their regular season success right into the Division 2 South Sectional tournament, where they went 2-1, shutting out Randolph and Dartmouth before falling to Oliver Ames. They finished with a 14-4-2 record.

3. Pembroke – In some ways, the Titans far exceeded expectations this season, particularly if you look at their postseason run. After knocking out Diman on penalties, the No. 9 seed Titans walloped No. 1 Southeastern Regional, 6-0, before getting eliminated in the semifinals by No. 13 Walpole, the eventual Division 2 South Sectional champions. The Titans finished at 12-6-4.

4. Norwell – The Clippers had an immense season, going 18-3-1, and reaching the Division 3 South Sectional finals. The No. 2 Clippers recorded two shutouts in the postseason (they had 13 clean sheets on the year) and beat a dangerous Holliston team on penalties before losing to Medway in the finals.

5. Cohasset – The Skippers, the No. 5 seed in Division 4 South, went on a tear this postseason, going all the way to the state finals. They beat Archbishop Williams, Carver, No. 1 West Bridgewater, and No. 2 Sacred Heart to win the Sectional title. They then wiped out Georgetown, 3-0, in the state semifinals before losing, 4-0, to Sutton in the state finals. The Skippers finished the year with an 18-5-2 record.

6. Duxbury – The Dragons took their season all the way to the Division 2 South Sectional quarterfinals, before losing to No. 2 Oliver Ames. They beat No. 10 Canton, 2-1, in the first round. Duxbury ended its season at 13-6-1.

On the bubble: Marshfield, Braintree, Weymouth, Rockland, Scituate, Carver, Abington

Girls

1. Scituate – The Sailors, under the guidance of first-year head coach Rob Williams, went to the Division 2 South Sectional finals, getting edged by eventual state champs Notre Dame Academy, 1-0. The No. 1 seed in Division 2 South, the Sailors beat No. 16 Milton, No. 9 Medfield, and No. 5 Sandwich to reach the finals and finished the year with an 18-2-2 record.

2. Duxbury – The No. 3 seed Dragons edged Patriot League foe and No. 14 Hingham, 1-0, in the Division 2 South Sectional tournament before losing, 1-0, to No. 11 Dartmouth. The Patriot League champs had quite a run this year and ended it at 15-2-3.

3. Marshfield – The Rams had a remarkable year, and their defense took them far. The Atlantic Coast League champions were the No. 8 seed in Division 1 South and beat No. 9 Mansfield before falling to No. 1 Franklin, the eventual South champions, in the quarterfinals. The Rams finished the season with a 12-6-4 record.

4. Norwell – The Clippers ran into a buzzsaw in the Division 3 South Sectional tournament after beating No. 11 Bristol Plymouth, 6-0. No. 6 Norwell lost, 2-0, to South finalists and No. 3 seed Dedham and capped their fall with a 15-6-1 record.

5. Rockland – The Bulldogs seemingly came out of nowhere this season after a rough 2012 campaign. Once they started winning this season, they couldn't stop and eventually reached the Division 3 South Sectional tournament, where they beat No. 11 Holbrook and No. 3 Sacred Heart before losing, 1-0, to eventual Sectional champs Ursuline. Rockland finished at 13-5-3.

6. Silver Lake – Under first-year head coach Maren Rojas, the Lakers qualified for the Division 1 South Sectional tournament as the No. 7 seed. Unfortunately for the Lakers, they ran into No. 10 Newton South and lost, 2-0. The Lakers finished with a 9-3-6 record, causing fits to several teams in the Patriot League this fall.

On the bubble: Plymouth South, Plymouth North, Pembroke, Holbrook, Braintree, Hanover, Cohasset, Carver

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

ly as it had all season. "But we got so few chances of our own that we just weren't able to give our defense a breather," he added. "They were in our face all the time, it seemed. We came out a little dazed by their attack, but if we could've gotten to halftime at 0-0, we might've had a chance."

Instead, Sutton scored in the 22nd minute (Ryan Elster) and the 24th (Acocelli).

Acocelli struck again in the 50th minute, and Dale Dubinsky capped the scoring in the 68th minute.

Cohasset graduates eight seniors, including four starters.

"We have a lot of young talent coming back," Willis said. "We have solid players in all four grades, so I think we'll be OK next year.

"We do lose our two top scorers – (Ryan) McKeon and Joe Buckley. But hopefully this postseason was invaluable experience for our younger guys. And the way these guys turned this whole season around after that 1-3 start just made this whole postseason run a lot of fun."

and my assistant coaches' job a difficult one to begin training camp with," the coach said. "Although a difficult one, I have to admit the feeling is a little like the anticipation a five year old has at Christmas time. The competition to make the squad will be phenomenal. We got to see some of these kids play and develop as JV players last season and they were impressive then."

The Skippers will open up against two powerhouse teams this season with a game against Silver Lake on Saturday, December 14 at the Skipper's home rink in Weymouth (8 p.m.) and then the next day away at the Bog in Kingston against Hanover in a morning game at 11:30 a.m..

"We have an extremely challenging schedule this season but an equally talented team of players. In my seven previous seasons, there hasn't been this much talent on any one team and they have the possibility of being a historic hockey team for Cohasset High School," Walsh said. "Among the big challenges, however will be getting these guys up and running as a team as early as we have to this year; because we all know that the most talented team is not always the team that comes out on top. They know there will be a long hard road to the TD Garden if they want to play there."

One important aspect, (or actually two), is the return of two solid goaltenders. Senior Brandon Winn (last year's MVP) returns to play his final year of high school hockey while veteran sophomore goalie Liam McHugh, (last year's co Rookie of the Year), returns as a force in the net.

"Both Brandon and Liam are great players and our team is lucky to have these talented guys between the pipes," Walsh said. "They're great friends and competitors, each pushing the other at practices and supporting each other in the games. This team has been so exciting to watch over the past couple of years that the fan base has grown tremendously. That seventh player has helped us recover fast in some games and helped to kick start us in others."

Walsh said the bonding and team atmosphere is important to development and school spirit.

"This is where kids that don't play hockey for their high school really miss out," he said about the student and booster fanbase. "Kids play on some of these "so called" elite teams and travel teams, where the only fans in the stands are their own parents, (sometimes not even that), and the kid never has the opportunity to feel what it's like to be a hometown hero. Our fans are the best and this would be an exciting year to be part of this group."

Q & A

most when it comes to football, and why?

A: The older generations of the Cohasset football family inspired me as a middle school. Watching the games of the people that came before me when I was younger inspired me.

Q: Has football made a difference in school?

A: Being on the team you're held to a higher standard, which is reflected in school among all of the players.

Captain

Q: Is there anything special you do to inspire youger players?

A: Nothing other than doing the right thing.

Q: If there is one thing you would like to remembered for, what would it be?

A: Being a captain on the first Cohasset Skippers team to win a Super Bowl

Will Lucas C/OL

Q: What is your favorite aspect of playing football?

A: My favorite aspect of football is going out and having fun with my friends

Q: How does it feel to go so far in the playoffs?

A: It feels crazy, we've been thinking about this since we were freshman, now it's becoming a reality

Q: Who inspires you the most when it comes to football, and why?

A: When it comes to football I'm inspired by Coach Pattison and my fallen teammates. Pattison was a graduate of CHS and it feels nice that he is able to relive his memories through us. Also Tim Gillis and Danny Tango two teammates that suffered season ending injuries, I play for them since they can't.

Q: Has football made a difference in school?

A: Football has helped me with time management, knowing that I have to practice for a few hours then do my homework can be hard but it's easy to manage.

Rocco Laugelle WR/DB

Q: What is your favorite aspect of playing football?

A: Going out with my friends everyday and working hard

Q: How does it feel to go so far in the playoffs?

A: Unbelievable, we have been working for this day since we began as freshman

Q: Who inspires you the most when it comes to football, and why?

A: My family and friends because I know they come to watch me play

Q: Has football made a difference in school?

A: Yes it plays a big role because I plan on planning college football so football has an influence on where I go to college

Liam Burke/ WR

Q: What is your favorite aspect of playing football?

A: My favorite aspect of football is playing under the lights every Friday night with my friends and winning.

Q: How does it feel to go so far in the playoffs?

A: It feel very rewarding going so deep in the playoffs knowing all the hard work the past 3 years is finally paying off.

Q: Who inspires you the most when it comes to football, and why?

A: My friends and family inspire me because I want to go out and make them proud whenever I go out and play.

Q: Has football made a difference in school?

A: Yes. All the football players stick together in school and lookout for each other and if I ever need anything I know my teammate will be there to help me.

Will Butenschoen LB

Q: What is your favorite aspect of playing football?

A: Learning valuable life lessons that emerge from the game.

Q: How does it feel to go so far in the playoffs?

A: It's like no other feeling, I know it's cliche but we've had high hopes and expectations but being in the situation is unreal. There is a lot of hype and the fear of losing is what drives my teammates and me to win. We look forward to driving out ever down, working one step at a time to keep getting to the next level.

Q: Who inspires you the most when it comes to football, and why?

A: My coaches and teammates are the people who inspire me most because they're the people who drive me to succeed both on and off the field. They are the people who I spend the most time with, even more than my own family, if you discount sleep time. They have become my support team and my family through the years

Q: Has football made a difference in school?

A: Yes, definitely. With so much time it takes up, I have learned how to budget a schedule. However, most of all, it has taught me to be a team player. It is my only team sport. The life lessons I have been taught I wouldn't be able to get in any other situation. I have learned to support, be supported, push myself, be pushed and push others. It's unparalleled in the fist half but had only one touchdown to show for it after two gutsy goal-line stands by Millis/Hopedale (7-3).

Cohasset finally got on the board with 1:45 left in the first half after assuming terrific field position following a Millis punt. Haggerty connected with Ryan Gillis on an 8-yard TD pass, but Cohasset's point-after failed. Gillis contributed a key 12-yard run during the 5-play, 33-yard drive that gave Cohasset a 6-0 lead at halftime.

The game started to turn ugly for Cohasset early in the second half when Millis took an 8-6 lead 6:21 into the third quarter. Cohasset got nowhere on its next drive, and Millis was forced to punt on its next drive, but kept the ball at the Cohasset 45-yard line after a roughing the kicker call. On the next play, Laugelle picked off Millis quarterback Sean Heffernan to set up the game-winning drive.

Terence Doonan, who had a key reception during the winning drive, had two interceptions during a three-minute span of the fourth quarter to preserve the victory. Workhorse running back Cole Kissick rushed 25 times for 90 yards, including a key 12-yard pickup that allowed the Skippers to run the clock out.

"I wasn't too upset when we didn't score early, although I was a little frustrated that we didn't get in," said Afanasiw. "But we kept them down in their zone and they couldn't advance the ball. Being able to nullify their running game made them go to the air, and I think our athleticism on the perimeter benefited us there."

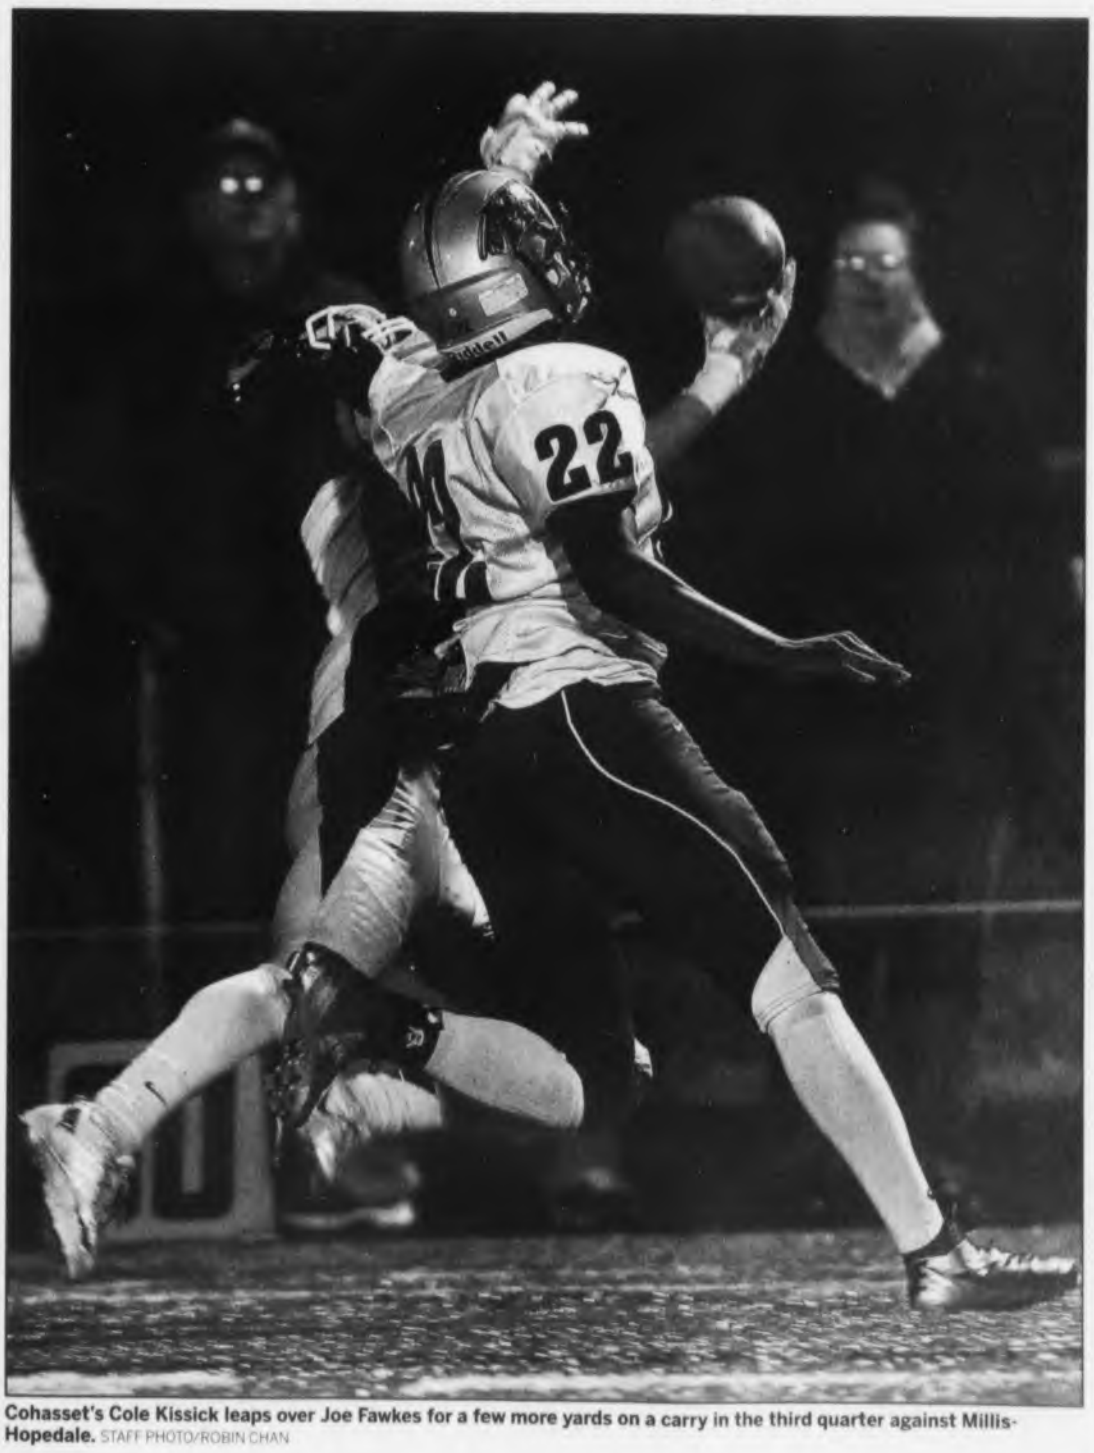
"Their line is considerably bigger than ours, but our physical style of play could be the equalizer needed. The boys are focused and driven! Saturday night should make for some exciting football."

Hull on Thanksgiving

The Skippers have had pretty good luck with Hull, beating them 42-12, Sept. 27.

In the past couple of years, it has been the same, although anything can happen at Hull, where winds can play havoc with both passing and kicking games, and even send field goal attempts into the water.



Cohasset has won the past three games decisively, and have won eight of the last 10 meetings.

The last time Hull won was in 2009, when the Pirates scored a 20-7 victory. That same season however, Cohasset had won the South Shore League and was headed to the playoffs.

COHASSET GARDEN CLUB

Holly Hill Farm honored

The Cohasset Garden Club nominated Holly Hill and the Frank White family for this award, presented at a regional meeting of clubs from all over the New England area.

Holly Hill Farm was recently honored by The Garden Club of America with an Historic Preservation Commendation. The Cohasset Garden Club nominated Holly Hill and the Frank White family for this award, presented at a regional meeting of clubs from all over the New England area.

An active farm since pre-Revolutionary days, Holly Hill was acquired by the Richardson family in 1840 and passed after five generations to Frank White, a direct descendant. Rather than succumb to pressure to develop the land, Frank and his wife, Jean, created an organic farm and began to use the property as an outdoor classroom.

Today, Holly Hill Farm has one of the most popular stands at the Cohasset Common Farmer's Market, offering organic produce, flowers and herbs.

Twenty-two area schools maintain gardens on the property. More than 9,000 people have participated in the education programs, which include field trips, workshops and summer projects for children and young adults. Walking trails wend their way through the woods and fields, passing by a pond that once provided ice for ships sailing to the Caribbean islands.

"Holly Hill is not only a local treasure but an historically significant regional asset," said Cohasset Garden Club president Bet Baker. "We are proud that our national organization has recognized the White family in its efforts to preserve this wonderful property."

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Christmas is for the birds...

By Jan Todd
Special to the Mariner

Christmas is for the birds and for all manner of other critters who do not hibernate. In fact, the holiday season is near the beginning of winter, when finding water and food is usually easier than later in the season when the supply may be extremely limited. As you walk through your garden, cutting cedar, pine, spruce, juniper, fir, holly, boxwood, winterberry, etc., to decorate your home, do keep an eye out for bluebirds and for robins who winter over in our area. It is a great time of the year for the family to pull on some boots and to walk and to teach the family to "look." In Cohasset take a walk in the Whitney-Thayer Woods or in Hingham's Wompatuck State Park or in Norwell's Norris Reservation. Also, look through your home's windowpanes and make note of what you can see.

Do the same if you are walking through the five Cohasset homes on Thursday, Dec. 5, when the Community Garden Club of Cohasset is offering Yuletide 2013, the holiday house tour, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Of course you will find many of the greens mentioned above, plus other greens, berries, nuts and masses of flowers, cones, and other bits of nature's bounty decorating the homes. They will provide a plethora of ideas for your own home's decorations this season, but also, look through the windows. You can often tell when a homeowner enjoys pulling on a pair of boots, looking, walking, cutting throughout the winter. Often there is provision for birds, somewhat near a window, where one can be sure that the bird bath water has not frozen or that food remains in the feeder. Gardeners try to plant for four seasons. Notice when choices have been made for plants that keep their foliage well into winter before turning brown: Look for green, or silver, yellow or blue in yarrows, mums, heuchera, lamium, salvia, sedum and grasses just to mention a few. Do they spice up an otherwise bleak landscape? Besides the evergreens and the color, notice seed heads and varied leaf shapes. These shapes and textures will only improve after a storm when covered with snow and glittering with ice.

Here is a little hint if you would like to think about nature and a natural approach to a Cohasset life: Find a copy of the fabulous book, "The Eclectic Gardener." It is a beautiful book, specific to our town and the South Shore. It provides easy directions from how to make potpourri, to protecting your garden in winter, to recipes, to August lawn care, to how to force a flowering branch, birds, animals, poetry. It is the one inclusive book every Cohasset home should have on its shelves as the pages move from January to December. It also makes a valued gift. It will fill you with the desire to pull on those boots! Look for it at Marketplace, St. Anthony's Center, when you go there to enjoy a warm drink and the delicious food included in the price of your Yuletide ticket.

You will get plenty of creative ideas about how to display greens during the holiday house tour. COURTESY PHOTO

LOBSTER TRAP TREE

Schedule announced

Construction of the first Cohasset lobster trap holiday tree will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 30, on Government Island. The tree will be 30 feet high plus a 4-foot star on top. It will be built from borrowed lobster traps from members of the Cohasset fishing fleet, decorated with evergreens, all white lights and buoy "ornaments" borrowed from local lobster fishers. In addition, individuals, service groups, classrooms, merchants and others are encouraged to decorate their own buoys for display on the tree. Blank buoys and sticks are available at the Cohasset Post 118 of the American Legion for $10 for those wishing to decorate and display a buoy. All buoys and traps can be retrieved by their owners, when the tree comes down after New Year's.

The committee has asked that all buoys be brought to Government Island at 9 a.m. either Saturday, Nov. 30, or Sunday, Dec. 1, to be displayed. The plan is to erect the tree on Saturday and decorate it on Sunday.

A judging committee, led by local artist Tina Watson will be awarding first second and third place ribbons to various categories of the buoys during the first week in December.

The lighting of the tree will be at 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 7. They will have holiday music, free hot chocolate and cider and much more. All are welcome to attend this family event. Help is needed.

GIMME SHELTER

Johnny Cash and his sisters will steal your heart

PAULA J. FATERSIK

These youngsters were recently rescued and naturally have been a bit overwhelmed with their new surroundings, and they do stick together like a little family.

Kittens, kittens and more kittens! This week it is time for Johnny Cash and his sisters, Vivian and June to make their entrance. If that seems confusing to you, join them and us!

We'll start with Johnny C. who is just so handsome and has a stance that makes you take notice. He is a charming boy and with lots of love and attention, he will be a star himself. Sporting a smooth mix of black and white fur, his dark eyes are framed with the shadow of symmetrical black fur creating a dramatic feline face. Vivian and June, his sweet sisters, have similar white fur patterns but Vivian shows tiger patches while June sports adorable tiger spots. Both have pretty little feminine faces and are dainty and delicate girls.

These youngsters were recently rescued and naturally have been a bit overwhelmed with their new surroundings, and they do stick together like a little family. When petted and given gentle attention, they relax into the sweetest kitten purrs. It is always a reward to experience their realization that they are now safe and loved.

All they need now are loving families and homes where they can explore, play, and share their happiness with you. That would make it a beautiful Thanksgiving holiday for Johnny, Vivian and June. This week, all three will be having their spay/neuter procedures so gentle TLC — Thanksgiving Love and Care — will be on the menu. If you are willing and able to give the gift of a gentle, affectionate and safe home, these babies will give the gift of joy and entertainment for a lifetime.

Please call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on these babies. They deserve a Happy Thanksgiving in a warm and loving forever home so please visit Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can see more of our wonderful adult cats and kittens who are waiting for their best match and home by visiting www.HSAR.org and clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information about our special cats and events.

Please save the date as Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will have a display booth at the Hull Holiday Showcase at the Nantasket Beach Resort at 45 Hull Shore Dr. on Saturday, Nov. 30 from 9 a.m. - 2 p.m. Admission and parking are free and we will be raffling off fantastic cat and dog baskets and have many items and goodies for sale to help support our shelter. Kittendale's Calendars will also be available so please set aside some time and join HSAR and all of the merchants and artisans who put together this great event.

Why can't you buy our windows from stores or contractors?

We take great pride in custom-building our windows, so we won't let just anyone sell or install them. We take care of the entire process: only we sell, build, install and warrant our windows.

How much stronger is our window material compared to vinyl?

Our exclusive Fibrex material is twice as strong as vinyl, and—unlike wood—requires virtually no maintenance.*

How are we able to install windows in just one day?

Our teams of installers are exceptionally trained, tested, and skilled. This is why most installations—including the clean up—are completed in just one day.

WISE TO THE WORD

PHO: A hearty broth-based Vietnamese soup most often made with beef, pho (pronounced "fuh") is eaten for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Different recipes abound, but a traditional beef broth base is made with charred onions, ginger, cloves, cardamom, cinnamon and star anise. Thin slices of beef are added, as well as rice noodles and a variety of garnishes. — Cookthink

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Choosing supplements

Whole food supplements are all the rage right now, bringing superfoods to the forefront of the American diet.

Tina Chan, founder of whole food supplement business Powbab, Inc. based near Chicago, says superfoods like baobab fruit, chia seeds, lucuma powder, maca powder, spirulina and mushrooms are becoming more popular because of their nutrition from exotic and ancient sources.

"Each of these superfoods has amazing nutritional benefits and contributes to a healthy diet or can make a difference in an unhealthy one," Chan says. "Most of these contain a good source of antioxidants, which continue to be important for our day and age as people are more stressed and have increased exposure to toxins in the environment through pesticides and chemicals in food."

One of the higher sources of antioxidants is in baobab fruit, which has 2.5 times more antioxidants than pomegranates and more antioxidants than acai berry, Chan says. Her favorite supplement is the Powbab baobab superfruit chews, which provide 100 percent of daily antioxidant needs in one chew. "The best part is that the chews taste good and are a little treat during a busy day or pre- or post-workout," she says.

Chan offers tips on choosing the right supplements:

Consult your physician first, especially if on medication: Chan suggests also picking a physician that focuses on nutrition and whole food supplements as a method of prevention or treatment, with the philosophy "to rely on the body to heal itself by feeding the inputs it needs."

There is no one-size-fits all: Each supplement has a different functionality, ingredients and generally, the manufacturing process depends on the brand.

Read labels and ask questions: Don't assume all supplements are natural or have "safe and natural" ingredients.

Don't assume your body needs 1000s of percents of minerals and vitamins: "Especially for water-soluble vitamins, your body cannot absorb all the vitamins and they are just excreted, along with your dollars spent," Chan says.

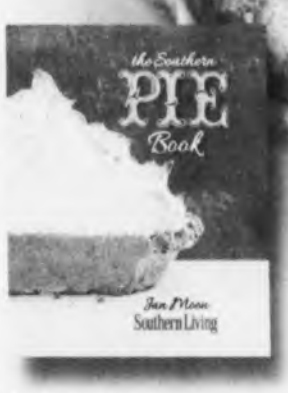
Big slice of the South

Sweeten your Thanksgiving pie tradition

By Dan Kane
More Content Now

"We had pie almost every Sunday after church. So I saw lots of pies growing up," says Jan Moon, author of "The Southern Pie Book."



Her 288-page book, illustrated with mouthwatering photos, is a winning collection of pies, tarts, cobblers, crumbles, crisps and buckles, including such Southern classics as Shoofly Pie, Maple Chess Pie with Brown Sugar Bacon, Sweet Potato Pie with Marshmallow Meringue, Seriously Black Bottom Pie and Sweet Buttermilk Pie.

There are chapters devoted to fresh fruit pies (spiced pear, cider apple, fig) and custard pies (butterscotch, banana cream, mocha mud) and one containing 17 different pie crusts, built around such ingredients as gingersnaps, pretzels, coconut, cream cheese, cheddar and chocolate. Moon's directions are clear and to the point.

Here, Moon — the former test kitchen expert for Southern Living magazine and owner of Dreamcakes Bakery in Birmingham, Ala. — talks about her lifelong love of pie in an email interview.

Q. Tell me, what is it about pies and the South?

A. Southerners are known for their hospitality and a desire to please. Pie fits all those criteria. Pie is definitely made to be shared, whether it is family or friends, and just a sweet way to say you love or care for someone.

In the South, it is a common thing for someone to show up at your door with a pie.

Q. Why are people reluctant to make their own crust?

A. Because it is a precise process and not something you do every day. But, if you use the food-processor method in the book it is practically foolproof. When I make crust, I generally double the recipe and freeze one for later. Once you try it a couple of times you will see that it's worth the effort.

Q. How did you come up with the pies from the book?

A. It was a year-long process compiling the recipes. Most are ones I have collected through the years, some are recipes friends and family were so generous to share. And some I developed especially for the book. So it is a wonderful mix of traditional and modern recipes. Some for beginners and some for seasoned cooks.

Billie's Holiday Pie

Makes 8 servings.

- 1 pie crust
- 1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1 cup cane syrup
- 1/4 cup butter, melted
- 1 T bourbon
- 1 T white vinegar
- 1 t vanilla extract
- 1/2 t ground cinnamon
- 1/8 t ground nutmeg
- 1/8 t table salt
- 3 large eggs
- 1 cup toasted pecan pieces
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 1/2 cup chopped dried dates

Prepare Deep South Pie Crust (see recipe) through fitting into a 9-inch pie plate. Or use another crust.

Preheat oven to 350 F. Whisk together sugar and next nine ingredients until blended. Stir in pecans, raisins and dates. Pour mixture into prepared crust.

Bake at 350 F on lower oven rack 45 to 48 minutes or until set, shielding edges with aluminum foil to prevent excessive browning. Remove from oven to a wire rack, and cool completely (2 hours).

Deep South Pie Crust

Makes 1 crust.

- 1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/4 cup cold butter, cut into pieces
- 1/4 cup cold lard, cut into pieces
- 1/4 t table salt
- 3 T ice water

Combine first four ingredients in a bowl with a pastry blender until mixture resembles small peas. Sprinkle ice water, 1 tablespoon at a time, over surface of mixture in bowl; stir with a fork until dry ingredients are moistened. Shape into a ball; cover and chill 30 minutes.

Preheat oven to 425 F. Roll dough into a 13-inch circle on a lightly floured surface. Fit into a 9-inch pie plate; fold edges under, and crimp. Line pastry with aluminum foil, and fill with pie weights or dried beans. Bake at 425 F for 15 minutes. Remove weights and foil; bake 5 to 10 more minutes or until golden brown. Cool completely on a wire rack.

Chocolate Fudge Pie with Praline Crumble

Makes 8 servings.

- 1 Deep South Pie Crust
- 3/4 cup butter
- 3/4 cup semisweet chocolate chip
- 3/4 cup packed dark brown sugar
- 2/3 cup granulated sugar
- 3 large eggs, lightly beaten
- 2 T all-purpose flour
- 3 T whipping cream
- 1 t vanilla extract
- Whipped cream
- Praline Crumble

Prepare Deep South Pie Crust (see recipe) through fitting into a 9-inch pie plate. Or use another crust.

Preheat oven to 350 F. Microwave butter and chocolate morsels in a medium glass bowl on high for 1 to 2 minutes or until melted and smooth, stirring at 30-second intervals. Stir in sugars. Stir in eggs. Stir in flour, whipping cream and vanilla until blended. Pour into prepared crust.

Bake at 350 F for 45 minutes or until puffed and almost set. (Filling will deflate as it cools.) Remove from oven to a wire rack, and cool (about 3 hours).

Top each slice with whipped cream and Praline Crumble.

Praline Crumble

Preheat oven to 350 F. Bring 1 1/2 cups firmly packed light brown sugar, 1/2 cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons of butter and 1 tablespoon of light corn syrup to a boil in a medium-size heavy saucepan over medium heat, stirring constantly.

Boil, stirring occasionally, 6 to 8 minutes or until a candy thermometer registers 236 (soft ball stage). Remove pan from heat. Let sugar mixture stand until candy thermometer registers 150 (15 to 20 minutes). Stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla extract and 1 cup coarsely chopped pecans using a wooden spoon; stir constantly for 1 minute or just until mixture begins to lose its gloss. Spoon into small mounds onto wax paper; let stand until firm (about 10 minutes). Cut into small pieces.

Thanksgiving's new flavor: Baconize that turkey

JIM HILLIBISH

It's going to be a stomach-filling 33 days, punctuated by two major turkey feasts, then none until next year's Thanksgiving.

There must be something better for at least one of those turkey repasts, and there is — more turkey.

I chanced upon boneless turkey tenderloins hidden under some chicken wings in my butcher's meat case. He termed it "the invisible meat." They hardly sell enough to pay for the packaging.

Why? Anything "tenderloin" will be good, and they are cheap.

Inside were two meaty tenderloin strips, each about a half pound. They were clean-shaven of fat and skin. I wanted to roast them, but I knew they would be dry.

Solution: Bring on the bacon. I wrapped each of those guys with two pieces of bacon, then browned and baked them in their juices. Baconized turkey. My family and dog could not believe it.

I served them with a roasted acorn squash and a succotash side. We had our first pumpkin pie with whipped cream, from my sister, a trainer for Thanksgiving.

Great stuff, but would it suffice on Thanksgiving Day? Last time I experimented, half the table fled to Burger King. This time, I think we have a winner.

Jim's Baconized Turkey

- 1 pound turkey tenderloins, boneless and skinless
- 4 strips bacon, peppered
- 1 T butter
- 1/4 cup white wine

Wash turkey and pat dry. Wrap end to end with two strips bacon each. Brown the loins lightly in a skillet. Place in a baking dish greased with butter. Pour on skillet juices and add white wine. Bake covered in a dish for 30 minutes at 350 F. Uncover and bake another 20 minutes. Turn on oven-convection fan for last 10 minutes if you have one.

Serves two. Break the traditional turkey hegemony of the seasons and serve tenderloins wrapped in bacon and roasted in white wine.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF Dec. 2, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Decisions involving your finances might seem to be foolproof. But they could have underlying risks you should know about. Don't act on anything until all the facts are in.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're attracted to a situation that appeals to your Bovine intellect. And that's good. But don't neglect your passionate side when romance comes calling later in the week.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A recent development enhances that special relationship. Spending more time together also helps make the bonding process stronger. Expect news about a possible career change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A suspicious situation should be dealt with before it leads to serious problems. Get all the facts needed to resolve it. Then refocus your energies on those tasks that need your attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to be more open-minded in working toward a resolution of that standoff between yourself and a colleague or family member. A little flexibility now could work to your advantage later.

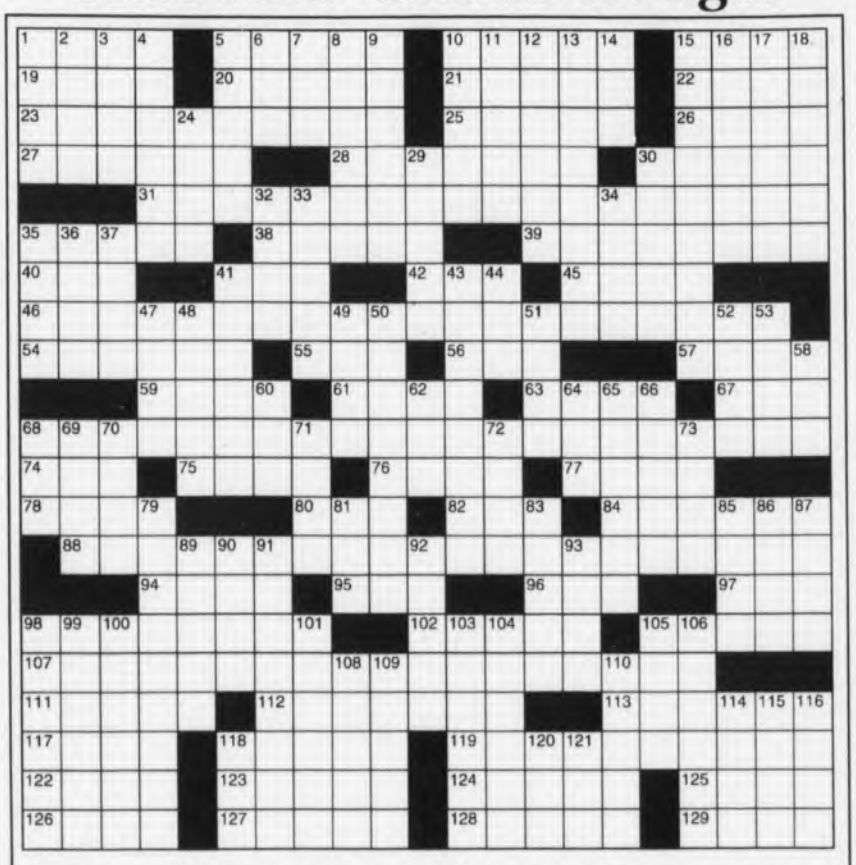
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might feel a bit threatened by a proposed workplace change. The best way to deal with it is to ask questions. You'll find that those involved will be happy to provide you with the facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Feeling alone in a crowd during the early part of the week is an unsettling emotion. But your spirits soon perk up, putting you into the right mood to start making holiday plans.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A pesky problem should be dealt with immediately so you can put your time and effort into something more important. Someone from your past could have significant news for you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) High-energy aspects dominate, both on the job and at home. Use this time to put some long-range plans into operation. Things level off later in the week.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Even the usually gregarious Goat might feel overwhelmed by a flurry of activities. Be patient. Things soon return to your normal social routine.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Career choices that seem too confusing to deal with at this point probably are. More information would help uncomplicate them. On the personal side, a friend might need your advice.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your Piscean imagination is stimulated by possibilities you see in a new opportunity. But keep those ideas to yourself until you feel ready to translate them into a workable format.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an ingratiating way of helping people deal with their fears. Have you considered a career in social work or with the clergy?

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

TOWN MANAGER SEARCH

Then there were three

Selectmen to hold second interviews

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The top three Town Manager candidates have been chosen.

There are now three finalists in the running for the job in Cohasset — the Board of Selectmen has chosen Stephen Hartford, Grady Miller, and Christopher Senior (see sidebar) as the three they would like to bring back for second interviews. The board narrowed the list of five candidates down to three during their Tuesday, Nov. 26 meeting, eliminating candidates Tim King and William DiLibero.

The selectmen launched the search for a permanent town manager in July, hiring consultants from the UMass Boston Collins Center. Senior Associate Richard Kobayashi primarily oversaw the search, working with the board to craft a town profile and job description of the town manager position.

Cohasset has an Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, who has served in the position since March 2012 following former Town Manager Michael Coughlin's removal. Milanoski applied for the job but was not among the finalists. Coughlin is suing the town for reinstatement.

The board will interview at least two candidates next week. Senior will interview at 6 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 2 while Hartford will interview at 6 p.m. on Tuesday. An interview time with Miller had yet to be confirmed as of press time.

The candidates will each tour the town facilities and meet with key town department heads and employees. There are also two open houses planned where members of the public can meet and greet the respective candidates on Monday and Tuesday from 2 to 3 p.m. at the fire station.

The selectmen were nearly unanimous in their choices. The board members each checked off their top three

Holiday gala to 'Feed the Hungry'

Fundraiser supports South Shore charity

By Erin Dale

While need knows no season, something about the holiday season serves as reminder that it's nicer to give than to receive — and to give back.

At next week's 16th annual "Feed the Hungry" gala, Thursday, Dec. 5 at Quincy's Granite Links Golf Club, attendees will have the chance to help thousands of families in need from all over the South Shore.

School security upgrade in works

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As the one-year anniversary of the school shooting in Newtown, Connecticut approaches, school security seems to be on everyone's mind.

Cohasset school officials recently addressed the matter of improved security and technology during the Wednesday, Nov. 20 school committee meeting.

Last year, the school board approached the town's Advisory Committee to release funds for tech and security upgrades. According to Advisory chairman Peter Pescatore, his board approved $50,000 for a new sign-in kiosk system and $5,000 for camera software upgrades.

Pescatore said in a phone call that he follows up on all of the grants approved by Advisory, and recently learned that 10 months later, half of the money has been expended, but the new upgrades have yet to be implemented.

The school board addressed the matter last week, with Superintendent Barbara Cataldo explaining that a state grant of just under $50,000 to install new doors at the high school only came in recently.

"It was approved yesterday," Cataldo said of the grant last Wednesday. "It wasn't budgeted until after [the spring 2013] Town Meeting. There is a series of items we're looking at to do the purchasing... we've been waiting for this grant to do the structural changes to the existing doors. We're starting with the high school and will move over to Deer Hill and

License plate check leads to arrest of Level 2 sex offender

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Around 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday (Nov. 19), an officer on patrol observed a vehicle that had backed into a parking spot at a local store; the position of the vehicle raised his suspicion and he ran the plate through the Registry of Motor Vehicles database, police said. The computer revealed that the vehicle belonged to a Level 2 sex offender and after a short investigation, it was determined that Wayne R. Zifcak, 43, of 291 Cocasset St., Foxboro, had not properly notified the state Sex Offender Registry Board that he had changed employers as required under state law. Police said Zifcak had had his new job for six months and had been working at a large construction site off Beechwood Street.

Police placed Zifcak under arrest and charged him with failure to register as a sex offender. He was arraigned on the charge later that day in Quincy District Court.

According to mass.gov, the Sex Offender Registry Board is the state agency responsible for keeping a database of convicted sex offenders and classifying each offender so that the public may receive information about dangerous sex offenders who live or work in each community. The goal of the Sex Offender Registry is to educate the public and to prevent further victimization.

A level 2 designation for a sex offender means that the risk of re-offense is moderate and the degree of dangerousness posed to the public is such that a public safety interest is served by public availability of registration information.

3-car crash

Police responded to a three-car crash at the entrance to the train station on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) at around 9:23 a.m. on Tuesday (Nov. 19). Police said a 2009 Toyota sedan, operated by a 55-year-old Scituate woman, and a 2006 Honda SUV, operated by a 21-year-old Scituate woman, were both traveling north on 3A when a 2012 Cadillac sedan failed to stop at the light while exiting the train station.

Police said the Toyota put on its emergency brakes when the Cadillac shot out in front of it. The Honda then hit the rear of the Toyota. The Toyota had damage to the passenger side and rear of the vehicle; the Honda sustained front-end damage and had to be towed. The 21-year-old operator of the Honda was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said. The operator of the Cadillac, a 59-year-old Hull man, was cited for the red light violation. Police said he was attempting to head north on 3A when he ran the light.

Lovers

A cell phone caller reported seeing a couple lying on the Beechwood ball field under a blanket around 4 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 24) and suspected there might be more than snuggling going on. Police responded and did not find a couple on the field but did interview a young couple that was walking nearby and told them about the complaint.

Debit card

A 55-year-old Cohasset woman went to the police station on Friday morning (Nov. 22) to file a report that her debit card from a local bank had been fraudulently used at a Walmart in Texas where a charge of $253 had been made.

Her bank confirmed her card had been compromised and cancelled the card, police said.

Police said the victim had expected to receive a new debit card some time ago and when it did not arrive, she kept using the old one.

Deer put down

A police officer had to euthanize a deer that had been hit by a motor vehicle and was severely injured and lying on the southbound side of the highway. The accident occurred between Mendel Road and Stop and Shop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) on Friday (Nov. 22) around 6:30 p.m.

Sick raccoon

Police officers were unable to locate a sick raccoon that had been reported by three different residents (two on Hull Street and one on Lamberts Lane) on Saturday (Nov. 23). The callers reported that the raccoon was walking oddly and seemed ill.

The callers were concerned the raccoon might have rabies. Police warn residents not to approach a wild animal that is acting strangely and to give them a call. "We will try to get up there right away," Acting Chief William Quigley said.

Solicitors

A Stevens Lane caller reported a man and woman were going door-to-door selling items on Saturday morning (Nov. 23). The caller provided a description of the duo. Police were not able to locate them and said there are currently no registered solicitors in town. A solicitor must register with the police who do a background check and then issue a permit that should be worn and clearly visible.

Mailbox

A 77-year-old Nichols Road man reported that a red Ford SUV turned around in his driveway and damaged his mailbox in the process, before taking off. The incident was reported at 5:50 p.m. on Saturday (Nov. 23).

Campaign call

Police received another call last week, this one from a 69-year-old Cohasset man, inquiring about alleged campaign fraud during the Town Election. Police told the man the matter has been referred to the state Office of Campaign and Political Finance.

Corner Stop Eatery gives thanks to police, fire

The Corner Stop Eatery, located at 235 Hull St. in Cohasset, celebrated the spirit of Thanksgiving with a food drop to town fire and police departments on Tuesday, Nov. 26.

The Corner Stop, a new neighborhood eatery serving American food at West Corner — where Hingham, Hull and Cohasset meet — provided lunch for more than 20 fire and police personnel as a way to say "thank you" for their community service and dedication. Head Chef Sam Cabral-Curtis created a sampling of both popular, and new, menu items and owner Ron Vale was on hand to share his appreciation at the Cohasset police and fire stations.

Now open for lunch, The Corner Stop offers both a fun, family-friendly environment.

CHARITY

comprised of several Cohasset residents who enjoy helping their community — and having a good time doing it.

The event benefits Interfaith Social Services (ISS), which strives to improve the lives of families in need. Since 1997, the gala has raised $1 million for local families. Founded in 1947, the Quincy-based organization is one of oldest nonprofits on the South Shore and serves around 18,000 people a year through its food pantry, according to director Rick Doane.

ISS volunteers put in some 20,000 hours per year.

"We're a community helping our neighbors in need," said Doane.

While the name "interfaith" drums up religious imagery and was founded by church leaders, the organization's calling is a social mission to aid poverty-stricken folks of all backgrounds and beliefs.

The gala supporting the charity's efforts is 16 years strong. This year's event has a carnival theme and features celebrity chefs cooking, as well as games, entertainment, the "Community Her of the Year" award, and silent and live auctions for prize packages at various price points, from vacation getaways to an at-home dinner cooked by chef Paul Wahlberg.

Business that have donated prize packages for auction include JetBlue, Dunkin' Brands, Chatham Bars Inn, Jim Beam, Playdipity, Willow Salon and Spa, Red Lion Inn, Fresh Feast, Corner Stop, Cohasset Sports Complex, and Good Sport.

As fun and festive as the holiday gala is each year, it's about more than having a night out. The gala is the biggest fundraiser for Interfaith, and helps the program continue to provide for the families it serves.

Which is especially crucial during the holiday season, said Doane.

"It's critical this time of year to get that funding in to purchase food and other items to make sure these clients are fed during the time of year they need it most, when they're struggling to pay for the heating oil and to make ends meet with Thanksgiving, Christmas and other expenses.

"The gala is key to raising money to help our clients throughout the holiday season and the year," Doane continued.

The volunteers who plan the gala are happy to lend a hand.

Cohasset's Greg Wallingford of New England Schooner co-chairs Feed the Hungry with NECN reporter Ally Donnelly.

Donnelly has spent four years on the gala committee and started co-chairing two years ago.

"The first year they needed an emcee and I agreed to do it, but once I saw how amazingly dedicated all of the volunteers are, and the scope of the work they do in my own back yard, I was hooked," Donnelly said.

Wallingford said he joined the committee after attending the event two years ago and deciding he wanted to be more involved. He even got his family involved with ISS, with his daughter recently volunteering at Interfaith along with her entire Girl Scout troop.

"We're really involved with Interfaith Social Services. It's a year-round commitment and we absolutely love doing it," Wallingford said of his family.

Planning the gala and seeing it to fruition is "a lot of fun," he added, although he and his fellow volunteers want to emphasize the true purpose of the event.

"We want people to have a great time, but remind them about the event and why it's important," said Wallingford.

"The gala is our biggest fundraising effort of the entire year," said Donnelly. "This event helps get Christmas presents for families who can't afford to put anything under the tree... It raises money so people don't have to choose between eating and medication... It puts food on the table for kids for whom a big night is having tri-colored pasta over regular spaghetti. It's not a huge effort by the community to come to an event like this, but the difference is incredible.

"The response we've gotten from the community is stunning," Donnelly added. "Our live and silent auction items this year are insane; you could get two hundred dollars to a Boston restaurant," adding that chef dinners, hotel stays, theater tickets, signed Red Sox, Patriots and Bruins memorabilia are up for auction.

"You don't even need to go Christmas shopping; you just need to come to the gala," Donnelly continued. And, of course, it's all for a good cause. "From the biggest donations to the smallest twenty-dollar Dunkin' Donuts gift card, everything matters. It's neighbor-to-neighbor making a difference in your own back yard."

In affluent Cohasset, and other similar communities, it can be shocking to learn that there are residents in dire need. Cohasset has its own food pantry that serves many families in town.

"No matter where you live, there's poverty," said Doane. "We don't know what's going on behind people's doors and the walls of their home. Just because their house might look nice doesn't mean they're not struggling to survive."

Wallingford said that Doane's words have resonated with him.

"One thing Rick said to me a long time ago that stuck with me is, you never know who's going to walk through that door and need help, whether it's to be fed, or for eviction foreclosure or crisis counseling. There are a number of families in town that take advantage of the food pantry in Cohasset," said Wallingford. "It's hard to wrap your head around that; you don't really think about that sort of thing. But if you're there and you're helping, you get a sense of what's going on; these people actually need help."

Charlotte Bodell of Cohasset also joined the committee last year after attending the gala.

"The gala is a fun opportunity to get together with people in the community for a good purpose," Bodell said. "With this particular event, you're spending the same amount of money you would to go out to dinner, except the money is going to help people in our own backyards... They're our friends and neighbors, and they could be ourselves; you never know what situation you're going to be in."

This is the philosophy at Interfaith — that poverty or other unfortunate circumstances could befall anyone at any time. There's no judgment against a person in need.

"There's nothing wrong with asking for help," said Doane. "Everyone needs it at one time or another."

"People frequently don't know their neighbor's situation or what trouble they're going through," Bodell added. "They could be going through something very personal and may not be comfortable sharing their situation. I think people don't always recognize what's going on, but when you're in a position to give, it is important to do that. You never know when you might be there.

"But that's what a community is," Bodell continued. "We all get together and help one another when we're down."

UPDATE

Red Lion Inn hearing held off

The Red Lion Inn has responded to a request for information from the police department regarding a recent alleged noise violation. The Board of Selectmen scheduled a public hearing on the matter for Tuesday, Dec. 3.

The board plans to address a letter from the inn's attorney during their meeting on Monday, Dec. 2 and will determine whether the hearing should go forward.

Police Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon was appointed by the Board of Selectmen as a license enforcement agent to review a Sept. 28 alleged violation of the inn's entertainment license. However, Lennon reported Wednesday, Nov. 13 that 16 days after requesting information from the inn, the inn had yet to comply with the request.

According to Acting Police Chief William Quigley, the inn "has been cooperating with the investigation," and he expects to receive a report from Lennon before next week.

Osgood."

The superintendent explained that while the "town piece" of the security funding was granted in January, it wasn't part of the school budget that spring.

"We expected the doors to come sooner, but as spring came around nothing had been budgeted. The grant has arrived, so we can start to do the changes," Cataldo said. "Now we can move forward... It has been passed."

The system the schools plan to utilize is LobbyGuard, an automated sign-in kiosk that will change the way visitors sign in and out of the school buildings.

"We really need a system where people can't enter until people put their information in and get their tab," said Cataldo. "LobbyGuard is an excellent piece."

School committee member Helene Lieb urged Cataldo to communicate this to the advisory board. "They know about the security grant."

"They also gave us money to implement," added school committee member Jeanne Astino.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that there has been an analysis over the past year on how to "provide better protection for your school students." He said he has been discussing the matter with Cataldo and the police department, and will update the Board of Selectmen during an upcoming meeting.

The schools are also looking to upgrade technology. The town and school's shared Chief Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, presented his latest tech plan to the Capital Budget Committee last week and will give the same presentation at an upcoming school committee meeting.

Think small

After fighting the crowds of fellow deal-seekers on Black Friday and before checking out the online sales on Cyber Monday, holiday shoppers are urged to shop small - as in small local businesses - once again this holiday season.
